Waves of Political Troubles Finally Crest in India

By William L. Ryan, AP

Indian democracy is poised on the brink of calamity.

Washed by angry seas of political, economic and social trouble, the nation of nearly 600 million may be witnessing a progressive breakdown of the machinery of a system that Indians proudly hoped to make a model and inspiration for the developing world.

It's not by any means beyond rescue, but the problems are so massive, so seemingly insoluble, as to arouse deep worry whether any such free-wheeling system could survive in such an atmosphere.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, 57, daughter of the nation's first prime minister, and the dominant Indian political figure for the last nine years, inherited a tradition that went back to the patient power of passive resistance that brought independence from Britain nearly 28 years ago.

Big Crackdown
 Last Thursday she suddenly launched a big crackdown on her political opposition. Arrested were, by government account, 676 politicians, many of them once close allies of her late father, Jawaharlal Nehru, himself an outstanding early exponent of civil disobedience to unpopular rule.

The reason for the crackdown: fear of civil disobedience in protest against India's manifold woes, including widespread corruption at local and state levels, and fear of protests aimed at forcing Mrs. Gandhi's resignation following her conviction on charges of illegal election practices.

It was a startlingly, ironic and authoritarian turn. Behind it there seemed a desperation generated by troubles that never grew less, always got bigger and bigger until, evidently in the prime minister's mind, it all threatened to bring down the whole system.

Mrs. Gandhi had professed an ambition to popularize a philosophy of self reliance, to lessen dependence on foreign aid, to apply modern methods to agriculture, to redistribute wealth, to spread social justice, but her critics saw her the prisoner of empty slogans about goals impossible to achieve.

Bungling, Laxity

The critics, their attack recently unrelenting and punishing, saw bungling, laxity and incompetence in the bureaucracy, widespread and pervasive government corruption, waning moral standards, and a developing governmental paralysis, for all of which they gave her a generous share of blame.

A wave of disillusion seemed to grip the vast nation, not long after the fading of the euphoria that had been generated by a military victory over Pakistan in the Bangladesh war of 1971.

As that war ended, Mrs. Gandhi's popularity had peaked, but it declined precipitously in the last two years as rising popular expectations collided with what seemed a crisis of leadership and produced an explosion.

Things were never good in India — just bad in varying degrees. The big problems, as always, are poverty, overpopulation and food, and on top of them are those of inflation, labor and student unrest, industrial stagnation and massive and floundering bureaucracy.

India is a third the size of the United States but has almost twice the population. About 75% live in more than a half million villages, speaking 15 major languages and many minor ones including dialects.

The British wielded colonial power for 190 years before independence in 1947.

That independence was hastened by the civil disobedience campaign of Mohandas Gandhi, no relation to the present prime minister.

Besides Mrs. Gandhi's father, two other of the Mahatma's prominent disciples had been Jayaprakash Narayan, now 72, a socialist leader, and Morarji Desai, now 80, leader of the breakaway "old" Congress party that denounces Mrs. Gandhi's policies. Both were among those reported arrested Thursday.

The first two decades after independence were years of frustration, years of political ferment, spreading food problems, nagging inefficiency and apathy in much of the nation's industry, ever-growing unemployment.

India's population is growing at the rate of 13 million a year. Nearly a third of Indians have an annual income under $200 a year compared to a per capita income of some $4,700 in the U.S.

In the state of Bihar it's only about $50 a year. That is one of the key states in the current crisis. Almost four fifths of the nation's children are undernourished. Almost three quarters of all Indians are illiterate.

The governing Congress party's democracy has a socialist bent, but much private wealth and privilege remains. At the same time the private sector is badly inhibited by a dizzying array of controls.

India is a land where often, it seems, nothing works. A massive bureaucracy armed with rubber stamps seems to get in the way of economic progress.

India TV Fire Called Sabotage

New Delhi (UPI) — Fire suspected of being "an act of sabotage" by opponents of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi gutted the television film library in the All-India Radio Building in downtown New Delhi Saturday.

The opposition has accused the government-owned All-India Radio of being biased in favor of the embattled Mrs. Gandhi.

"Police suspect it to be an act of sabotage in pursuance of plans prepared by opposition parties for launching an offensive against the government June 29," an Air News bulletin said.

The reference was to plans announced by opposition political party leaders for a week-long series of protest marches beginning Sunday demanding Mrs. Gandhi's resignation.

Many of the opposition politicians are among the nearly 900 persons the government had reported arrested since Mrs. Gandhi proclaimed a state of emergency — an unprecedented action in the peacetime history of India since it won independence in 1947.

Mrs. Gandhi had gone on Air Thursday to announce her crackdown on political opponents who had demanded her resignation because of her conviction of election irregularities in the 1971 campaign. She ordered the arrests on grounds of national security.

Opposition sources estimated the number of persons arrested in the nationwide raids at about 3,500.

In a move to strengthen Mrs. Gandhi's crackdown on her critics and opponents, the government Saturday suspended five basic individual rights guaranteed by the Constitution.

President Fakhruddin Ali Ahmad ordered the suspension and said it applied to "any person, including a foreigner."

The order signed by Ahmad suspends the right of individuals to place before any court matters pertaining to life, property, equality before the law and equal protection under the laws of India, and the freedom from arrest or detention without being first informed of the grounds for the arrest.

While firemen battled the flames, neither Air's radio nor television service — India's only broadcast media — made any reference to the fire.

It took an estimated 100 firemen four hours to bring the blaze under control while an equal number of police, some in riot-helmets and carrying bamboo poles and shields designed for crowd control, kept about 200 spectators away from the building.

In the absence of newspapers since Thursday, Air had been virtually the only source of information for Indians on the situation in this country of about 600 million. Papers resumed publication Saturday.

Press censorship was imposed under the decree proclaimed by Mrs. Gandhi to combat what she called a "widespread conspiracy" against the government.

Tom Sawyer Becomes Young Feminist Issue

Hannibal, Mo. (AP) — The girls said it wasn't fair. The mayor said it wasn't his fault. And a mother expressed confusion at the whole situation.

That's the way things went at the suddenly controversial Tom Sawyer Days Fence Painting Contest Saturday.

While boys dressed like Mark Twain's fictional character furiously raced to cover a fence with "whitewash," two 10-year-old girls and their friends quietly protested with their own paintings-picket signs.

It all began when the Hannibal Jaycees refused to allow Jill Quattrocchi and Janine Range to enter the contest, which traditionally has been open only to boys 10 to 13 years old.

So Jill and Janine decided to take matters — and signs — into their own hands.

"We're not scared of bugs, frogs, dead cats or bats, we just wanna paint slats," read one placard. "Tom Sawyer liked girls, Jaycees don't," said another. "Don't give us the brushoff, give us the brush," a third demanded.

"The United States will be 200 years old next year," said Jill as she watched the competition. "It's about time we all had complete rights."

"I just wanted to enter to show the boys we could paint just as well," added Janine. "I'm not mad at the boys, just the Jaycees, but I could beat the boys anytime."

Hannibal Mayor Henry Glascock shrugged when asked about the situation. "I'd prefer the girls be allowed to enter, but it's not up to me at all."

Mrs. Bill Quattrocchi, Jill's mother, looked at some of the long-haired contestants and smiled.

"I'm not so sure some of those there already aren't girls," she said. "They all look alike to me."

Jaycees President Dave Ebbing said the group will consider revising the no-girl rule at its July meeting, but the girls still plan to picket the national fence painting contest and luncheon July 4.

Tension Never Leaves Pine Ridge Area

By Patrick J. Little

Pine Ridge, S.D. (UPI) — The Pine Ridge Oglala Sioux Indian reservation is like a fitful volcano.

Each time it erupts into violence, the people who must reside and make a living here hope it will be the last. So far, they have been disappointed.

Each new incidence of violence is never limited to a small area — it affects virtually every person on the reservation, which is the second largest in the United States.

Even when there are no murders or shootings, tension lies just below the surface.

One Pine Ridge resident said, "The political and social economic tensions on the reservation have roots that can be traced back to the landing on Plymouth Rock. The result on most, if not all of South Dakota's six Indian reservations, is a situation so vastly complex that a solution may never be possible."

Officials have openly admitted that the Indian situation ranges from disputes over land rights among the various bloodlines of Indians to political corruption at different government levels.

One Bureau of Indian Affairs official showed his obvious disgust with Congress and his superiors by saying, "Zit's a political football. They have no idea what is going on out here."

The frustrations also are obvious in the main body of Indians who are caught in the middle.

Upon hearing that federal law officers had killed an Indian at Oglala Thursday in a shootout in which two FBI agents also were killed, one young Indian reacted angrily.

"What right did they have to send white men in to kill Indians?" he asked. "They're just a bunch of honkies anyway."

He then left the house.

An elderly Indian who has lived at Pine Ridge for nearly 50 years said the strife-between bad bloods and mixed bloods, the American Indian Movement and tribal authorities, the tribe and state and federal governments — has left individuals virtual islands.

"It has resulted in families taking different sides — brother against brother, father against son and even wife against husband," he said.

Poverty is widespread on the reservation. Federal aid, amounting roughly to $10,000 annually a person, feeds the appetites of the BIA and tribal bureaucracies leaving little money left for the people it was meant for.

The result is welfare roles for most of the Indians living on the Pine Ridge, or Yankton, or Rosebud or Lower Brule reservations in South Dakota.

Poverty was one of the reasons for Thursday's shooting, an Indian said.

"What did they have to lose when they had nothing before but welfare?" said the young man.

Without the ability to mold solutions, frustrations are vented in other directions by the young men — such as demonstrations to protest the appearance of outside authorities reservation land.

Barriers in Little Rock Remain After 18 Years

By Marc Wilson

Little Rock (AP) — It's been nearly 18 years since a handful of black children — "The Little Rock Nine" — entered Central High School under the protection of 11,000 paratroopers and National Guardsmen.

The nation's eyes have turned away from Little Rock since. Central High has a black principal and more than half its students are black.

But it also has two "campus supervisors" — essentially unarmed security men — who guard the main entrance and patrol with walkie-talkies. The school, indeed the entire school district, suffers from an abnormal scholastic crime rate.

Shot to Death

Last November a black junior high student was shot to death by another black student during school hours.

In December, authorities found a black student with a .22 caliber revolver tucked in his belt.

In January, William Robinson, 18, white, was expelled. He brought a sawed-off .410 shotgun to school, school officials said, and showed it to black students as a warning.

In March, two young black students were expelled from Central after a fight in which, school officials said, a gun was used to threaten other black students.

In the same month, Waddell Smith, 14, was expelled after threatening students with a gun during a fight involving blacks and whites on a school bus. The young black, said the bus driver, fired two shots in the air after leaving the bus.

In the same month, Paul Vines, a 14-year-old eighth grader at Horace Mann

Junior High was expelled for carrying a gun. Vines is white.

"I don't ever want to go back to Horace Mann," he said. "Things are really bad there."

He protested that he hadn't intended to use the gun. He was only, at the behest of a friend, trying to sell it. "It turned out to be stolen," he said. "My friend figured the best place to sell the gun would be at school."

Student Threat

And in May, Larry Barnes, 15, was expelled from Dunbar Junior High after he threatened a white student with a small caliber pistol.

"I did it because this Anglo was hassling me," Barnes said. "They pistol-whipped another guy the week before and they said they were going to get me next."

Barnes, a black, vowed he never would get into "bad trouble like this again" because he wants to play basketball in school. But nevertheless, he said, "There are plenty of guns and knives at Dunbar. If you'd check through all the lockers you'd find three or four guns and loads of knives."

All of this in less than two decades since Little Rock became in 1967, the Continued: Page 2A, Col. 1

MORE ON NOISE POLLUTION

People just don't understand that the most common cause of a hearing loss is from extreme noise sustained over a period of time. However, we must not forget that infection, colds, allergies and heredity contribute to hearing losses also.

Do you realize that hearing losses are our Nation's No. 1 physical problem (which in turn can cause many mental problems), yet, less than one out of hundreds have their hearing checked on an annual basis.

Everyone loses a little of their hearing each year after 20 to 25. We suggest you know how well you now hear — and learn how to protect the hearing you have.

Call me for a free appointment and let us show you how MAICO audiometric equipment can tell you a story. I'm at 415 Sharp Bldg., Lincoln. Phone 432-8597.

Apollo Soyuz Designs Announced

Designs of the two U.S. commemorative stamps honoring the Apollo Soyuz space mission have been announced.

The U.S. stamps, one of U.S. design and the other of Soviet design, will be issued on the day of the launches, now scheduled for July 15. The same two designs are being used by both nations on stamps that will be identical with those issued in the other nation except for language and denomination.

For comparison purposes, the photograph shows both the U.S. and Soviet stamps. However, the Soviet stamps are being released by the Soviet Union and will not be available through U.S. Postal Service facilities.

The denomination of both of the U.S. stamps is 10 cents. Both Soviet stamps are 12 kopecks in denomination.

The U.S. design is by space artist Robert McCall, of Paradise

Valley, Ariz. The U.S.S.R. design is by Soviet artist Anatoly M. Aksamit, best known as an aviation artist.

The U.S. stamps are being distributed to post offices in panes of 24 se-tenant stamps (12 of each design). The designs are alternated on the pane both horizontally and vertically, making both horizontal and vertical pairs available.

The image area of a single stamp is 2.44 x 1.05 inches, or 62.0 x 26.7 millimeters. The Soviet stamps are approximately the same size. The colors of the U.S. stamp are yellow, red, gray, cyan, blue and black. There will be six plate numbers.

First day cancellation requests should be addressed to "Apollo Soyuz Stamps, Postmaster, Kennedy Space Center, FL 32815." The cost is ten cents per stamp to be affixed to the self-addressed envelopes which must accompany orders. Remittance should be by check or money order, instead of cash. Postage stamps will not be accepted as payment. Because of the size of the stamps, the return address should be written low and well to the left. Customers who request both stamps on the same cover must remit 20 cents for each pair. These stamps will be affixed one above the other, requiring 2.5 x 2.6 inches of clear space in the upper right corner of the envelope.

Bing, Kathy Gap Unique

By Irv Kupcinet

(c) 1975 Chicago Sun-Times

There's a unique generation gap in Bing Crosby's family, according to McCall's. It's between septuagenarian Bing and his 35-year-old wife Kathryn. He comes on strong for the old-fashioned virtues of marriage, while Kathryn supports the young people "who are learning to live together on mature terms before they decide to marry and have children." They probably both agree on one subject: orange juice.

Norman Lear, TV's most successful and prolific producer, has his heart set on a sitcom starring a magician.

Hollow Bicentennial

Boston (UPI) — "Our bicentennial will be a hollow celebration if women are not granted full equality under law," Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., said Saturday, in urging passage of the federal Equal Rights Amendment.

Ms. Holtzman's speech opened the second day of the second annual National Women's Political Caucus. The event drew 2,000 participants from 44 states for evaluation of their political muscle in workshops and meetings.

American Asked to Quit

Rome (AP) — The fledgling U.N. World Food Council wrapped up its first negotiating session Saturday with Third World delegates calling for the resignation of the secretariat directed by John Hannah, an American.

They claimed that the secretariat, directed by the 73-year-old Hannah, formerly of the U.S. Agency for International Development, was heavily weighted in favor of rich Western nations.

Prison Heads Dislike Proposal

Washington (UPI) — Prison administrators generally oppose mandatory prison sentences like those proposed by President Gerald Ford and others to deter crime, according to a survey released Saturday.

Seventy-two percent of corrections chiefs interviewed in all 50 states oppose sentencing offenders to mandatory terms without chance of parole, according to Corrections Magazine.

The poll was taken before Ford's crime program was unveiled more than a week ago.

Bulgarian Hijacks Plane

Salonica, Greece (AP) — A pistol-waving man hijacked a Bulgarian airliner carrying 48 persons on a domestic flight Saturday, forced the pilot to fly to Salonica, then surrendered and asked Greek authorities for political asylum, officials said.

Greek authorities identified the hijacker as Ivan Takov, a 24-year-old construction engineer. They said there were no injuries during the hijacking.

Portuguese Set Up Panel

Lisbon (UPI) — Portugal's military rulers emerged from a night-long session Saturday and announced they had formed a steamlined 11-man central commission to make recommendations for running the country.

The 30-man Revolutionary Council also announced the establishment of a paramilitary police force to deal with civil crimes. No details of the extent of the new police force's authority were published.

Sanitation Workers on Job

New York (AP) — Sanitation workers in two garages on Manhattan's East Side returned to work Saturday and began picking up tons of trash that had accumulated on curbs.

The walkout began as a protest over the planned firing of 2,900 workers in an economy cutback.

Europeans Predict Economic Doldrums

Brussels (UPI) — Those rosy Washington predictions of economic recovery are producing a gloomy echo in Europe.

Not all European experts agree with the Ford Administration that the U.S. recession is ending. And many think Western Europe will stay deep in recession for months — a half-year or more — after U.S. recovery begins.

Some fear that the cure might generate a new cycle of inflation that would be worse than the disease.

Leading the doomsayers is West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, whose nation has weathered the recession better than any other.

"As long as the pessimism of the American economy remains as marked as it is today, any hope of a reversal is almost out of the question," Schmidt said recently.

"I do not understand the optimistic sounds coming from the United States," Dutch Premier Joop Den Uyl said. "I do not see a recovery at hand."

Austrian economist Horst Knapp said no matter what happens in America, "European recovery will certainly be at least half a year behind the United States."

And Swiss National Bank

Director Fritz Leutwiler warned of "paying for recovery with a new wave of inflation."

The gloom is not universal. Danish Premier Anker Joergensen, for example, told his Parliament he expects Denmark's deep slump to ease by autumn.

But what worries experts is that the powerful West German economy, which should be the bellwether for a European recovery, is still in the doldrums, with total production expected to fall this year.

And if Germany is grim, Britain and Italy see little hope at all.

"The situation is very grave and it is useless to offer comfortable optimism," said Italian Industry Minister Carlo Donat Cattin. Italy has a million persons out of work, industrial output down 11.7% since last year and an inflation rate of 19.7%.

In Britain, unemployment is expected to reach 1.5 million by next spring and inflation is rising at an annual rate of 25%.

The Bank of France says there is no sign the slump has ended.

Europe still seems oversupplied with goods, housing and cars. Inventories have not fallen as they have in the United States. Savings remain high, despite urging to consumers by Schmidt and others to spend.

Cichlids Arrive in Style

Cichlids bound for the 1975 National Cichlid Convention at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education next weekend are to begin arriving at the Lincoln and Omaha airports Wednesday.

They'll be traveling air freight, packed in styrofoam boxes filled with plastic bags of water and oxygen.

Cichlids are a type of tropical fish. The angel fish is perhaps the most popular.

The three-day convention, which begins Friday, is being sponsored by the Lincoln Advanced Fish Hobbyists with help from other Nebraska and Iowa fish enthusiasts.

The program will include 25 speakers and 25 seminars. The speakers include biologists and ichthyologists from several universities. The seminars will cover topics from photography to care and feeding of fish.

Trophies and ribbons will be awarded in eight classes. Best of Show, Best of Old World and Best of New World fish also will receive trophies.

After the fish have been judged, most will be sold at auction according to Rod Vetter, finance chairman of the convention.

'Pick & Shovel' Wins Award

The Pick & Shovel, monthly bulletin of the Lincoln Gem and Mineral Club, won a national award of achievement as one of the ten best such bulletins in the United States. The award was presented at the American Federation of Mineral Societies national show in Denver. Evelyn Ulrich is editor of The Pick & Shovel.

Eureka! Was Special Half Dollar

By Joe Planas
Special Writer

This year is the 14th anniversary of a U.S. half dollar now worth about $40 or $50 in uncirculated condition.

It's the San Diego-California-Pacific Exposition commemorative 50-cent piece, minted both in 1935 and 1936.

The 1935 specimen was coined at the San Francisco mint; the '36 piece was minted in Denver.

observation tower and State of California building at the Exposition. The mint mark "S" appears under "In God We Trust" at the base of the coin. The inscription "California-Pacific International Exposition" is lettered around the coin.

Approximately 70,132 of these halves were minted in '35, the following year almost half that number (30,092) were also minted.

"Eureka" is supposedly an utterance that means "I have found it".

Archimedes is legendarily credited with its first use. Ole Arch is supposed to have let it slip from his lips upon discovering the means for determining, by specific gravity, the amount of base metal in King Hiero's golden crown.

War Beneath the Pacific

Tingling Political Suspense

Silent Victory: The U.S. Submarine War Against Japan. By Clay Blair Jr.; Lippincott.

There's a double irony in the title of this history of the submarine war against Japan. It not only records the performance of our underwater, or silent, service in the Pacific war, but discloses a host of facts, inspiring and disquieting, concerning that performance which until now have gone unpublicized.

Not all of these facts are complimentary. Blair cites data from unpublished official records that demonstrate inexperience, inadequacy, inefficiency of equipment, and tactical errors by commanders that have hitherto been kept under wraps.

World War II in the Pacific caught the U.S. submarine service as flatfooted as it did the surface navy at Pearl Harbor. Blair — who had access to official documents, interviewed scores of submariners and himself served on underwater duty — documents his narrative with a wealth of facts, dates, maps and photographs that will make his book an essential work in its field for years to come.

When he tells us that our Pacific-based submarine commanders were excessively cautious, that their tactics were outmoded, that bold, aggressive officers were held back or reprimanded by older, conservative, by-the-book officers, he is making public what has long been known inside the silent service. For example, it took a year and a half of war before effective command tactics could be evolved and officers with a good grasp of submarine tactics placed in command.

Blair breaks ground in other directions as well. From earlier naval histories of the Pacific war, we know that Washington code breakers, led by the late William F. Friedman and his wife, had succeeded in breaking the Japanese naval code. Blair expatiates revealingly on this subject. According to him, the U.S. Navy had its own superb corps of code breakers (including a brilliant woman) who were able to break every code Tokyo could devise.

These were among the unsung heroes of World War II, not all of whom, we learn, were appropriately recognized after hostilities ceased. Through their labors, U.S. submarines were tipped off in advance on Japanese naval movements and could lie in wait for their targets. The shooting down of Adm. Yamamoto while on an inspection trip to Rabaul, for example, was directly attributable to the code breakers.

Blair gives credit where credit is due. After 1943, our submarines performed admirably for the most part. But their tactics lagged far behind the wolf packs of German U-boats in the Atlantic. Moreover, their aggregate kill of Japanese surface craft was relatively small compared to the toll taken by the U-boats.

Nevertheless, the damage inflicted on the Japanese was severe. Blair estimates that a force representing less than 2% of the U.S. Navy accounted for 55% of Japan's maritime losses.

Blair is equally frank in his criticism. American torpedoes, supposedly the most lethal in the world, had a high proportion of duds that exploded prematurely or not at all. This was corrected in time, but it must have caused anguish to many a commander after a carefully targeted shot. With nuclear subs now our first line of underwater defense, one hopes this is one error that will not be repeated.

Blair believes that the United States could have throttled Japan into surrender with a properly organized submarine blockade of shipping. Possibly. As it was, two atomic bombs quickly turned the trick before the Soviet Union could effectively enter the war against Japan and claim occupation rights.

This book, with its mountain of detailed, mostly unpublished data on the silent victory, is destined to become the standard history of the submarine war in the Pacific. Though long overdue, it is no less valuable for its wealth of illuminating revelations.

(c) 1975 John Barkham Reviews

The Gargoyle Conspiracy. By Marvin H. Albert; Doubleday.

If you thought The Day of the Jackal was at the height of international, spine-tingling, spy-oriented fiction, wait till you read The Gargoyle Conspiracy, an even more gripping thriller.

It's one of those books that keep you up long into the night. The pace and intrigue — and, most certainly, the writing — make it nearly impossible to put down.

It's worth it.

Marvin Albert has fashioned a novel of political suspense that is as current as this very minute.

His sense of pace is matchless. Albert tells a tale of terror matching a clever assassin against an international cadre of lawmen. It is a story that is as frightening as it is current.

Be prepared to travel throughout Europe with an unglamorous hero as he attempts to prevent a slaughter by Arab terrorists who are well led, well financed and totally committed to committing a horrible political crime.

This one seems sure to end up as a major movie.

Stories To Remember

The three short stories in the spring issue of Prairie Schooner dominate the poetry, article and reviews.

"Austin" is a town and a puppy. It is packed full of colloquialisms, and the voice of the protagonist seems to project right off the page. The story by Catherine Petroski tells of a young girl, her carney boyfriend and their first steps toward maturity.

"The Secret," a long story by George Draper Jr., takes us somewhere north where the rich folk live. This story of two young boys and their search for the family "secret" keeps the reader guessing and hanging on until the very last word.

The third short story, "Uncle Albert" by Edith Griffin, is a thoughtful tale of "a casualty of the pre-socialist era in England."

One of the 16 poems in the Schooner stands out in particular. "Uprooting" by Judith W. Steinbergh combines words and sounds and a steady flow to make more than just the average good poem.

Another highlight of this issue is Robert Pack's "Maxims in Limbo." They reflect on a man's life in thoughts and feelings that seem to vary from the wry wit of Mark Twain to the metaphysical tones of Ralph Waldo Emerson.

—Dick Herman

The issue also includes an article by Charles Stubblefield: "The Great Circle: Whitman's 'Passage to India.'" Stubblefield is an instructor of writing and literature at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Great Plains Theater

Footlights on the Prairie. By Jere C. Mickel; North Star Press.

A former Lincolnite, the author of this book knows whereof he writes. Jere Mickel, now professor emeritus at Milliken University in Decatur, Ill., has a theatrical background.

He spent eight years traveling with repertory companies and has worked in speech and drama departments in various high schools and colleges.

When he retired from Milliken in 1970, he was professor of speech and chairman of the department.

He describes the tent rep show as "a frontier theater, and even after the frontier had disappeared, it still maintained its hold upon the people of the smaller middle-western cities and towns."

Mickel has done an enormous amount of research on the tent shows, which differed from Chautauqua in that the performing company actually consorted on plays.

There are some very interesting illustrations in Footlights on the Prairie, and Mickel credits Mrs. Walter Savidge of Wayne "for many valuable pictures."

He chronicles the history of rep shows in all forms from 1848 through 1940.

The book is filled with information that is well indexed. For those interested in theater history, it will provide a mine of information.

Political Winds

The Making of the New Majority Party. By William A. Rusher; Sheed and Ward.

Now is the time for all good social conservatives and economic conservatives to come to the aid of what could (and should) be America's next major political party: the Independence party.

That, in short, in oversimplified short, is the thesis here. Does it work? Can it work?

Conservative writer-publisher William A. Rusher, not a kind of intellectual who favors dispassionate or balanced analysis, develops an interesting historical matrix for the new party's birth — which he intensely encourages, of course.

Rusher surely has some poll-book empiricism on his side in claiming that the cultural-political tide he champions has been running — measurably — for almost a generation in presidential politics. And that is the kind of politics Rusher appears mainly to be talking about.

Three Democrats have been elected president since 1944. But not since then, if one examines fairly closely, have the essential coalitions which formed the all-conquering Democratic party of Franklin Roosevelt been on a symbiotic course. Dixie's walkout from the 1948 Democratic convention opened a break never to seal.

Social conservatism, which so marks the life-style of Southern whites, no longer has a home in the Democratic party, Rusher contends.

What passes for Republicanism in the White House is brushed off as superficial. The obvious appraisal of Eisenhower is one of disappointment. As for "activist" Richard Nixon, well, he was hardly a "serious conservative." Rusher's compass needle locates only two real conservatives as GOP nominees all these postwar years: Barry Goldwater and Spiro Agnew.

Turning from ballot trends, Rusher is convinced millions of nominal Democrats are repulsed by their party's liberal slant. For economic conservatives, the Republican party holds out no real future, either.

Skilled debater Rusher asserts the basic American division is not between haves and the have-nots. He sees it in this form:

"A new economic division pits the producers — businessmen, manufacturers, hard-hats, blue-collar workers and farmers — against a new and power class of non-producers, comprised of the liberal verbalist elite and a semi-permanent welfare constituency . . . It is this new economic and social cleavage that has produced the imposing (though not yet politically united) conservative majority detected by Dr. Gallup; and it is the ineradicable presence in the Republican Party of a liberal minority — a minority unable to dominate the GOP itself but always able to force it to compromise toward the liberal positions rather than away from them — that makes the Republican Party so spectacularly unfitted to be the political vector of the conservative majority in the American society."

Those who take the easy judgment and scoff at Rusher's essay too quickly forget how past mass movements either doomed existing majority political parties (the Whigs) or transformed them (the Populists and the Democrats).

At the same time, the easy-spot weakness in the case is the fact that while millions of American identify themselves as economic conservatives, they frequently vote just the other way on pocketbook issues affecting them.

New Road in Mental Health

With the U.S. Supreme Court directing traffic, our society embarked last week on a new road in its attitudes toward and handling of the mentally ill. There can be little doubt it is the proper road, but one could wish the court had provided a more detailed road map.

What the court said, essentially, was that a mentally ill person has rights like anyone else, that he or she cannot be simply locked up because society chooses to do that.

In a Florida case, the court ruled unanimously that — in Justice Potter Stewart's words — "a finding of 'mental illness' alone cannot justify a state's locking a person up against his will and keeping him indefinitely in simple custodial confinement . . . There is no constitutional basis for confining mentally ill persons involuntarily if they are dangerous to no one and can live safely in freedom."

What this means, almost certainly, is that some citizens now in mental hospitals in America must be released, or at the very least that the hospitals will have to do a better job of treating them, providing them more than "simple custodial confinement."

Dr. Frank Menolascino, University of Nebraska Medical Center psychiatrist, estimates the decision may affect 500 of the 2,000 persons confined in this state's institutions. Not that they will be turned out, necessarily, but "we'll have to justify why they were committed in the first place." No doubt similar reassessments are taking place in virtually every state.

While it clearly struck a blow for the proposition that the mentally ill are full citizens, the Supreme Court left unanswered several questions.

What of the patient receiving not just custodial care but adequate treatment who still wants out? Must he be freed? And what constitutes "adequate treatment"? What of voluntary patients — are they entitled to more than custodial care?

What are the rights of a person judged dangerous to himself or others? Presumably he could be kept confined, but if so what are his rights to treatment? What of the criminal who ends up in a hospital instead of a prison?

Obviously the high court will need to say more about a number of points in this broad area.

But for now the court has already said enough to set in motion what could be a revolution in mental health care and commitment across the nation. States must review their processes for involuntary confinement. And ultimately — if one extrapolates from the court finding — states must guarantee "adequate treatment" in public mental institutions, even though that term has yet to be defined satisfactorily in law. Yes, it could be a revolution — and an expensive one.

For Nebraska, the ruling plainly means that the Legislature next year must resume work on revising mental commitment procedures. For some time it has been apparent to many that the present law, vague and lacking in procedural guidelines, is constitutionally flawed. LB159, introduced by the Public Health and Welfare Committee, sought to correct the flaws. This year's legislative session ended without action on it, but the bill could offer a starting point for work that must be done in 1976.

Significantly, LB159 aimed not only to improve commitment procedures but to establish a "patients' bill of rights," including the right to "prompt, adequate and continuing evaluation and treatment." From the start that provision struck many as the most far-reaching part of the bill. It looms even larger now in light of the Supreme Court decision.

The road the court has directed our society onto may not yet be unclouded and probably will prove difficult. But few Americans can truly disagree with what the justices found.

After all, we are all healthy or sick only in degree. Not many families are fortunate enough to go through life without some member at least being brushed by one of the multitude of conditions we class as mental or emotional illness. So the court is talking about all of us when it says there are no second-class citizens in this regard, that we all share the desire — and should share the right — to reasonable freedom and control of our lives.

Where Roots Are Important

After tons of moralistic preachments lathered upon an offending United States all these years by India, Yankees would be within bounds cocking eyebrows at New Delhi now.

As of this writing, the official number of arrests of political dissenters ordered by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government is put at 850 or so. Informal reports say the total is considerably higher. Censorship has been imposed. Fundamental rights guaranteed India's 700 million people by the giant nation's constitution are suspended.

All of this in the name of putting down what Mrs. Gandhi describes as an extraordinary emergency, a grave internal threat to the life of India's 28-year-old democracy. Of parenthetical irony is the government's employment of a detention law growing directly from the British colonial system of imposed rule.

Half a globe away, it's about the easiest thing in the world to sneer at India's turn to authoritarianism, which has less to do with the prime minister's personal court troubles than with India's overpopulation pressures and deteriorating economic conditions. They seem more the root of the malaise.

Perhaps there is a lesson in this: Democracy is not an especially sturdy flower where its roots are new or shallow.

The United States is the world's oldest democracy. Some part of its historical track record traces to the fact our political system's roots go very deep. There was 150 years of development before the rupture with Great Britain — and then not by a population which was indigenous, as was India's case.

Institutional iron turned into steel by America's Civil War has carried the country to this date. Even a Richard Nixon, with his contempt for the nation's institutions and traditions, would not have dared the action decreed by Mrs. Gandhi.

"... 'Deny everything and destroy all tapes' ... Thanks, Dick!"

Democracy's successes of yesterday are no certain guarantees of successes tomorrow, however.

Refusal of citizens to accept basic civic responsibilities required for the continued functioning of a democratic system is almost as dangerous as high officials demonstrating arrogance and contempt — and refusal to live within the institutional disciplines.

Looking at India, really, should not be any cause for smugness at home.

ZPG? Not Yet

All beliefs of realized zero population growth notwithstanding, the United States continues to count ever more citizens.

For the 12-month period which ended in March, births in the United States — 3.1 million of them — exceeded deaths by 1.2 million females and males. Data is supplied by the National Center of Health Statistics, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The velocity of America's population gain is not as great as it was several years ago. But births over deaths still average 100,000 monthly.

Add to the demographic swelling the annual legal immigration of 400,000 persons and the illegal entry of between 650,000 and 1 million each year. As many as 12 million persons may be illegal aliens in the United States, according to some estimates. They and the 213 million regular citizens contend for pieces of an economic and social pie whose expansion has tailed off.

Recognition that increasing population is hardly the blessing by which it was once advertised came to many Americans only recently. The message merits constant repetition.

Even in China, where live nearly a quarter of the earth's estimated 4 billion population, birth control activities are being accelerated.

Birth control and taking of the pill are considered community responsibilities. Peking-born novelist and surgeon Han Suyin reports in field and communes, one woman is designated for insuring, each day, that all other women have taken a birth control pill.

In the astonishing society which China has become, societal pressures are exerted to depress population growth.

By way of contrast, there is no "give" at all in the position of one of the world's great religious institutions, the Catholic Church. Last week Pope Paul VI repeated the church's formal opposition "to artificial birth control (and) to abortion."

Polls and other testimony seem to indicate a division among individual Catholics in this matter. Opposition to artificial contraception seems far less than opposition to abortion, although the pontiff denounces both equally.

Rosselli

Hopes, Dreams, Disillusionments of a Decade

By Max Lerner

Why should the news about John Rosselli bring to my mind a poem by W. H. Auden? John Rosselli is, of course, the mafia gangster, now a grandfatherly figure, who appeared before the Senate committee on the CIA with such secrecy that the papers were not sure the pictures they ran were really of him. Along with the late unlamented Sam Giancana, he seems to have worked on the Castro assassination plot in the early 1960s, in a plan to poison Castro and his top two men, and thus topple the regime.

For some reason it sent me back to Auden's poem, called "September 1, 1939," which opens with the lines above.

That is how Auden felt about the '30s, which had inspired his generation with such fire and hope, and which expired with a second world war. Similar lines could have been written about the '60s, and doubtless will be written about the '70s as well.

What makes the lines especially poignant now is that the shadow of Rosselli and Giancana, and of the CIA operations now being sifted, falls over the Kennedy years in the early '60s when so many points of light seemed to be flashing over the nation.

For anyone who wants to review the events of those decades William Manchester's massive 1,300-page book, "The Glory and the Dream" (Little, Brown), is a good starting point.

I have kept coming back to it since its publication. There are things to be said against it, and the reviewers have said them — its prolix length, its mountains of detail, its failure often to discriminate between the trivial and crucial, its lack of any basic interpretive theme. Every couple of generations someone puts together an "Our Times" chronicle. This is the current one.

Anyone who has tried to do any teaching which involves some knowledge of what happened in America in the '30s, '40s and '50s, even the '60s, knows how innocent the students are of it. Their knowledge starts somewhere in the middle or late '60s. If there were a paperback version of the Manchester book I would make it mandatory for every high school and college student — and for their teachers as well. Then we could start equally from the same point, and fight about our interpretations.

Manchester begins with the Bonus Army, encamped in Washington in 1932, and ends with Nixon victorious in 1972, facing the Watergate scandal. It is scarcely a 40-year period to give a title like "The Glory and the Dream" to it. One could call it equally "The Glory and the Nightmare."

I say this because every generation has some one decade which was crucial for it, and which conditioned its outlook. But what conditions us is not only our hopes and dreams but also our frustrations and disillusionments. In these crucial decades something in each of us comes to birth, and then we die a little in each disillusionment. For Auden and for C. Day Lewis and Stephen Spender, Spain was both hope and grief, and Munich was death.

One way of naming the decades is, I suppose, by the President who dominated them. Thus we have had the Roosevelt years, the Truman years, the Eisenhower years, the Kennedy and Johnson years, the Nixon years. But while the personality of each President gave his years of tenure their stamp and flavor, the core of each period still eludes us, even when we review its chief events.

The '30s were the decade of confidence, which curiously began with the Great Depression and ended with Pearl Harbor. The '40s were years of war in which the nation found some unity, but they were followed by a bad peace and the start of a strident cold war. The '50s were dominated by the shadow of nuclear weapons and the stirrings of the Third World. Yet compared with what followed, they, too, seem now an age of unconscious illusions.

The '60s started with the politics of promise, moved on to a tangle of social revolutions and got mired down in the swamp of an endless war. The '70s began badly, with Watergate and the oil cartel, and seem dominated now by the large questions of disintegration and survival.

Back in 1939 Auden was as somber as we are today. "Defenceless, under the night/ Our world in stupor lies." Yet he also saw some "ironic points of light" flashing out from "the Just." He ends:

'May I, composed like them
Of Eros and of dust,
Beleaguered by the same
Negation and despair,
Show an affirming flame.'

They are lines that may sound too upbeat for our decade, but I like them.

Nebraskaland Tour

Lincoln — An article (Sunday Journal and Star, June 22) described the 12th annual Nebraskaland tour as "an ethnic tour of the state." The purpose of the tour was to learn "a bit more about the past and present makeup of the Cornhusker state." Ethnic groups included were Norwegian, Czech, Polish, Danish and Irish.

It seems incredible to me such a tour did not include meeting with members of the ethnic group that lived here long before the white man's coming — the Native American.

Nebraska is fortunate to have within its borders three tribal groups — the Sioux, Winnebago and Omaha. We have so much to learn from the rich heritage and culture of these groups. I'm sorry that the members of the Nebraskaland tour missed such an opportunity.

Teach Supernatural

Lincoln — The front page display (Sunday Journal and Star, May 8) featuring "Billy Graham: God's Master Salesman" along with the Lincoln newspapers' general catering to the promoters of the supernatural and the spiritual while downgrading the material ill serves our country or humanity.

Graham is a broker for mansions in the sky and should be prosecuted for selling blue sky, which is against the law.

Our founding fathers at the Constitutional Convention refused to recognize the supernatural and excluded it from our civil affairs. But today we have permitted religions based on the supernatural to permeate every phase of government — our President subscribes to it.

The men establishing the government of Russia went a step further than the founding fathers and required that their schools teach there is no such thing as the supernatural. This teaching is Russia's strength and the lack of it our country's weakness. Graham's haranguing creates irresponsibility and the news media abets it.

Not 'Humorous'

Lincoln — I object to the tone of the article about the holding of three Lincoln men jailed for alleged sex offenders (Sunday Journal and Star, June 22). The article humorously suggested perhaps the "weather got to" the three men.

Sorry, but I didn't see the "humor" in the article. I guess I just didn't know sex offenses against women were "humorous."

Alternatives to Widening 48th Street

Lincoln — We wish to comment on the remarks of Harold Simons in his column "Nebraska Resources" (Sunday Journal and Star, June 22) entitled "Woes of Widening 48th Street."

We agree with his statements regarding feelings of South 48th Street residents and that the street planners did not propose the widening due to a dislike for trees or two-lane streets. Beyond that, we believe there was little in-depth thought given to this particular situation.

South 48th Street is a long established residential area of quality homes. It has so developed due to zoning for that purpose. Residents of such an area should be able to depend on planners to maintain the quality of the area after they have invested in homes there. There are other human values much more important than destroying the environment and quality of an established residential area to provide a four-lane street in hope of improving traffic movement.

Concentration of traffic in a few four-lane streets will not move traffic as efficiently as dispersing traffic into more numerous quality two-lane streets properly signalized and with marked turning lanes. "O" Street with four lanes is much more congested now in rush hours than is South 48th Street with two lanes. And if South 48th Street were made four-lane, it would draw in more traffic and there would be two highly congested streets meeting at 48th and "O," further slowing traffic movement on both streets.

Widening 48th is unnecessary. The following alternatives will move traffic more effectively and at much less cost:

- Complete Capital Parkway (already planned) to at least 56th Street.
- Make 33rd an arterial to join the Parkway.
- Make 40th an arterial from "O" Street to Highway 2.
- Improve congested intersections and the business areas on South 48th.
- Also improve South 56th where required.

Besides improving traffic flow, these alternatives would save energy by preserving the environment, prevent devaluation of property and maintain the quality of neighborhoods on South 48th and other areas.

RUSSELL F. RICHMOND

Edward G. Robinson, Joe DiMaggio, Joe Namath, Mickey Mantle, Whitey Ford, Muhammed Ali . . .

Birth of a Salesman, in Prime Time

By Russell Baker

I still remember the sorrow and dismay with which I first saw Edward G. Robinson selling coffee on television. It was several years ago, but the memory persists, perhaps because it was a cultural milestone of the modern age.

Edward G. Robinson doing a TV commercial for coffee! Here, indeed, was a fall from greatness, or so it seemed. Robinson was surely the greatest gangster Warner Brothers had ever served up to a grateful nation three times a year stuffed with bullets.

It could not have been more of a shock if I had turned on the television and seen Joe DiMaggio selling panty hose. The great people of the world simply did not hawk consumer goods on TV in those days, and Robinson's submission to this ignominy suggested he had fallen among evil bill collectors.

This betrayed an abysmal lack of vision of the American future on my part for, as we all know, the chance to star in a TV commercial has become the ultimate certification of greatness.

Joe DiMaggio is not selling panty hose, but Joe Namath is. DiMaggio is selling coffee pots. Mickey Mantle, who replaced him in center field for the Yankees, is selling beer with the help of Whitey Ford, who was to left-handed pitching what Edward G. Robinson was to the 45-caliber automatic.

We may be approaching a time when an invitation to perform in a sales pitch will be the most distinguished accolade American society can bestow on its citizens, much as a knighthood or a seat in the House of Lords is in England.

It may even be greater, for Laurence Olivier, who already had both his knighthood and his peerage from the Queen, was not so satisfied with the royal accolades that he turned his back in satiety when offered the opportunity to sell cameras on TV.

Muhammed Ali, "the greatest" by his own admission, is peddling after-shave lotion at pauses in the midnight movie. Bill Russell, certainly one of the greatest basketball players, is selling telephones. And Ann Miller, who was to tap dancing what DiMaggio was to centerfield, is selling a fat-elimination program.

Our greatest athletes, our greatest actors. Well, yes, but that's hardly a cross-section of total greatness, is it? Still not enough, you may say, to support the supposition that before long small children, when asked what they want to be when they grow up, will reply, "I want to be a television commercial in prime time."

So I give you William E. Miller, who keeps turning up on television selling a credit card. In 1964, he was the Republican candidate for vice president.

Is the handwriting on this wall not clear? Today Edward G. Robinson; tomorrow Sir Laurence Olivier. Today William Miller, former vice presidential candidate; tomorrow the President of the United States.

We can only guess at the progression here, but it is unlikely to go so fast that we shall see President Ford doing a chewing-gum commercial, unless he gets elected next year and has four more years in office. More likely, there will be a series of congressmen and senators selling relatively somber merchandise at first. Sen. Mansfield pushing a snow tire that gets him there on time despite the Montana blizzards, House Speaker Albert talking up a stomach alkalizer that neutralizes acidity twice as fast after a tense day in the House.

The true greats will move in fast once the ice is broken. Before the decade is out we might see Ronald Reagan selling suits (of conservative cut), Nelson Rockefeller demonstrating hair coloring, Edward Kennedy extolling dental floss.

The marriage between Madison Avenue and politics was performed in Gen. Eisenhower's landslide victory of 1952 when his advertising men boasted they "sold him like toothpaste." Now, they would have him selling toothpaste like landlides.

Commerce marches on, and in the flowering of greatness we see the birth of a salesman.

House Can Still Swing Solid Probe of Spying

By J. F. TerHorst
Washington — If Speaker Carl Albert seizes the opportunity, it may yet be possible for the House to overcome its present embarrassment and mount a CIA investigation that will rank with the Senate's solid inquiry and, just maybe, surpass it.

A key to the solution lies with the report of a gutted group known as the Commission on the Organization of the Government for the Conduct of Foreign Policy, a joint congressional-executive panel quietly studying the subject since 1972 under the chairmanship of Robert M. Murphy, eminent former diplomat. The Murphy report could be the appropriate vehicle for a thorough review and subsequent legislation by a special House committee on the CIA and the other intelligence-gathering agencies of the government.

To accomplish that, Albert and the Rules Committee and the Democratic powerbrokers of the House need do only two things. First, abolish the disension-racked, moribund Nedzi Committee and appoint a wholly new panel, free of the pro-CIA and anti-CIA bias that has destroyed the usefulness of the present committee. Second, formally direct the new committee to concentrate on evaluating the Murphy Commission's report, and to bring suitable bills to the floor for passage into law.

Some benefits of such a course of action come immediately to mind. It would enable the House to catch up with the Senate's CIA committee, thus making up for six months of lost time. It also would reduce the House's need to replot the same ground, call the same witnesses, take the same testimony and wind up with a very similar kind of report, i.e., that the CIA is guilty of doing a lot of bad things, from domestic surveillance to assassination plotting.

More important, the Murphy report could be a logical springboard for corrective action, thus permitting the House to concern itself with the future of CIA and covert operations instead of merely lamenting errors of the past.

On that point, the Murphy Commission has delved deeply for the past two-and-a-half years. It has come up with suggestions that make good sense. The nation's top intelligence man, it says, should be a member of the president's White House staff and accountable and accessible to him.

Most important, the Murphy Commission draft report suggests covert operations should not require the personal approval of the President so as to spare him the diplomatic harm of being associated with such things as a head of state. But it would require advance approval of covert operations by a special congressional unit and subsequent accounting by that unit of the success and failure of the mission.

A bill creating "a joint committee on national security" already has been introduced by Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota. The Murphy Commission report thus would ensure thorough congressional oversight of all U.S. covert actions, something lacking since the CIA was created after World War II.

Incidentally, the report also recommends the agency be renamed the Foreign Intelligence Agency to underscore its separation from activities of the FBI and other domestic bureaus in the intelligence field.

Albert should have little difficulty getting approval of his key subordinates for such a new House probe, judging from their private comments to this reporter. The Rules Committee already has a resolution before it that would dissolve the present Select Committee on Intelligence. Chairman Lucien Nedzi of Michigan has no desire to stay on, despite the strong House vote of confidence in his reliability.

Intelligence gathering is only one aspect of the Murphy Commission report. Advance review of some of its other findings discloses it will, by reorganizational proposals, be rather critical of the way Henry Kissinger and other secretaries of state have bypassed U.S. diplomatic machinery, thus making it less responsive as an instrument of American foreign policy.

But the seventh chapter, "Organization of Intelligence," would be an excellent guide to a new House Committee on Intelligence providing Speaker Albert and House leaders are serious about solving their present dilemma.

Pity the Poor CIA Agent Who Had To Keep Pace With This Activist

By Mary McGrory
Washington — It's awfully early, I know, but I'm ready to vote on the most lunatic misuse of taxpayers' money by the CIA. It's however much they spent on infiltrating the Women's Strike for Peace.

I have a good reason for my choice of Women's Strike for Peace. It is Edith Villastrigo, a woman with iron-grey bangs and thick glasses who bears the grand title of local coordinator for WSP, but who is actually in charge of badgering the press. No one in memory has done it better.

When I ponder the fact federal funds were used so some agent could find out what Edith Villastrigo was thinking, my mind stops. It is virtually impossible not to know what Edith is thinking.

Besides the 7 a.m. phone calls at home — "the most marvelous monk is coming in from Saigon" — it is hard for me to remember a mail delivery during the entire Vietnam period that has not brought some nugget from Edith, some exhortation to tell the world about a new outrage.

The Women's Strike for Peace was founded in 1961 to oppose the nuclear arms race. The joke around the headquarters is "a funny thing happened to us on the way to a test-ban — the Vietnam war."

It should be noted the press releases issued under the Villastrigo imprint come typed in all caps on flimsy paper. WSP doesn't have a mimeograph machine. They did once, but it was stolen.

The matter is of interest because the rationale of CIA's illegal domestic surveillance was the suspicion that peace groups might be getting financial help from foreign countries. If WSP had an alien sponsor, the CIA agent must have thought it was one of exceptional chintziness.

Now we come to the CIA agent. It had to be a woman. I hope she had good feet. Trailing Edith on her unending round of vigils, sit-ins, meetings, protests, marches — not to mention inevitable front-row appearances at every congressional hearing relating to the funding, morality, arming and ending of the war and the towing-around of Vietnamese dissidents — would require uncommon stamina in a spy.

I wonder how she stood up to Edith's unceasing, low-voiced, inexorable arguments. Maybe she had to dash back to Langley, Va., CIA headquarters, every night for a hawk pill. Maybe she asked for reassignment. I would like to talk to her sometime.

Characteristically Edith dashed off a release the minute she heard the CIA had been watching her. It was on the usual flimsy paper, but there was underlying the usual indignation a note of content.

'What did the CIA expect to find out when they infiltrated our meetings — that we opposed the nuclear arms race — that we opposed the Indochina war — that we supported the young men who refused in good conscience to fight that war — they could have read our publicity for that kind of information.'

Edith would not admit to being pleased. She was too busy composing a letter to CIA Director William Colby demanding to know how much taxpayers' money was poured into infiltrating the open meetings of WSP demanding to know if they are still being spied on.

Now that the long Vietnam detour is over, the strike is back on the main highway of agitating against the nuclear arms race. They expect a long battle.

Edith believes the American people, when given the facts, will always find the right decision. She thinks they may get around to closing down the arms race. She even thinks they may get around to closing down the CIA.

McCook's speed limit on far West B street — which has gone all the way to the governor's office — is getting to the point of becoming "ridiculous," so the editor of the McCook Gazette suggests changing the limit signs to read "Somewhere Between 25 and 45."

The State Highway Dept. wants the speed limit to be 35 mph, the governor suggests trying 25 mph and the city-county attorney says he doesn't think it's right to prosecute speed tickets only one mile over the limit and says a 10 mph leniency is standard.

"This would make the enforceable speed either 35 mph or 45 mph depending upon which starting speed limit one observes," the editor pointed out.

But then, the attorney suggested an 8 mph leniency rather than the standard 10 mph in which case the "enforceable speed would become either 33 or 43 mph, again depending upon which starting speed limit one observes."

The McCook editor suggests the controversy is surpassing the comic page "as the funniest and most ridiculous thing in the paper."

of us, by also seeking legislation against loud mufflers and other noise-causing equipment."

A proposed rate hike by Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) did not set well with the editor of the Tri-City Tribune (Gothenburg-Cozad) who suggested customers should definitely be questioning the increase.

NPPD explained that faulty instrumentation tubes have limited the Cooper Nuclear Station to 50% production and therefore electric bills will have to increase. But the paper feels "it is poor management if the equipment is not protected by some sort of insurance."

Further, the editor wrote "Unlike other public utilities, NPPD need not face a state Public Power Commission to justify its hikes. Moreover, when dealing with cities, NPPD has automatically sent cases dealing with rate increases through court dockets anticipating rejection by city fathers. The rejection is little more than a delay, for the courts have been best friends to power companies. It is like pulling hair from your nose — they got you coming and going."

The Omaha World Herald believes charging University of Nebraska at Omaha faculty and staff $12 a year parking fee — the same amount students now pay to park on campus — is a good idea pointing out that most wage earners who work downtown pay for parking if they drive.

Zoo Setting for Return of 'Hob's Choice'

By Holly Spence

David Meisenholder is hoping to present the community a firecracker of a theatrical event for Independence Day weekend.

He and a member troupe of nearly 30 will open the official Bicentennial year with 10:30 a.m. performances of Hob's Choice Friday and Saturday in the Children's Zoo, 29th and A.

Volunteer actors and actresses have been rehearsing the musical comedy for children for 4½ weeks six days a week.

"We devote our time to doing the show as a summer project for the community in lieu of swimming, sun bathing and golfing," said executive director Meisenholder. "And we approach it with the attitude that if we are going to do it, we are going to do it right."

And evidently Meisenholder's presentations of three children's shows in the past four years have hit upon the right combination, for over 12,500 children have viewed these 40-minute programs of dialogue, song and dance at the zoo.

From the pen of New York playwright June Barbour (who also authored Rover Flies Over and Spooky), Hob's Choice features music by former Lincolnite Marjorie Miller Murphy.

This summer's presentations on Fridays and Saturdays at 10:30 a.m. through Aug. 2, are unique in that they were made possible by Mrs. Jessie B. Johnson in memory of her husband, Wilber O., and daughter, Roma Johnson Buchenau.

"Her idea was to give a living memorial instead of a statue," said Meisenholder.

Johnson was a member of the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra as was his daughter, Roma. She received two music degrees from the University of Nebraska, was a member of Sigma Alpha Iota music sorority, taught music at the high school and college levels, played with the El Paso (Tex.) Symphony and studied organ with Virgil Fox.

Meisenholder said he is striving for the most professional of shows.

"Stan Miller (of Stanal Sound in Kearney who has traveled with big names as a show business sound man) convinced me the only way to do quality sound is to do what the professionals do," Meisenholder said.

The entire show is pre-recorded on professional equipment. The actors and actresses then "lip-sync" (mouth) their own voices. Dick Spencer of Century Copifax will handle the taping.

"It is not like mimicking records where you are imitating someone else," Meisenholder said. "Part of the personality of the character created by the actor is on the tape."

The taping procedure, a lengthy two-day procedure that goes into the wee hours, is timed with a stop watch.

Experience, Inc., the non-profit umbrella organization headed by Meisenholder, recently received a $3,000-plus grant for a Bicentennial project that will take the children's theater around Nebraska.

"We (those working on Hob's Choice) strive to present to children what children want to see and not what adults think children want to see," he noted.

This summer's cast, directed by Wesleyan theater major Landis Magnuson, includes Victor Wilson, Melissa Baer, Patti Jo Monte, Carol Penterman, Mike Keene, Ronale Tridle, Paul Davie, Nancy Eno, Roxy Burbach, Carrie McCauley, Susan Watson, John David Tridle and Magnuson.

Karen McWilliams is choreographer and Patricia Meisenholder is costumer. Stage managers are Craig Sovey and Phil Herrick; musicians include Dennis Klimes, Jim Williamson, Dennis Schneider and Meisenholder.

Real animals appear to be the audience for Hob's Choice characters (from left) Paul Davie as Ghost, Ronale Tridle as Lizard and Patti Monte (kneeling) as Red Rabbit.

Schools Actors Go on Stage

The Lincoln Public Schools Repertory Theater Company will cap its premiere year of study with a repertory season of three productions.

The season opens at 8 p.m. Saturday with a staging at the Community Playhouse, 2500 So. 56th, of Tartuffe, a controversial 17th century comedy by Moliere.

Director Mike Dobbins said Tartuffe deals with "religious hypocrisy — a holier-than-thou attitude." This three-act piece will be presented again July 10, 11, 17 and 25. All performances of Tartuffe will be at 8 p.m.

A two-act musical version of Alice in Wonderland will be presented at 2 p.m. next Sunday and at 2 p.m. July 13, 20 and 27 as well as at 8 p.m. July 26. Linda Warren will be musical director of Alice.

Dobbins said that Tartuffe will be intriguing for adults, Alice will please the youngsters and a contemporary triad of one-act pieces will be especially interesting for high schoolers.

The triad will include former Beatle John Lennon's In His Own Write. This play of "jumbled language" is an episodic story of a boy growing up, said Dobbins. It utilizes many of Lennon's compositions.

The Interview from America, Hurrah by Jean Claude Van Itallie will also be included in the triad, along with a 10-minute play. The triad dates are July 12, 18, 19, 24 and 31 — all performances at 8 p.m.

All performances in the repertory season are open to the public and will be staged at the Playhouse.

Dobbins said that the high school repertory theater project, made possible by the Lincoln Public Schools, is a cooperative venture with the Playhouse.

This idea was originated by the public schools speech and drama teachers.

Dobbins said the project, recently funded for a second full year, began last semester with 25 students. This troupe includes sophomores through seniors from all public high schools except Lincoln High, with some participation from Pius X.

Dobbins plans to expand the scope of next year's repertory program by taking it to the elementary schools. Here he hopes to work in creative dramatics and improvisational theater.

Set design for this season's project is by Homer Simmons, art teacher at Whittier Junior High, with costumes by Martha Grant and Gail Oliver.

The Lennon piece will be presented by the high school repertory company in October at the Nebraska Theater Assn. convention. Here Dobbins hopes to promote a high school exchange program in dramatics with the eventual formation of a state-wide high school repertory theater company.

CARMEN

Photo used May 4 and originally labeled "Catholic Church — early Lincoln" was No. 434 in the Who What When Where series.

Mystery Church Identified

It Was Catholic Pro-Cathedral at 13th and M, Also Known at St. Theresa's in Early Days

By Anita Fussell

It had a plot to rival The Nine Tailors by Dorothy Sayers.

There was mystery abounding. In an ecclesiastical setting.

With a superabundance of profitless clues and false leads.

Only Lord Peter Wimsey was missing.

But plenty of fun was there . . . along with the thrill of the hunt.

It all started May 4 when a mysterious photo appeared in the Focus feature, Who? Where? What? When? In Nebraska as No. 434 in that series.

The photo, a copy from an unknown original, bore a penned notation "Catholic Church — early Lincoln. From collection of Mrs. C. E. Loomis, and later owned by Miss Jeannie Smith."

However, when impeccable Catholic sources of 1975 were asked to amplify the building's history, they responded to the effect that the building could not have been any of the Catholic churches in the Lincoln area.

Shape and Markings

With the stunning reversal, the plot thickened

Lincoln's earliest comparable Catholic church, the only one contemporary with the old photo, was St. Theresa's, the old pro (temporary) cathedral at 13th and M (not to be confused with today's St. Theresa's at 735 So. 36th).

Several Catholics who remembered that early St. Theresa's building from their boyhood said it looked nothing like the church in the photo, which appeared to be of red brick, located out in the country, with a plain steeple shingled in a distinctive diamond pattern.

St. Theresa's, they said, was an elegant L-shaped, grey-brick church crowned with a Victorian gingerbread steeple.

So on May 11, The Sunday Journal and Star asked readers for help in identifying the mystery church. Several people wrote in, but none of their suggestions checked out.

A search through the Nebraska Historical Society picture files and old books revealed that other early Lincoln churches looked even less like the mystery church than did St. Theresa's.

In fact, on closer examination aided by microscopic views, the old photo from the Loomis collection showed some striking similarities to photos of the old pro-cathedral.

Capping the windows and doors of both churches were stone arches shaped like horseshoes.

And from the side of the square towers of both churches, a round porthole of a window peered down on identical slanting roofs.

Building Was Enlarged

Another clue came from the 1889 book, History of the City of Lincoln, by A. B. Hayes and Sam D. Cox. This book contained a drawing of the pro-cathedral that looked exactly as Tom Sweeney, Lincoln real estate man, and Msgr. Clarence Riordan, chaplain at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, remembered it.

However, the book referred obliquely to a time when the pro-cathedral was a smaller, simpler church. According to the Hayes and Cox history, one of the initial projects of Lincoln's first Roman Catholic bishop, the Rev. Thomas Bonacum, was "the enlargement of the pro-cathedral."

Back at the Historical Society, Mrs. Opal Jacobson and Don Snoddy worked at turning up new clues, building on the earlier research of Ann Billesbach. The society staff members were working with a photo copy identical, including the penned notation, to that which FOCUS used.

Solution Progresses

The husband of Mrs. C. E. Loomis, original owner of the mystery photo, turned out to be a real estate agent listed in the 1885 Lincoln City Directory. That fact strengthened the credibility of the note on the photo identifying the church as Catholic.

Then lightning struck.

Overhearing the discussion, a Methodist minister, Rev. Duane Hutchinson, who happened to be working at the society, asked to see the photo. He took one look and said he had seen a similar picture in a large book kept on a table in the reading room.

He brought the huge, aging book back to the knot of researchers. It was the 1885 Official Atlas of Nebraska.

Opening the book to page 184, he pointed to a drawing identified as St. Theresa's Catholic Church.

The only step remaining was to show the drawing to Msgr. Riordan and Msgr. Thomas M. Kealy, vicar general of the Lincoln Diocese.

They studied the evidence in amazement but agreed that the dark building in the photo revealed more about the condition of photography in 1885 than the condition of the church.

So it has finally been established that the mystery church really was the original St. Theresa's Church at 13th and M as it looked around 1885.

There Were 3 Buildings

The corner is that occupied today by the State Federal Savings & Loan Assn. offices, with a multi-level parking garage above the ground floor.

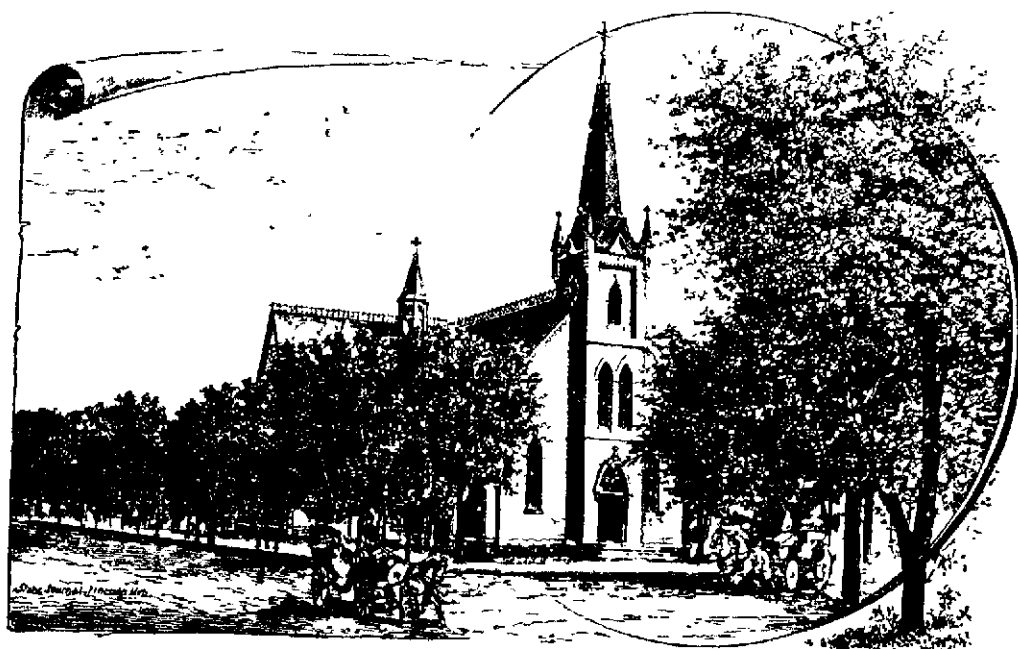

The Catholic site extended about two-thirds of a block east and at one time accommodated the pro-cathedral on the west (13th St. side) a rectory and a school.

In 1911 St. Mary of the Immaculate Conception Cathedral at 14th and K was consecrated.

The Catholic Church had acquired the partially-constructed building in 1904 but its completion and consecration were delayed as the result of a fire and other setbacks. Clearing of the site at 13th and M occurred over a long period of time. The old Cathedral High School building was the last of the church's structures to be removed (in 1949).

The Hayes and Cox History of Lincoln credits Fr. Emmanuel Hartig, a Benedictine priest ordained at Atchison, Kan., in 1861, as being founder of the Catholic Church in Lincoln. The Salt Creek area was first served from Nebraska City by Fr. Hartig as a mission. In 1867 Lincoln was designated capital of the new state of Nebraska and a community that needed churches began to grow. At first Catholic services were held in the home of a John Daly but in 1868 a frame building was completed. Hartig and a Fr. Michael Kaumley conducted services there at least monthly. The first resident priest in Lincoln was Fr. Michael Hofmeyer (Hofmayr in another reference).

The south of the Platte Catholic population grew rapidly enough that Fr. Bonacum was consecrated as Bishop of the Lincoln Diocese late in 1887. It was not long after that when he brought about enlargement of St. Theresa's Church by addition of a wing with an east-west axis at the north end of the building.

Drawing of "The Catholic Pro-Cathedral" appears in 1889 volume by Hayes and Cox, History of Lincoln.

Ft. Rob Art From 9 States

Fort Robinson — Twenty western artists are displaying their work at the Fort Robinson Professional Western Art Show through next Sunday.

The show, free and open daily 10 a.m.—9 p.m., is sponsored by the Fort Robinson Centennial Corp., a nonprofit organization attempting to retain the traditions of the Old West.

Painting definitely was a tradition at the fort, says show director Ron Speer of Crawford, with famous western artists Frederic Remington credited with coming to the site of the Cheyenne outbreak to paint one of his classic pictures. Amateurs and professionals alike have painted the post, the surrounding buttes, Indians, soldiers and the horses over the years.

Never, however, in the fort's

100-year history has there been such a gathering of artists as to equal the current second annual art show, Speer said. Exhibitors represent nine states.

Among those entering the show are John Dorwart and Ted Long of North Platte, Mel Gerhold of Crawford, Herb Mignery of Hastings, Joseph LaMay of Alliance and Harry Brunk of Maxwell.

This drawing labelled "St. Theresa's Catholic Church" appeared in the 1885 Official Atlas of Nebraska.

Gen. George Washington

Modest Washington Commanded Army

By United Press International
The general who assumed command of America's Revolutionary Army 200 years ago this week in Cambridge, Mass., confessed his deep self-doubts to his wife in these words:

"... My Dear Patsy... I assure you in the most solemn manner that, so far from seeking this appointment, I have used every endeavor in my power to avoid it, not only from my unwillingness to part with you and the family, but from a consciousness of its being a trust too great for my capacity."

George Washington also confided to his fellow Virginian, Patrick Henry, "From the day I enter upon the command of the American armies, I date my fall and the ruin of my reputation."

And publicly, he told the Continental Congress which had unanimously selected him on June 15 as Commander-in-Chief: "... I beg it be remembered by every gentleman in this room that I this day declare with the utmost sincerity, I do not think myself equal to the command I am honored with."

Cool Leader

To his compatriots, Washington was a far more impressive leadership figure than he saw himself. A friend from his French-Indian War days described him this way: "He is a modest man, but sensible and speaks little — in action, cool like a bishop at his prayers."

At six-foot-two, the Virginian, who had served with the British in the debacle of Braddock's defeat, towered above most of his countrymen. He was a handsome figure of a man, broad-shouldered, a little narrow-chested but thin-waisted, who weighed around 175 pounds.

Washington was 43 years old when he assumed command July 3, 1775, of a ragamuffin continental army of New Englanders besieging the British in Boston. With his reddish-brown hair, blue-gray eyes and pale complexion, the commanding general still retained the good looks that had made him a successful ladies' man in his Southern youth. Bad teeth were his only physical defect.

In demeanor Washington was aristocratic but highly sociable. Relaxed among his peers at a tavern, he was an amiable companion, ready to offer toasts, join in the singing, enjoying jokes and often witty in his observations.

He was a moderate drinker and sought to prevent swearing by the troops in his army, yet soldiers who served under him reported that in battle their general could cut loose with a string of oaths that would "make the leaves in nearby trees rattle."

A keynote to Washington's character was discipline for himself and others. And the American Army he joined in quiet fashion 200 years ago was virtually without it.

Yankees Vexing
He found New England Yankee ways vexing. Washington wrote to a friend that the officers of his army are the most "indifferent kind of people I ever saw" and said of the rank-and-file: "I daresay the men would fight very well (if properly officered) although they are an exceedingly dirty and nasty people."

The commander had cause for disdain. One of his first orders of the day directed that privies be dug periodically to prevent the American encampments from becoming uncontrolled dung heaps.

Instead of the 20,000 to 24,000 men he thought he had, there were but 16,000 with 2,000 of them unfit for duty and desertions growing daily. The officers elected by popular ballot refused to exercise authority. One of them, a barber in civilian life, shaved his men upon request.

When he arrived in Cambridge to assume command, Washington had been told his forces had 308 barrels of gunpowder in reserve. He discovered there were but 36, or nine rounds to a man, to oppose any British effort to break out of Boston.

One of the New Englanders commissioned as a brigadier general by the Congress resigned and went home because he had been outranked by a fellow officer. Two others almost did the same thing.

Six companies of frontier riflemen from Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania came to camp and disrupted army discipline with their rowdiness. At one point, Washington had to send reinforcements to quell incipient mutiny in their ranks.

General Unrecognized

Washington himself was sometimes barred by sentries from inspecting troop bivouacs on grounds they didn't recognize him. He was forced to buy a few ribbons to distinguish his rank. In the words of one observer, Washington's army was "but little more than chaos."

The general displayed an iron fist. He broke one colonel and five captains for cowardice at Bunker Hill and for drawing pay and provisions for more troops than they had. Soldiers were flogged with 40 lashes for disrespect and disobedience.

A magnificent horseman, he won the respect of his men by riding almost daily along the 16 miles of American lines and by working from daybreak to late in the night. His personal magnetism began welding a bickering, raggle-taggle force of provincials into what he termed "The Army of the United Colonies."

Washington, who disliked military life so much that for 15 years he avoided drilling the Fairfax County militia as their colonel, slowly gained command. In the autumn of 1775, he was able to declare in a letter: "We mend every day and I flatter myself that in a little time, we shall work up these raw materials into good stuff."

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court adjourns for the summer Monday after acting on the rights of public school students and mental patients but failing to rule on the death penalty.

Except for a few weeks, the court has been short one member since Justice William O. Douglas suffered a stroke Dec. 31. However, of the 129 full-scale opinions the court handed down, he took part in all but 17.

There was at least one indication his illness may have deadlocked the court on some issues.

Before Douglas' stroke, the court decided six cases by 5-4 margins in which he was in the majority. After he was stricken it handed down only one 5-4 decision with Douglas on the prevailing side.

Seven times, however, the justices ordered attorneys to come back next term and present new arguments on cases they had already heard. It will be the most cases reargued since 1969.

Among the cases set for reargument is a challenge to the constitutionality of the death penalty. Douglas was in the majority in a 5-4 vote in 1972 striking down the capital punishment laws then on the books.

Since he heard arguments on the new cases, he was presumably prepared to vote on it. The court may have decided to take a broader look at the question and consider accepting one or more of the 22 other death penalty appeals it has been asked to hear.

Other issues slated to be reargued involve protection of minority rights in redistricting cases, the right to counsel in summary courts material and whether resident aliens can be barred from government jobs.

Among cases which it did decide, the court showed a trend toward further curtailing, or at least refusing to expand, the power of federal judges to act on behalf of citizens who argue their rights are threatened.

In some more familiar areas, there were these rulings:

On church and state — States may not lend instructional materials and equipment to private schools, nor provide therapy and other services for handicapped children in them.

On sex discrimination — States must make the age of majority the same for both sexes and may not automatically excuse women from jury duty; widowers as well as widows are entitled to Social Security benefits when left with children in their care; but the Navy may allow female officers to remain longer in the service than male officers without getting a promotion.

On criminal procedure — A statement illegally obtained from a suspect during police questioning may be used at his trial to discredit his testimony. But federal prosecutors may not make similar use of the fact that an accused remained silent at the police station. Nor may a confession gleaned from an illegal arrest be used against a suspect merely because he was given required warnings.

On censorship — Drive-in movie theaters may not be prohibited from showing any and all scenes depicting nudity, on grounds that an unwilling bystander outside might catch a glimpse; stage productions are subject to the same court restraints on censorship as movies.

WHEN YOU CAN'T GET MONEY TO BUY NEW EQUIPMENT . . . LET IT PAY FOR ITSELF!

Pay for today's equipment with tomorrow's less valuable dollars; and it gives you an expense recovery in the same year you make your payments, with dollars of equal value. Purchasing can't compare, because when you depreciate, the dollar value of your expense recovery decreases every year due to inflation.

Colorado's Sen. Hart Says It's Time to Answer Wallace

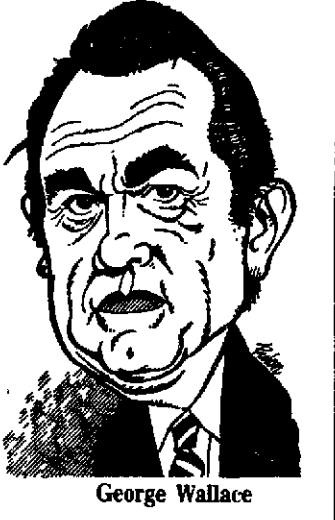

Washington (AP) — Reflecting on a three-hour visit with George Wallace, Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado has called for a positive Democratic response to issues raised by the Alabama governor.

Hart said in an interview Saturday that unless Democrats do respond, voter disaffection in 1976 may reach new peaks, with as many as two-thirds of the potential electorate refusing to cast ballots for president.

In fact, he said, he is thinking of introducing legislation that would require states to add a "none of the above" line to the 1976 presidential ballot "just to test how many of them would turn up."

Gary Hart

George Wallace

Hart said Wallace "ought to be fairly treated and that somebody ought to figure out a positive way of dealing with the problems he has articulated."

"He has shown he's on to something but it's all negative and destructive," Hart said. "Somebody has to articulate the positive aspects, that most people want to work, that bureaucrats are not pointy-headed intellectuals, etc."

Hart, elected to the Senate last November two years after managing George McGovern's disastrous 1972 presidential campaign, said he went to visit Wallace at the behest of Marvin Warner, a wealthy builder and Democratic national committeeman from Ohio who was a college classmate of the Alabama governor.

"Warner's feeling was that we should make every effort possible to keep him in the party," Hart said. "He said one of the biggest problems is that nobody will talk to him, except for those running for office."

hours at the executive mansion in Montgomery with the governor.

Hart said Wallace complained about efforts in various states, including New Mexico, North Carolina and Tennessee, to change the delegate selection process to hinder him and the refusal of some state Democratic leaders to answer requests from Griffin.

"I think he definitely feels that, unless the thing is rigged, he's got a reasonable chance to go in with as many delegates as anyone else — and probably more," Hart said. "I think he feels he's got a shot to be on the ticket."

He said he told Wallace "I thought he had as much right to run as anyone else and that, if he didn't represent the views of most Democrats, he wouldn't get the nomination and shouldn't get it."

3 U.S. Installations Seized in Vientiane

Vientiane (UPI) — Moving in before dawn, pro-Communist Pathet Lao troops and leftist students seized control Saturday of three U.S. installations, including the Silver City residential compound, and forced the remaining 42 official Americans in Laos to move into another housing complex outside of Vientiane.

the pre-dawn takeover of the three American installations or during the day. The student demonstrators disbanded at nightfall but Pathet Lao soldiers carrying AK47 rifles stood guard at the three locations.

The departing Americans were checked by guards to make sure they took only their clothes and personal belongings.

During the day, the remaining Americans moved out of the Silver City compound, carrying only clothes and personal belongings. The last American to move out, who refused to identify himself, struggled to an embassy car with a huge suitcase and a shoulder bag.

The Pathet Lao forces, accompanied by small bands of leftist demonstrators who chanted anti-American slogans, took control of the U.S. Information Service library, the Silver City residential compound consisting of 18 homes, and a general services compound where supply and transportation activities for the U.S. Embassy are handled. No violence was reported in

"I'm the last one out, thank God," he said. "They're checking to make sure that we carry out only clothing."

The residents of Silver City, located in the north end of town, moved to another housing complex about two miles east of Vientiane, where U.S. charge d'affaires Christian Chapman is living.

Scotland Yard Blasts No-Gun Cop Theory

By Robert Musel

London (UPI) — This is how it is in a city where ordinary cops do not carry guns.

increasing tendency for the most dangerous criminals to be permanently armed in case of arrest by the police."

An insane kidnaper tries to snatch Princess Anne. Although her bodyguard is shot down the patrolman on the beat charges the man with the loaded gun and is seriously wounded.

Some police on special details are known to be armed. These include officers assigned to protect embassies, to act as bodyguards for important visitors or to carry out hazardous duty against, for example, narcotics smugglers.

Two cops in a prowler car stop an automobile carrying two men and a woman and find themselves looking down the barrel of a weapon. One cop tackles the gunman, who tears loose and tries to escape. The other officer, injured by Kung Fu sticks, hangs on to the man and woman until help arrives.

Public opinion already has been prepared, not only by trigger-happy criminals but by Middle East and Irish extremists, for an extension of the use of guns. Sir Robert said 429 additional policemen took a defensive weapons training course last year.

A detective is shot and a cop run down by a getaway car. Another patrolman on the beat surprises a team of bank robbers and is shot.

Sir Robert said some of the foreign embassies in London considered high risks for bombers or guerrillas have been fitted with panic buttons to a crack diplomatic protection group. They are chosen from Scotland Yard volunteers who give continuous cover.

It may astonish viewers of Kojak and other television police thrillers but until now the only weapons of the Scotland Yard constable — the patrolman — have been his fists and his club.

The group got a workout, almost as Sir Robert was speaking, when an offshoot of the West German Baader-Meinhof group of terrorists was reported to have made threats against the Swedish embassy.

But there is a hint in the annual report of Police Commissioner Sir Robert Mark — in which the incidents above are mentioned — that the famous theory of "opposite force," long the barrier to arming British police, has finally broken down.

1885: It was decided to install 20 electric lights on Lincoln streets.

The contract for the first line of track for the newly organized Lincoln street railway was let to M. W. Osborn. The line covered O Street from 7th to 11th, with a branch out on 11th and a line to R.

Work was progressing satisfactorily on new Methodist, Congregational and Presbyterian churches, all in the central part of Lincoln.

1895: There were 52 candidates for the superintendency of the Lincoln schools.

The Lincoln and Quincy ball teams attempted to play a Sunday game at Cortland, but authorities stepped in and prevented it.

Nebraska authorities began a crusade against the Russian thistle.

1905: Mayor F. W. Brown issued a proclamation prohibiting the use of fireworks and all explosives on street car tracks. Other fireworks and firecrackers could be used from midnight to midnight on July 4 and at no other time.

1915: Thousands of horses were collected near Grand Island for the British and French armed forces.

W. J. Bryan pleaded for peace when he spoke to a crowd estimated at 6,000 people in the streets near 13th and M. Bryan spoke from the south balcony of the Lindell Hotel.

Electric Park, a new amusement resort southwest of Lincoln, was opened with 7,000 people amusing themselves on the opening night by the light of 10,000 electric bulbs.

1925: The Pauley lumber yard at 27th and E burned with a loss of about $75,000.

The Journal was conducting a referendum to find how many Lincoln citizens desired a change and what sort of change in the names of Lincoln streets.

1935: A University of Nebraska budget of approximately $3 million was approved by the Board of Regents for the following fiscal year.

A cloudburst at Valentine swept away nine dams at the state fish hatchery, causing property damage estimated at $10,000 and an unestimated loss of fish.

1945: Nebraska City voted in favor of issuing $950,000 in revenue bonds for the purchase of the Consumers Public Power District properties in the Nebraska City district.

1955: The Edgemont Mining and Uranium Corp. was scheduled to start "intensive exploration" for uranium in western Nebraska. President Art Ludwig said his firm has received a number of uranium samples of commercial quality.

The Waubonsie Bridge over the Missouri River at Nebraska City was declared toll free in a ribbon-cutting ceremony.

1965: Gov. Frank Morrison announced he tax bill, LB797 become law without his signature or endorsement. Opponents of the measure immediately laid plans to attempt to repeal the measure in a referendum.

Representatives of 22 eastern Nebraska towns recommended that a north-south interstate highway be established through eastern Nebraska from Salina, Kan., to Elk Point, S.D.

Band Opens 45 Quilts on Tour Next Sunday In Mid-America

The summer concerts by the Lincoln Municipal Band begin next Sunday at the Antelope Park bandshell, just north of 32nd and Sumner.

The eight Sunday concerts, directed by John Shildneck, are free to the public. The City of Lincoln will sponsor four and the American Federation of Musicians will underwrite the remaining four programs.

Director Shildneck said "these will really be pops concerts and will feature all kinds of music."

Outdoor Music At NU-Omaha

Omaha — The fifth annual season of free public concert on the green begins at 7:30 tonight at the University of Nebraska-Omaha. The outdoor program southeast of the UNO Performing Arts Center will include classical to contemporary music. Other concert on the green programs will be July 13 and 20.

Music Society Alum Officers

New officers of Sigma Alpha Iota music society alumnae are Jean Patoka, president; Phoebe Homann, vice president; Shirley Doan, recording secretary; Mary Louise Holding, corresponding secretary; Doretha Gore, treasurer; Esther Wilson, Chaplain, and Verona Rangelier, editor.

Mini Art

Laramie, Wyo. — Artists living in Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and South Dakota may participate in the High Plains miniature regional show which opens Sept. 6. The show is sponsored by the Laramie Art Guild. Work may not exceed 9x12 inches including frames. Deadline for entry cards is Aug. 10.

DeKlotz Show

On exhibit through July 21 at First-Plymouth Congregational Church, 20th and D, are oil paintings, watercolors and pottery by Joye DeKlotz.

Remember the quilt show at the Sheldon Art Gallery?

Forty-five quilts from it were selected to be a traveling exhibit, circulated by the Mid-America Arts Alliance.

David Smith, visual arts coordinator of the Alliance, was in Lincoln Wednesday packing the collection for its tour.

Special frames were built for the quilts, and the quilts were covered with muslin before they were rolled. A plastic cover will protect the whole exhibit as it travels in the truck.

The quilts go to Oklahoma City for an exhibit opening there July 1-29.

The 1975 schedule includes Hastings, Aug. 1-27, Norfolk, Sept. 1-27, Tahlequah, Okla., Oct. 1-29; Joplin, Mo., Nov. 2-30 and Springfield, Mo., Dec. 2-30. In 1976 the quilts will be exhibited in Topeka, Colby and Logan, Kan.; Columbia and Kirksville, Mo.; Alva, Okla., and Chadron and Scottsbluff.

Art of Molas

Also on tour through Nebraska this year is an exhibit, the Unique Art of Molas. Organized by the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery, it was made possible by a grant from the Nebraska Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts in cooperation with the Nebraska Library Commission, the Nebraska Art Association and in-community sponsors.

The work is the folk craft of the Cuna Indians, who live in the San Blas Islands on the Caribbean side of Panama. The Cuna women have developed the fine needlework of the molas into an art found nowhere else in the world.

Three or more layers of cloth are used in the reverse applique and a design drawn on the top layer.

But molas must be seen to be appreciated.

The exhibit will be at libraries in Holdrege through July 10, McCook July 14-Aug. 14, Imperial Aug. 18-Sept. 11, North Platte Sept. 13-Oct. 2, Cozad Oct. 4-23, and Hastings Oct. 27-Nov. 21.

Fourteen pieces are from the collections of David L. Smith and the University and one piece Women Pounding Rice was lent by Mr. and Mrs. Jon Nelson.

Traveled Painting

A letter from Leon M. Bryan of San Francisco, begins:

"One of my favorite possessions is a small still life oil painting of three apples in a white dish, bought several years ago in a San Francisco rummage store. The painting is done on a thin board which has this legend written in pencil on the back:

"Apples from the Ben Davis tree on 639 No. 27th St., Lincoln, Neb. Painted by Emma Wittman about 1901."

"I'm sure the apple tree is long since gone, but I'm wondering if any of your readers can tell me anything about Emma Whittman and her work..."

No name spelled that way is listed in the telephone directory. However, the State Historical Society turned up a copy of an obituary of an Emma Wittmann who died in 1951 at age 81. She had lived at the above address in 1901.

Just on chance, a call was made to the Herb J. Wittmann residence and Mrs. Wittmann had lots of information about the late "Aunt Emma. She was my husband's aunt. I think when she was young she did a lot of painting but I don't know if she ever sold any of her work."

There are several other relatives in the area as well as family friends, including Hilda Boller of Hallam.

Letter and Gift

Former Nebraskans are loyal to their native state.

Proof?

Florence Swanson of Bronxville, N.Y., and formerly of Cozad, read a story in the New York Times concerning the I-80 Bicentennial sculpture project.

Art Thompson, project director, received an encouraging letter from the New Yorker, with a nice contribution to help finance the project.

St. Louis Exhibit

Nancy Peterson of Lincoln is one of three young professional artists whose work will be in an exhibit July 6-30 at the Craft Alliance Gallery, 6640 Delmar Blvd., in St. Louis. Ms. Peterson will exhibit a variety of decorated stoneware ceramic box forms and mirrors. She has her master's degree in ceramics from the University of Northern Iowa.

Choreographers Self-Explained

New York (AP) — Choreographer George Balanchine discussed choreographers:

"We love music because we live by ear and by eye. We are not brainy people — intellectual. We don't live by words; we don't know what words are; they're not so important. We live by images. We don't know anything about logic; logic to us is a fraud. We live only what we are looking at."

"I left Russia — I was running like the devil from there. I didn't learn anything. My language is Russian. Literature doesn't mean anything to me; I don't understand it."

"We probably know more about music than any musician in our pit. Musicians hate music."

Ainsworth Art

10 Old Wooden Desk Symbolizes NU Advances in Parasitology

By Debie Murphy
In a small laboratory on the fifth floor of Nebraska Hall-West sits a wooden desk symbolizing the scientific pioneering spirit now kept alive by curator of parasitology Mary Hanson Pritchard.

Few people realize the University of Nebraska State Museum has a parasitology division. And even fewer realize the uniqueness of the laboratory with its thousands of parasite specimens and research sources.

The division, newest in the university museum, is very much a vital center for the study of parasites in the U.S., according to Prof. Pritchard. Besides providing the country with its second such collection center, the NU laboratory is trying to preserve its own tradition of firsts in the field of parasitology.

The first first, says Prof. Pritchard, was that the first course in parasitology in the U.S. was taught at the University of Nebraska. Instructed by Dr. Henry Baldwin Ward, the first occupant of the wooden desk which now commemorates his work, the course was a landmark in the field. Dr. Ward, who was at NU from 1892-1909, was considered the father of parasitology.

Following in his footsteps were Dr. Franklin Barker, at the university from 1909-1926, and Dr. Harold Manter, 1926-1971, both of whose names also appear on the commemorative desk. It was Dr. Manter who got then business education major Prof.

Pritchard interested in the science.

"I really thank the university of having group requirements. I had to take a science course so I took a biology course with Dr. Manter. It opened up a whole new field for me," she said. Prof. Pritchard later went on to get her master's degree in the science and became a research assistant to Dr. Manter.

She attributes Dr. Manter's work as the impetus for the university to add the parasitology division to the museum. The nucleus of the division is his collection of specimens representing 1,340 species, a library of about 10,000 reprints, 500 volumes of parasitological journals, and a series of 150 taxonomic notebooks giving detailed descriptions and illustrations of certain species of parasites.

The parasitological center is not only a collection point for specimens and data, Prof. Pritchard is quick to add. A working laboratory is available for graduate students and visiting scientists who want to supplement in-the-field research.

The division has the capacity for two graduate students to work there. This too has produced more credits to the division. One student, Monte Mays, produced a pamphlet for the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission from his studies on the parasites of fishes in Nebraska.

The booklet, available at most recreation areas for the asking, details common fish parasites and how to rid the fish of them to make it edible.

Prof. Pritchard explained that as another first, the division is currently studying and cataloging parasites found in Nebraska. Study now is centering on frog and fish parasites.

The lab refrigerator is up to its gills in frozen turtles and fish, all parts of the grad student's experiments. The curator explained that the study of the host (the organism off which the parasite lives) is as important as study of the parasite in order to determine the relationship of the two.

"The division is doing exciting things rather than simply being caretakers for a collection," she explained. "This division and its data could easily become part of our national resources. It sets down on record study which previously hasn't been recorded."

She explained that the data and the specimens being stored in the division will be valuable for future generations, especially in the cases of the study of parasites of endangered species.

Future parasitologists will have the collection to use in comparing new findings against the old. Prof. Pritchard said the division will allow a continuing reevaluation of the information stored, thus allowing each successive generation to have as complete, accurate, up-to-date information on parasitology as possible.

Our Little Town Spirits of 1776 Live in Heartland

By Gertrude Skinner

Superior

I would not trade one good book for a handful of diamonds. Such a book is Eric Sloane's Bicentennial effort entitled The Spirits of '76.

If you have not read this fine book, do so this Fourth of July. It will reawaken your sense of patriotism as no amount of fireworks and pageantry will do.

It is a negative book that reflects the author's deep concern for America and her future. It is sincere, thought-provoking and, through its comparison of yesterday and today, revealing.

The Spirits of '76 was loaned to me by a friend. He was in complete accord with the author's view that the spirits of the times in which our country was conceived are practically non-existent today.

Mr. Sloane feels that charity, faith, hope, industry, thrift, humility, honesty — spirits that made our country a great power — are considered non-essential by today's people.

It is his contention that the Christian religion is ineffectual; that the personal worth of the individual is almost nil, that loving and caring for one's neighbor has been lost in a dog-eat-dog existence, that the moral tone of the times is one of vice and corruption and dissipation.

Methinks that the author and my friend both do protest too much. I sense in both men the role of the reluctant cynic. In their criticism of America's children I hear a cry for help. They are not without hope, for they are searching for answers. And that is good. That is healthy.

We become the sum total of our experiences. If their experiences have been unhappy and tinged with disillusionment then I am truly sorry. My experiences have not been so they have been sparkling like a handful of diamonds.

Rural Nebraska, the farms, the villages, the small towns — here we still have all of the spirits which Eric Sloane fears are forever lost. Spirits intact for 200 years, growing ever stronger, ever brighter in America's heartland. Would that all people throughout the land of the free and the home of the brave were as fortunate as we.

More Dollars Buy Fewer Records, Tapes

New York (AP) — Manufacturers' sales of phonograph records and prerecorded tapes in 1974 soared to a new high of $2.2 billion.

It was an increase of 9% over the $2.017 billion in 1973, according to the Recording Industry Association of America.

RIAA said the increase in dollar sales reflected higher list prices. Total unit sales were down slightly from the previous year, 594 million against 616 million.

Sales of albums rose from $1.246 billion in 1973 to $1.356 billion in 1974, an increase of 8.8%. Singles rose from $190 million to $194 million, up 2.1%. In terms of units, LPs declined from 280 million to 276 million, a decrease of 1.4%, and singles declined from 228 million in 1973 to 204 million in 1974, down 10.5%.

Pre-recorded tapes rose to $650 million in 1974 compared with $581 million in 1973 and unit sales also increased, from 108 million units in 1973 to 114 million units in 1974.

Recording Firms Also Are Promoters

exposure for new acts and seek an audience — and a market — for their records.

The trend worries some observers of the pop music scene because of the seeming potential for a few large companies to gain control over more and more elements of the music business.

The "rich-get-richer" implications could make it more difficult for new record companies and new performers to break into the business.

Although no one has called it illegal, there is concern, for example, that one large conglomerate, the Warner Communications Co., has gained a share of the record market variously estimated at 17% to 25% through the acquisition of four record labels: Warner Bros. Reprise, Elektra, Asylum and Atlantic.

Competitive practices of the recording industry are now under scrutiny by federal grand juries in at least four cities —

New York, Newark, Los Angeles and Chicago.

Originating in the "drugola" scandals of 1973, in which some recording company executives were accused of trafficking in cocaine in their dealings with pop musicians, investigations have since been broadened to cover many other elements of the recording industry, such as possible tax law violations, illegal expense account vouchering and antitrust violations.

Snapshot Contest Rules

The contest is strictly for amateur photographers. Employees of the newspaper and individuals engaged in the manufacture, sale, commercial finishing or professional use of photographic goods are not eligible.

Black and white or color pictures taken since July 1, 1974, are eligible. They may be taken with any kind of camera or film. No artwork or retouching is permitted and no composite pictures, multiple exposures or multiple printings.

Prints — black and white or color — must be 5 inches or more on their smallest side. Color transparencies must be 35mm or larger.

Contestant's name and address must be clearly written on the back of each print entered or on the border of each transparency.

There is no limit on the number of pictures or transparencies a contestant may enter each week. However, if a contestant wishes to enter more than one week, each week's entry must be mailed separately in conformity with the deadlines.

The Sunday Journal and Star will eliminate, from further consideration any additional entries by any 1975 contestant who wins two weekly awards.

No black and white prints can be returned. If color prints or slide entries are accompanied by self-addressed envelopes with correct postage, every effort will be made to return them (except for prize winners) following the final weekly contest. But returns cannot be guaranteed.

Print mountings, borders and folders have no bearing on the judging.

Contestants are permitted to submit pictures to only one newspaper participating in the Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards.

Weekly contest deadlines require that the pictures be received in The Sunday Journal and Star office by 10 a.m. on June 30, July 1, 8, 15, 22 and 29. Late arrivals will be entered automatically in the following week's contest.

To be eligible for a prize, a contestant must sign a statement, upon request of contest officials, that the picture or another similar picture has not and will not be entered in any contest and will not be offered for publication.

Be sure you know the names and addresses of any recognizable persons appearing in your picture. In order for it to be submitted for international competition, you must be able to get the written consent of such person or persons to permit use of the picture for illustration, advertising or publication.

Entries are to be mailed to: Snapshot Contest, Sunday Journal and Star, Box 81689, Lincoln, Neb., 68501.

From News Wires
Beirut, Lebanon — Street fighting between rival rightist and leftist factions entered its fifth day here and spread into previously unaffected areas.

Fighting was fiercest in the neighboring suburbs of Chiah and Ain Rummaneh in city's southeast section, where right-wing Phalangists battled left-wing rivals. Police sources reported at least 10 more casualties, raising the total for the week to 26 dead and 75 injured.

Youths, many of them recruited for $4 a day, manned barricades on approach roads to their neighborhoods. Inside the roadblocks bands of men clad in green combat fatigues squatted behind sandbags, cars and on rooftops peppering the streets with machine gun, rocket and mortar fire.

Fighting erupted Saturday morning in downtown Beirut when security forces moved in to dislodge supers from buildings around main squares.

The fighting continued despite an appeal issued jointly last night by Yasir Arafat, the Palestinian leader, and Lebanon's former president, Camille Chamoun, backer of the Phalangists, who is on of the country's most prominent Christian leaders.

Lebanese press reports said the country's two powerful political groups, the Phalangists led by Pierre Gemeyal and the Socialist Progressives led by Kamal Jumblatt, were near agreement on a compromise formula that would let Premier-Designate Rashid Karami form a government to replace the outgoing military cabinet of Premier Gen. Nourredin Rifai.

Karami's efforts to form a government have been deadlocked for a month because Jumblatt has insisted the Phalangists be kept out of the government for their part in the fighting.

The reports said that under the compromise, neither side would be directly represented in the cabinet although each would be allowed to have a say in the appointment of ministers. Later, the cabinet would be reshuffled to give the Phalangists and Socialists direct representation.

Writer, Producer Rod Serling Dies

From News Wires
Rochester, N.Y. — Television writer and producer Rod Serling 50, creator of TV's "Twilight Zone" and "Night Gallery" died Saturday at Strong Memorial Hospital after suffering complications during open heart surgery on Thursday.

The heart attack was Serling's second in two months. He was first hospitalized in early May after suffering a mild attack.

Serling was one of the best known and most honored writers in television. Such plays as "Patterns" and "Requiem for a Heavyweight" were prestigious highlights of television's "Golden Age" of drama in the 1950s. They were later made into motion pictures.

He received six Emmy awards, more than any other writer. He also received the Peabody and Sylvania awards.

In addition to his "Twilight Zone" and "Night Gallery" programs, Serling was known for frequent appearances as host or narrator on such specials as the Yves Jacques Cousteau series. He also appeared in many TV commercials.

He wrote "A Storm in Summer," about racial prejudice, a favorite subject of his. The play was named the outstanding television drama in 1970.

He lived in Interlaken, N.Y., while serving as a visiting professor at Ithaca College. In 1963 he also took a year off from his writing to teach at his alma mater, Antioch College in Yellow Springs, Ohio.

He was born Dec. 25, 1924, in Syracuse, N.Y. He went to school in Binghamton, N.Y., and enlisted in the Army paratroopers on the day of his graduation in 1942. He served three years in the Pacific.

He attended Antioch College and went to New York in 1948 as a fledgling radio writer. He won second prize in the annual script competition for the "Dr. Christian" radio series.

Serling fought in the Golden Gloves and was runner-up in the featherweight division championships.

He married the former Carolyn Kramer in 1948 and they had two daughters, Jody and Nan.

Win Is Illegal But the Taxes Must Be Paid

Detroit (UPI) — Attorney General Frank Kelley is willing to look the other way, but the Internal Revenue Service isn't.

Edd Harrell must pay taxes on a $446,000 lottery win that is illegal in the United States.

Harrell, 45, a General Motors Corp. welder repairman, learned early Wednesday that he had won the money on an Irish Sweepstakes ticket. Buying or possessing the tickets is illegal in the United States.

"I don't think Mr. Harrell needs to lose any sleep," the official said. "But he better not forget Uncle Sam's cut."

Congress' Teeth Lie Just Below Gums

By Arnold Sawislak
Washington (UPI) — Parodying the chilling advertisement for the movie "Jaws," a political cartoonist recently drew a huge shark, mouth agape, circling to attack an unsuspecting swimmer on the surface above.

The shark, labeled "Congress," has no teeth.

The cartoon was high grade irony because it mocked the ferocious image that the Democratic-controlled Congress projected when it convened last winter.

Nearly veto-proof on paper and facing an unelected president who seemed shaky even after five months in office, it looked like Congress was going to run the show in Washington.

Not quite. As it turned out, there is a great white shark in Washington, but it is a creature of the Constitution, not contemporary political trends.

It is the presidential veto, lurking below Capitol Hill while Congress paddles complacently through its work believing that there is safety in numbers.

Swift and sure, it kills with a single snap, leaving the work of months dismembered and those who presumed to tempt the monster sputtering in rage and frustration.

But the Constitution also gives Congress an antidote for the veto, and it has been in the attempted application of this remedy — the congressional override — that the Democrats in the House and Senate have looked most impotent.

With majorities of 61-38 in the Senate and 289-145 in the House, Democratic congressional leaders had close to the "veto proof" two-thirds majorities needed to pass any bill over President Ford's objections.

ANALYSIS

Yet the House, with the biggest Democratic majority, has refused to override Ford's last four vetoes, including three on major antirecession bills the Democrats saw as the key to economic recovery and political success in 1976.

To make bad look awful, three of the bills originally were passed by margins approaching or exceeding the magic two-thirds.

The House Democratic leaders, under fire from all sides for these pratfalls, have lashed out at "obstructionist" Republicans in Congress and at the White House, but there is very little they can do now to rescue their proclaimed intentions to give the country the kind of sure-footed leadership it was not getting from the President.

Added to the fuzzy results of the congressional effort to construct a coherent energy program and viewed alongside Ford's handling of the Mayaguez incident and good notices he got on his trip to Europe, the vetoes may be the rude awakening from last winter's Democratic visions of glory.

Of course there is a condition. If the economy does not come back, as Ford and his advisers believed it already has begun to do, the vetoes almost surely will be the ammunition of a Democratic campaign fusillade next summer and fall.

Ford's success in checking a rebellious Congress will help him only if the public can be shown that he was right about the bills he killed.

There is an illustration of this in relatively recent history. In 1958, the Democrats elected 283 members to the House and 64 to the Senate, but in two years of trying they couldn't get the depressed areas bill past the Eisenhower veto.

But that legislation was a prime campaign issue in 1960 and the next year, with fewer Democrats in Congress but John F. Kennedy in the White House, it finally became law.

3 of 33 Vetoes Overridden

Washington (UPI) — President Ford has vetoed 33 bills in the 10 months since he took office. Only three — with a disputed fourth — have been overridden by Congress, all of them in the previous Congress.

The new Congress, with its so-called "veto-proof" Democratic majorities, has failed in four crucial override efforts in recent weeks — on farm subsidies, recession jobs, strip-mining controls, and housing subsidies.

The previous Congress overrode bills on railroad retirement benefits, freedom of information, and increased benefits to Vietnam-era veterans.

Ford also pocket-vetoed a rehabilitation bill dealing with handicapped vendors in government buildings last October while the Congress was in recess, and the lawmakers overrode it the following month.

Congress lists it as an override. The White House — insisting that a pocket veto cannot be overridden — does not. The issue is moot since a similar bill was subsequently enacted into law.

At 81, Old Age Catches Up With Chinese Chairman Mao

Hong Kong (UPI) — Old age is finally taking its toll on Mao Tse-tung.

The years are catching up with the Chinese Communist party chairman, who turned 81 last December 26.

His physical condition has deteriorated considerably during the past several months, according to reports from diplomats based in Peking and from high level visitors received by Mao in recent months.

This has been the cause of considerable concern among the other top-ranking members of the leadership in the Chinese capital.

His mental condition still appears stable, according to these reports. But there are times when his mind seems to wander and he appears unable to concentrate fully.

He is enfeebled and has to be helped about by medical aides, who are near him constantly. On occasions, he has needed help to raise his hand to shake hands with some of his visitors.

There is much speculation among China analysts in Hong Kong and in Peking about just how much longer Mao's health will permit him to receive foreign visitors.

For the past dozen years or more there has been a flood of reports about Mao's failing health and from time to time he has been reported dead, with a double filling in for him. All these reports have proven to be erroneous.

There is too much evidence now of his failing health to ignore the latest reports.

Since his failing health has become so obvious to most foreign visitors meeting Mao, there have been two versions of most these meetings.

One is the public version. In this version, each visitor invariably pronounces Mao alert —

"sharp as a tack" is the phrase frequently used — and in relatively good health for a man of his age.

Their private observations are quite different.

Most of the recent visitors who have met Mao said they were appalled at the state of his health. Some said they were surprised, or even shocked, that he still was receiving visitors when his health obviously was not good.

These private observations indicate that Mao has to be helped when he stands up or walks. He sometimes has trouble moving his arms. He sometimes drifts from the mouth. He occasionally appears to be unattentive to the conversation, which usually is carried on through interpreters.

In one of his latest meetings, with Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos earlier this month, Mao was unable to communicate by speech.

He wrote notes which were translated during the meeting, which lasted more than one hour.

Reports by previous visitors had indicated that his speech obviously was impaired, but this was the first time that he was known to have resorted to written notes to hold discussions with any of his visitors.

Mao's discussions with visitors usually are carried on through two interpreters.

Because of their experience and the trust and confidence that Mao and other leaders have in them, diplomats believe the two interpreters elaborate on remarks the chairman makes during the conversation, filling in where necessary to keep the discussions from dragging and to avoid the impression that Mao may not be completely competent at all times.

Delta Launches Large Fiberglass Fishing Vessel

Seattle (AP) — What is believed to be the largest fish seiner built from fiberglass has been launched by Delta Marine Industries Ltd.

Even stringers and stiffeners, cabin sabin sole and bulkheads are glass. Christened the MS

Ingrid, the vessel has a 19½-foot beam, 10½ molded depth, carries 6,200 gallons of diesel fuel, is completely insulated and sleeps nine in deck-level accommodations.

Additionally, the Ingrid packs 54 net tons or 113 gross tons, has two fish holds, one of 1,750 cubic feet and the other of 475 cubic feet. The decks and superstructure are of cored laminate.

The only wood on the vessel is that of the cabinets with guards of iron-bark which are obviously wooden chafing gear.

Independence Celebrations Similar in Several Lands

By Associated Press

Almost all countries of the free world set aside a day to celebrate their independence. And while the dates differ, the celebrations have a universal similarity.

Here in the United States, July 4 is marked by parades, speeches, dedications and fireworks displays. The tradition dates back to 1777, when Independence Day was celebrated in Philadelphia.

Music by Hessians

Ships in the harbor fired 13-gun salutes to mark the occasion, while citizens on land lit bonfires, rang bells and ignited fireworks, according to World Book Encyclopedia. Ironically, music for the official dinner was provided by the Hessian band which had been captured by George Washington at Trenton, N.J.

In 1778, Philadelphia again hosted a special Fourth of July celebration. This time it commemorated both Independence Day and the ratification of the Constitution. The celebration featured a parade which stretched one and a half miles long.

France's Bastille Day

European countries also celebrate their Independence Days with traditional ceremonies, parades and fireworks. In France, for example, Bastille Day is marked by parades and dancing in the streets. It is celebrated on July 14 to commemorate the storming in 1789 of the infamous Bastille in Paris. The Bastille was a jail which housed political prisoners during the reign of Louis XVI.

Israel and Egypt

In Israel, where the lunar calendar is used, the date of Independence Day changes. Israel declared independence on May 14, 1948, at the time the British mandate over Palestine ended. In the years since, Independence Day has been celebrated on a number of dates including some in April.

Egyptians celebrate "National Day" on July 23. Cairo, the largest city, hosts the most elaborate celebrations, featuring parades through Liberation Square commemorating Egypt's freedom from foreign rule.

Swiss Procession

In Switzerland, the town of Gruyere adds to the traditional Independence Day ceremony with a procession through the town's ancient archway at sunset. The people of the town dress in their traditional colorful costumes and march along to the pealing of bells until the parade is climaxed with the lighting of bonfires on the hills surrounding the town and the singing of songs.

Mexico's on Sept. 15

In Mexico, the President opens the national Independence Day celebrations on the evening of Sept. 15. Standing on the balcony of the National Palace in Mexico City, he repeats the historic "Grito de Dolores" (Cry of Dolores), first issued by Miguel Hidalgo Y Costilla, priest and revolutionary leader who is recognized as the father of Mexican independence.

On Sept. 16, 1810, Father Hidalgo issued the "Grito" from his parish at Dolores, sparking Mexico's long revolt from Spanish rule.

The Mexican Independence Day ceremony is closed with the President ringing the independence bell, the bell which Father Hidalgo rang in his church on that historic date. Bells are then rung throughout the city and fireworks are ignited in all of the state capitals throughout Mexico.

Nifty Fifty Favorite Is Japan Air

By John Justin Smith

(c) 1975 Chicago Daily News

Nifty Fifty Club members, those who have hit at least 50 countries in their travels, were asked in a questionnaire if they have a favorite airline.

The line mentioned most often was Japan Air Lines.

A close second was United. Pan American, Scandinavia and Lufthansa tied for third. These readers were asked a variety of questions. Their answers must be respected because they are sophisticated travelers.

Should you use a credit card when you travel? Two-thirds of the Nifty Fifty Club members use them at least sometimes, while one-third never use them.

Which guidebook do they prefer for travel in Europe? Pan Am's World Guide got four times as many votes as any other. Tied for second were the Michelin and Fodor guides.

About 25% of the experienced travelers who responded to the questionnaire said they never use guidebooks. They apparently don't need them.

Do club members prefer luxury-class hotels? And how. About 98% said they use them sometimes or always.

Asked how much they spent each day during their most recent trip to Europe, those who answered set the figure as low as $40 and as high as $100.

(This range doesn't seem out of line. Our recent experience indicates that you can hack it in Europe by being careful with your money on $40 — and $100 a day will buy you first-class luxury.)

Pool Promotion

Nuernberg, Germany (UPI) — Ten historical West German cities have formed a new tourist promotion board to be known as the "romantic Germany ten."

A spokesman said the board would not only try to attract more tourists but also seek state and federal help to restore and maintain old castles and monuments that form part of the country's historical heritage.

The 10 cities are Augsburg, Bonn, Bremen, Freiburg, Heidelberg, Laebeck, Muenster, Nuernberg, Trier and Wuerzburg.

'Tornado Signal' Being Studied

Boulder, Colo. (AP) — A federally sponsored experiment is under way in America's "tornado alley" to detect what some scientists think is a distinctive electrical signal preceding formation of a twister.

If such a signal could be identified, it would give the National Weather Service an important tool in warning populated areas of an imminent tornado.

But so far, the detection device used to pick up the signal has been somewhat erratic, sounding frequent false alarms and working better in the Midwest than in the South.

William L. Taylor, a physicist, directs the tornadoic storm detector program for the Wave Propagation Laboratory of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) in Boulder.

Taylor and other government scientists are experimenting with a "tornadoic storm detector," a $4,000 suitcase-size electronic box with four antennae which sets off flashing red lights and a buzzer when electrical conditions are judged right for a tornado.

The device has been under development by NOAA since 1971 at a cost of $400,000. Field tests have begun at 15 sites in the South and Midwest, including Atlanta, Ga., Baton Rouge, La., Minneapolis, Minn., Tulsa, Okla., Memphis, Tenn., and Houston, Tex.

"We don't detect tornadoes with these instruments," Taylor said. "But we pick up an electrical signal which appears to be characteristic of many tornado-generating thunderstorms."

The Weather Service currently bases its tornado watches on the wind, temperature, air conditions and other meteorological factors.

Never Missed

"We've never missed a big tornado" during experiments with the detector, Taylor claimed.

A spokesman for the Weather Service in Atlanta said the device has detected several small tornadoes in parts of Georgia, but it failed a big test March 24 when a twister in Atlanta killed three persons, injured 150 and caused millions of dollars in damage.

"We had only one big tornado and it (the detector) didn't go off," the spokesman said.

Taylor, however, said a later examination revealed that the device was "inoperative at that time."

Taylor said the detector seems to work best in the "tornado alley" of northern Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Arkansas and Missouri.

He said thunderstorms in tornado-prone areas of the Gulf states seem to have different electrical properties.

Cosmetics Injurious To Some

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government-financed study of about 36,010 persons reports at least 589 were injured by cosmetics last fall, the Food and Drug Administration said Saturday.

The cooperative effort between the FDA and the American Academy of Dermatology represented the first government attempt to measure the frequency and severity of cosmetic injuries among a large group of people.

The $250,000 project followed the experiences of families last September, October and November.

The participants reported 703 injuries of which physicians could confirm 589 as being caused by cosmetics.

The vast majority of the injuries, 605, or 85.7 per cent, were regarded as minor irritations not requiring medication or doctor's treatment.

Researchers found the highest incidence of adverse reactions involved deodorants and antiperspirants, 40.5 injuries per 10,000 products used during September.

Just behind were depilatories or hair removers, which caused 40.2 injuries per 10,000 products used. Voluntary industry reports last year showed an injury rate of .28 per 10,000 products distributed.

Moisturizers and lotions had an injury rate of 18.2 per 10,000 in the study.

Q. Has the CIA ever used counterfeit money in clandestine operations?—Al Pincus, New York City.
A. Yes, in Cuba and North Vietnam.

Q. Groucho Marx who is 84 supposedly has written his epitaph. What is it?—Neva Haroldson, Palm Springs, Cal.
A. Groucho changes it from day to day. But his current favorite is, "I never kissed an ugly woman."

GROUCHO AND HIS COMPANION ERIN FLEMING

A. Publishers Simon & Schuster paid then Congressman Gerald Ford and his collaborator John R. Stiles an advance of $10,000 on the book, which they split 50-50. The book, published in 1965, did poorly, never earned its advance. Ford was a member of the Warren "blue ribbon commission" assigned by Lyndon Johnson to investigate the Kennedy assassination. Ford chose as an investigator his first campaign manager and old friend from Grand Rapids, Mich., John R. Stiles, whose idea it was to write "Portrait of an Assassin." Subsequently when Ford was nominated for the Vice Presidency, he offered conflicting testimony to the Senate Rules and House Judiciary Committees on the use of "top secret" information in the book. "I cannot help but apologize," he said, "if the circumstances are such that there was this violation, but there was certainly no intent to do it." Ford also received $5000 from Life magazine for an article on the assassination. He gave $1333 to Stiles, $1333 to the late Congressman John Ray, and kept $2333 for himself. Ten per cent commission was paid to the William Morris Agency on the book sale to Simon & Schuster.

Q. My understanding is that the Shah of Persia is a dictator, that he brooks no opposition in his oil-rich country of Iran, that he has in effect a very strong police state. What is the truth?—Dave Harwood, San Jose, Cal.

A. The Shah of Iran is a benevolent despot who permits no meaningful political opposition in his developing country.

Q. They say that Greta Garbo is one of the wealthiest landlords in Hollywood, which is why she could retire from films so early in her career. Does she own as much land as, say, Bob Hope?—Maude Pickett, Florence, S.C.

A. No one in show business owns as much real estate as Bob Hope. Greta Garbo, however, did manage to invest in Beverly Hills property many years ago. As a result she will never have to go on relief.

Q. Is it true that Cher Bono is as old as her chest measurements are large?—Louis Miller, Chicago.

A. Both are 29.

Q. I know that Ralph Nader dates girls secretly because he is afraid they will be shadowed by his corporate and political enemies. I would like to date him on the side because I find him handsome and fascinating. Where may I write him to make suitable arrangements?—F. L., Baltimore, Md.

A. Nader may be written to at Box 19367, Washington, D.C. 20036.

CHER: THAT'S ALL THERE IS

Q. Does Sargent Shriver want to become President of the U.S.?—Peter Reinhardt, Staten Island, N.Y.

A. He would like to, but he has no power base to work from

PRESIDENT GISCARD D'ESTAING AND 'PONIA'

Q. In France there is a shadowy figure named "Ponia" who supposedly controls Giscard d'Estaing and runs the country. Who is he or she?—Peter Valdez, San Antonio, Tex.

A. "Ponia" is Michael Poniatowski, the French Minister of the Interior, who supervises the French police and intelligence services. Poniatowski, a rightist, is a descendant of Talleyrand and the Poniatowski who was Napoleon's cavalry commander. He is no mystery man. He is recognized as the powerful man who engineered Giscard's election victory and helped defeat his leading political rival, Jacques Chaban-Delmas, who was politically destroyed when his income tax returns were mysteriously leaked to the press. They showed that for two years he paid no tax. "Ponia" in many quarters is considered Giscard's "Svengali."

Q. What is the relationship between Doris Kearns, 32, Harvard professor and former confidante of Lyndon Johnson, and Richard Goodwin or Goodwin who used to write speeches for Kennedy and Johnson?—F.T., Middlebury, Vt.

A. Kearns and Goodwin are collaborating. They are also working on a book which Miss Kearns started about five years ago as a solo effort before Goodwin entered her life. She is now being sued by Basic Books, her original publisher. Miss Kearns has parlayed her friendship with Johnson into an academic notoriety of sorts.

Gallup Poll

Fewer Catholics Backing Kennedy

By George Gallup
Princeton, N.J. — If Sen. Edward Kennedy chooses to run in 1976, survey evidence today indicates he may not be able to count on the solid Catholic support given his brother John in the presidential election of 1960.

In the 1960 election, nearly eight in 10 Catholics (78%) voted for John Kennedy, a Catholic, over Richard Nixon. Today, in a trial heat against President Gerald Ford, Sen. Kennedy received the support of six Catholics in 10 (59%).

Although Catholics had given the Democratic ticket the larger share of their vote in previous elections (including the 1968 election, when Nixon ran against Sen. Hubert Humphrey and Gov. George Wallace), Nixon in 1972 was able to win a majority (52%) of the Catholic vote in his landslide victory over Sen. George McGovern.

In addition, Catholics, despite their basic Democratic orientation, held views closely comparable to those of the public as a whole on such key issues as drugs, street crime, busing and welfare abuse — issues on which Nixon took a strong stand.

In popularity surveys on Ford, a similar pattern is found, with about as many Catholics as Protestants expressing approval of the way he is handling his duties as chief executive.

In the latest survey on popularity, 51% of Protestants and 52% of Catholics approve.

While Catholics continue to be more Democratic oriented than the rest of the public in terms of political party affiliation, the differences are not nearly so great in terms of political philosophy.

In fact, a slightly greater proportion of Catholics say they lean conservative than say they lean toward a liberal philosophy.

Gallup surveys over the last eight months show Catholics holding views closely comparable to the rest of the nation on such social issues as busing, the death penalty and the legalization of marijuana.

Sharp differences, however, have been found on other social issues, including abortion, aid to parochial schools, and amnesty.

The latest trial heat findings are based on interviews with 1,163 registered voters out of a total sample of 1,626 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period May 30-June 2.

Man Did Two Dumb Things

Indianapolis, Ind. (AP) — A 78-year-old man jailed here for failure to pay an $11,000 settlement to his former wife, says gambling away $35,000 in savings during a three-day Las Vegas spree was the second dumbest thing he ever did.

Horace R. Allen said the dumbest thing he ever did was to "marry her." Superior Court Judge Michael J. Dugan ordered Allen to serve 90 days in the Marion County jail unless he made good by Thursday on back marriage dissolution payments to Florence Allen, 68.

The Allens were married in 1971, both had been widowed. Jail authorities said Allen showed up to serve his sentence as scheduled.

"I listened to a lot of friends who went out there (Las Vegas) and made a killing. I went to the library and got a book on the percentages and figured I might be able to do something," he said.

"It didn't work worth a damn. You put your money on the line and here comes a girl in a miniskirt with free drinks and before long you couldn't tell whether the world stops or not," he said.

Negro Rights

Atlanta (UPI) — Negroes freed from slavery by the Cherokee nation during the Civil War were granted rights not enjoyed in most other states. They had 14 of the 100 Cherokee schools, a voice in all matters of public concern, homes in the nation, voting privileges, the right to hold elective office and freedom from taxes.

Earth Craters

South 28th St. between Randolph and E has been neglected by the city street department for years. Now the street at 28th and F has been torn up for curb replacement for several weeks. Residents are tired of bouncing over these craters daily. When will the street be resurfaced?

Doris Pleskac, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Tom Cast, project engineer for the street department, said the resurfacing project at 28th and F is scheduled to be completed on or before July 3. As for the street neglect, Bob Snow of the Public Works Dept. said that eventually every street will be repaired, but that priorities must be set. If the holes get too bad, he suggested you call the paving repair dept. of Public Works.

Mirror, Mirror . . .

Is there any place in Lincoln that resilver mirrors?

B.E., Geneva

MIRROR DRAWING

ACTION LINE: The craft of resilvering mirrors is a dying art, according to Ran Horsely, manager of Mir-O-Lite, 4545 Normal. He does the job, but said he thinks he is one of only three in the nation. The job usually takes about a week to ten days. He reflected cost was determined by the size and extent of the job.

Out of Play

I purchased a tennis racket from Ardan's, 1339 O, recently. According to the store's customer satisfaction guarantee I could return it within 21 days and get a cash refund. After 15 days I took the racket back, undamaged and with the receipt because I was not satisfied with its performance. The store manager would not take it back. What can I do?

—Syed Khahd, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Ardan's showroom manager, Marv Edwards, confirmed the fact that no cash refund would be made. He said the 21 day period was not intended as a trial usage time and felt the racket had been extensively used and abused. He cited several scratches on the racket. He said if you would have returned the racket the next day, it would have made a difference.

The customer satisfaction guarantee, as defined by Edwards is for defective merchandise, or products that don't work as guaranteed.

If you wish to pursue the problem further, since the terms of their guarantee are not specific, Lois Teft of the Better Business Bureau suggests small claims court or contacting them for arbitration by the BBB.

Nuts to You

ACTION UPDATE: A letter from Walter R. Meier, Lincoln, in response to the June 7 column, suggests peanuts can be grown in this area. "If peanuts are planted early in the spring, an ounce of seed will bring you a bushel of fruit" he writes. He also noted that peanuts were grown commercially in the "Peanut Hill" area west of College View years ago. Meier said he once planted some and was rewarded with several vines, that were hung to dry, then dried in a low oven.

Women, men and youth are needed by the nonprofit Volunteer Bureau. Address responses to Rm. 215, Lincoln Center Bldg., 215 So. 15th, Lincoln, Neb. 68508. Or call 435-4980.

Do You Care? Enough to assist with camping program at Pioneers Park for trainable mentally retarded children? Sessions are June 30 through July 11, July 14 — July 25, and July 28 — Aug. 8. Volunteers are asked to commit time to one or more sessions. Many volunteers are needed.

Do You Care? Enough to assist a human service organization by learning how to operate and use biofeedback apparatus? Professional staff will train volunteers. Background in biofeedback techniques or biopsychology helpful. Volunteers needed Monday or Tuesday evenings.

Do You Care? Enough to help retarded children learn swimming skills? Volunteers are needed Monday and Wednesday mornings, 4 p.m. Wednesday or 11 a.m. Saturday. Several volunteers are needed.

Last week seven volunteers registered at the Volunteer Bureau of the Lincoln Area, according to Susan Jackson, director. They have been referred to Madonna Professional Care Center, Lincoln-Lancaster Mental Health Center, Legal Aid, State Office for the Visually Impaired, Youth Service System, Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation, Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council, Lancaster County Welfare and Chet Ager Nature Center.

The weather was right Saturday evening for sunning, sipping suds and grooving on the sounds. Some 3,500 people showed up for the Belmont Rally.

Orderly Crowd of 3,500 Drawn to Belmont Rally

By Pat Knapp
Despite predictions of disorder, the Belmont Rally at Lincoln's Arrow Airport came off without a hitch Saturday night.

The organizer, Belmont Enterprises Inc. of Lincoln, encountered stiff opposition when it announced its intention to stage an outdoor country western and rock concert.

Plans to serve free beer to ticket holders of majority age caused the biggest stir and had to be dropped for legal reasons. But that didn't seem to dampen the spirits of more than 3,500 people who attended the concert. Many brought their own beer.

The weather posed no problems, either. Everyone dressed for the occasion and echoed the feeling that heat is much easier to cope with than rain.

Although ticket sales at the gates were good, attendance was less than expected, according to Belmont Secretary Jim Mumgaard.

Only 1,700 advance tickets were sold, he said. Pershing Auditorium usually sells about 5,000 tickets before such concerts.

Mumgaard blamed the slow sales on problems encountered in trying to set up the concert.

The Lancaster County sheriff's office had expressed fears of "narcotics use, rapes and so on."

"I think that scared a lot of people away," Mumgaard said. "We had expected about 6,000 people before all of the trouble began."

Ten sheriff's deputies were on duty at the concert, but no trouble was reported. Said Sgt. Steve Gates, who was in charge of the operation: "We haven't even had a parking problem."

Jeff Gallup, owner of Owl Aviation at the airport, said he was very pleased with the way things were going. "I think everyone here is aware they are setting a precedent," he said. "and will behave accordingly. No one wants to ruin chances for future concerts."

Iowa Floodwaters Receding; Ames Boy Drowning Victim

By United Press International
Floodwaters that ravaged Ames, Iowa, were receding Saturday, but residents and business owners were still faced with a massive cleanup task.

Authorities identified a 13-year old drowning victim as Duane Dass, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Maland Dass of Ames. The youth drowned in floodwaters near Iowa State University Friday afternoon and release of his name was withheld for more than 24 hours pending a search for his older brother who was on a camping trip in South Dakota.

Young Dass was wading in a flooded recreation field near Squaw Creek and apparently stepped into a drainage ditch. His body was recovered Friday night.

Two nearby youths saw the boy struggling, but were unable to rescue him. The body was recovered about seven hours later.

The Skunk River, source of much of the flooding, was falling Saturday afternoon, but was still four feet above flood stage. The National Weather Service said the river, which crested Friday at 5.32 feet above flood stage, was expected to fall below the 10-foot flood stage this morning.

Most of the cleanup involved getting mud and slime out of flooded businesses. A few businesses were to be closed until Monday.

Officials of Iowa State Center at Iowa

State University said the four center buildings escaped major damage with sump pumps keeping all but about one inch of water out of Hilton Coliseum. A sewer backup into C. Y. Stephens Auditorium caused some damage. About six feet of floodwaters was reported in the basement of the new continuing education building, under construction.

Abduction Suspect Held in Wisconsin

Minneapolis, Minn. (UPI) — A South Dakota man arrested in Menomonee, Wis., in connection with the abduction of a Minneapolis couple Friday night was to be returned here for an appearance before a U.S. magistrate Monday, the FBI said.

The suspect was identified as Alari Ironmoccasin, 24, Eagle Butte, S.D.

Ironmoccasin was accused of kidnapping Deborah Kienholz and Thomas Campbell in Minneapolis and driving them into Wisconsin, an FBI spokesman said.

The couple told authorities a man forced his way into their car in a Minneapolis park about 9:40 p.m. Friday, held a broken bottle to Mrs. Kienholz's throat and said he wanted to be driven to his home in South Dakota.

The car was driven east instead. Campbell was released unharmed in New Richmond, Wis., where authorities were notified.

Phone Rate Experts Differ Markedly; PSC Nears Northwestern Bell Ruling

By John Barrette

Witnesses for the Nebraska Public Service Commission (PSC) and Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. differed markedly in their rate of return recommendations during testimony about the utility's proposed $16 million rate hike.

Hearing transcripts in the largest Nebraska telephone rate case ever — a case that will be decided by the PSC early next month and possibly this week — detailed the opposing views of Dr. Charles E. Olson and Robert E. LaBlanc.

Olson, testifying as an expert for the PSC, said a 9% rate of return is sufficient for Northwestern Bell. LaBlanc, testifying as Northwestern Bell's expert, said a rate of return in the 10.5% and higher range is necessary.

The transcripts were checked at the PSC offices Friday, but only after Commissioner Jack Romans of Ord made an effort to halt a Lincoln Journal reporter from seeing them.

Romans said it would be "unethical" for the reporter to write a story with the decision so imminent, and implied such a story would be unfair.

After a brief, informal gathering with PSC Chairman Eric Rasmussen, two PSC staff attorneys and PSC Secretary Everett Green, Romans decided to drop the matter and the reporter was allowed to check the transcripts of the public hearings.

Olson, on sabbatical leave as associate professor of public utilities in the college of Business and Management at the University of Maryland, testified that Northwestern Bell's rate of return should be based on its Nebraska operations.

"Well, the rates at issue are for Nebraska intrastate service and so the rate of return should be applied to a Nebraska intrastate type of rate base, which, it's my understanding, is original cost," Olson said.

In other words, Olson testified the rate of return decision should be based on Northwestern Bell rather than with a view to its parent company's needs. Northwestern Bell is part of the American Telephone & Telegraph (AT&T) system.

Even if the decision were based on AT&T needs, Olson said, that firm is financially healthy and faces no problems with its bond rating under projected economic trends.

"I don't see a drop (in interest coverage) that is of enough significance to threaten the Triple-A rating," he said. "I think that's probably the most concrete way to define the issue."

LaBlanc, an engineer and investment consultant with Salomon Bros. of New York City and a former AT&T employee, offered direct rebuttal of Olson's testimony.

He said Bell subsidiaries and AT&T need dramatic improvement in earnings to compete in the money market for capitalization.

"Hasn't the Bell system debt remained Triple-A except for three affiliates that we mentioned earlier?" LaBlanc was asked.

"Yes sir," he replied. "It's remained Triple-A. How much longer it will remain Triple-A is certainly a question. Several of the other companies (on the Bell system), unless earnings improve dramatically, will be downgraded."

PSC Attorney Ken Nikolai objected to LaBlanc's testimony because the New York City consultant acknowledged it was based on his opinion and those of national investors.

Nikolai said that violated Nebraska's "double inference rule" that bars opinions based on other opinions. Commissioner James Munnely, hearing officer, took the objection under advisement.

The rate of return allowed a phone utility is figured on a rate base established by the commission and those two factors will determine the overall amount of rate increase granted Northwestern Bell.

Although the two terms are closely related, in Nebraska utility law rate of return is not synonymous with profit.

The rate of return is figured as the ratio of net operating income (money paid in by utility customers) to the value of the property in common carrier use (telephones, cables and other equipment in this case) including an allowance for working capital.

Thus a 10% rate of return would mean that ratepayers are annually paying into the utility company an amount equal to one-tenth of the investment the company has in equipment and working capital.

S.D. Patrol Arrests Man Wanted By Slain Agents

Pine Ridge, S.D. (AP)—The South Dakota Highway Patrol arrested on Saturday one of the men named in federal warrants carried by two FBI agents who were shot to death on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, authorities announced.

Tom Coll, an FBI spokesman, said Herman Thunder Hawk, one of four persons for whom agents Ronald A. Williams and Jack R. Coler had warrants, was arrested Saturday afternoon.

But Coll would not say if Thunder Hawk was one of the 16 Indians sought by more than 200 law enforcement officers combating the rugged Indian reservation since Thursday, when Williams and Coler were shot outside a farmhouse where they had gone to serve the warrants.

Thunder Hawk, Teddy Paul Pourfrier, Robert Horse and James Eagle were named in warrants obtained after an incident last Monday in which a man and his son allegedly were held against their will. Pourfrier was arrested Thursday at his home, away from the shooting site.

Meanwhile, American Indian Movement leader Dennis Banks met with the secretary of the Oglala Sioux tribe, Toby Eagle Bull, to discuss a possible meeting with authorities. Eagle Bull said he hoped such a meeting might result in terms for surrender of the suspects in exchange for the removal of federal agents from the reservation.

You Could Spend the Fourth in Bliss—or in Jail!

Snap! Crackle! Pop! is not the sound of breakfast cereal but the accompanying noise of the outstanding annual fireworks display at Holmes Lake Park. The Chamber of Commerce fireworks committee, chaired by Bill Lucky, will present their show at 9:30 p.m. Friday, Independence Day.

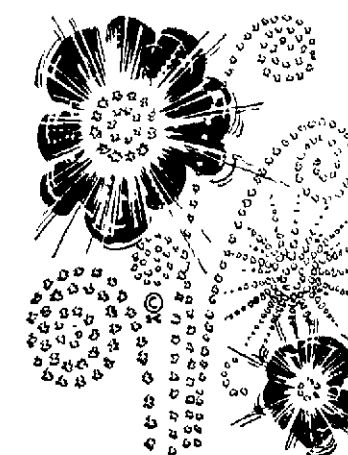

If you're planning a homemade fireworks display this Fourth of July, try to remember safety, caution and one-half grain.

One-half grain is the maximum amount of explosive charge allowed in Nebraska fireworks. Set off anything bigger and you could be spending Independence Day in jail.

The Lincoln fireworks ordinance is even stiffer. It bans all fireworks except lady fingers, sparklers, color fire cones and certain types of color aerial shells.

Midnight on Fourth

Legal fireworks may be sold and discharged within the city limits only between June 28 and July 4. From June 28 to July 3, fireworks may be set off between 8 a.m. and 11 p.m., according to Lincoln's chief fire inspector, Dale Boettcher. On the Fourth, they can be set off until midnight, he said.

Both the federal government and surrounding states allow a greater explosive charge than does Nebraska.

Present nationwide restrictions, in effect since 1967, ban only fireworks containing an explosive charge of more than two grains of powder. That eliminates cherry bombs, M-80s, silver salutes and aerial bombs.

Kansas and Missouri regulations follow the federal law in allowing larger explosive charges, but State Fire Marshal Ace T. Backer advises Nebraskans not to stock up on the more powerful explosives in neighboring states. Crossing state lines with the banished explosives is a federal offense. Any law enforcement or fire official can make the arrest, he said.

Ban Suggested

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission attempted last year to impose new safety standards for fireworks. A complete ban of firecrackers was also suggested.

However, under heavy criticism from the fireworks industry, the commission was forced to postpone further action until legal problems could be worked out.

David Thome of the commission said the group is currently tied up with litigations and other court actions.

So there will be no new federal regulations in time for this year's July 4 celebration, he said. The commission recommends the following safety standards:

Exercise extreme caution. Used carelessly, fireworks can cause painful, possibly severe, injuries. In one recent year, some 6,500 victims were treated in hospital emergency rooms for injuries related to fireworks. Two-thirds of the victims were under 15.

Remember fireworks aren't toys for children. Fireworks packages bear warning labels that their contents should be used only under adult supervision. Younger children especially can not appreciate the danger involved and cannot act correctly in case of an emergency.

Warn children about the very high heat with which sparklers burn. The Consumer Product Safety commission said these devices are considered by many the ideal "safe" firework for the young but it cautions that sparklers can easily ignite clothing.

Do not allow any running or horseplay when fireworks are being used. The commission recalls a two-year-old boy who was burned in the eye when he ran into an ignited hand fountain being held by his sister.

Back in the Old Days, Nebraskans Sounded Off

Referendum Needed for Omaha Campus Plan?

By Jack Kennedy

University of Nebraska's downtown campus might raise $250,000 if it were auctioned off, the governor said.

The money could finance removal of the entire school to the agriculture campus, he added.

Besides, said those who wanted removal, the students already are too close to the corrupting influences of the downtown area.

The arguments flew back and forth at the turn of the century, before Nebraska voters spoke resoundingly: keep the main Lincoln campus downtown, not "on the farm."

Through several terms the then two-house Legislature wrangled, unable to decide what to do. So referendum petitions were circulated.

When the dust cleared in 1914 a total of 66,883 Nebraskans had said put the whole campus on the farm. But 148,110 voted to keep the main focus downtown. The issue was finally settled.

With this historic precedent, would a referendum be a way to determine whether the Omaha campus today should have a downtown continuing education center as well as its existing facilities on West Dodge?

Omaha chancellor Ronald Roskens, NU President D. B. Varner and Regents chairman Kermit Wagner, Schuyler, don't think so.

As in 1914, Varner said, it's an issue the Legislature should resolve. UNO has been given $20,000 to substantiate further the need for a downtown center.

"The whole subject will be reevaluated," Roskens said, "with all the data we can muster. We have to see if the donors would be interested in continuing the commitment which presumably expired at the end of the (legislative session.)"

'Not a Campus'

The Legislature was asked to appropriate $5 million. Omaha construction company executive and newspaper official Peter Kiewit promised $2.5 million to be matched by the community for the $10 million project.

Roskens "would not favor a referendum per se." He reaffirmed that the university is "not talking about a campus," but a building for adult continuing education. Several years ago, he noted, there was discussion of obtaining the old First National Bank building or Omaha Athletic Club for continuing education, so the idea is not new.

Data justifying the project will be prepared for the next Legislature session, President Varner said. He is certain UNO officials have "a sense of community needs" and the project is worthwhile.

Wagner, speaking as an individual regent and not as chairman, said "I just don't believe the figures I saw" on an earlier Jaycee study of possible uses.

Downtown Omaha interests, Wagner said, are "going to try to get any kind of building down there" to help revitalize downtown. Parking space on the Dodge campus may have top priority instead, Wagner said. "Quite frankly, I think these things come first."

He said he would be happy to accept donations for parking facilities.

In the Interim, Lobbyists Go Fishing for Support

By C. David Kotok

Tourists now fill the lobby outside the darkened Unicameral chamber.

They glance through the glass partition into the empty legislative hall to observe the decor and, for Nebraskans, to see where their senator really sits.

Little over a month ago others pressed against the glass to capture the attention of a senator or to watch the votes light up the tally board on critical issues.

The former residents of the chamber lobby and rotunda were the 219 professional lobbyists registered with the Legislature. While they have given up their five-month roosts to the sightseers, as one said, "We have not gone fishing."

At least if they do go fishing in Nebraska, they often use the opportunity to visit a nearby senator.

The pace has changed and the emphasis has been redirected since the final, hectic days of May. Yet, for many of the paid representatives of organizations, groups and government agencies, the work of lobbying goes on.

"The process of legislation is year round," said Charles Noren, a member of the legal and lobbying firm of Tews and Noren.

Virtually all the lobbyists interviewed said their work between sessions has increased with the advent of limited annual sessions.

Apparently the techniques of the various lobbyists differ depending on the nature of the groups they represent and whether they have a bill hanging before the lawmakers that will be taken up next session.

For Noren, the issue of no-fault auto insurance was left in suspended animation on the second debating stage until the presiding officer calls the legislators back to order next January.

"You don't take an issue like no fault and, the minute they adjourn, forget about it," said Noren, who represents the trial attorneys.

Similarly, for Lincoln attorney Charles Huff, who represents the Nebraska Lodging Assn., a bill permitting a special lodging tax is scheduled for first round debate Jan. 14, 1976. Huff's organization opposes the bill and he has advised the membership that the interim is a good time for them to talk to their senators.

Although some lobbyists face the possibility of critical votes on questions near the beginning of the next session, there are many other activities to fill their time.

Paul O'Hara of the Nebraska Catholic Conference won a major victory last session when the Unicameral voted to allow public school buses to transport private school children. Like others, O'Hara found that winning the legislative battle was only a first step and insuring its implementation is the new problem.

He is now briefing Catholic and Lutheran school superintendents on the ramifications of the law and how to use it.

James Preston, executive director of the Motor Carriers Assn., watches administrative agencies closely to study proposed rules and regulations. Those rules and interpretations implementing the laws "can be of utmost importance to us," Preston said.

It appears that lobbyist contact with legislators between sessions is less intense than during a session. Noren said the interim provides a good opportunity to discuss issues at length, rather than particular legislation.

Noren, Huff, O'Hara, Preston and William Swanson, University of Nebraska-Lincoln vice president for government affairs, said they are beginning to formulate legislative agenda for the next session so that legislators can be briefed on the issues.

"These major pieces of legislation don't just pop into their heads during the first 10 days of the session," Noren said.

Another important fact of life for the lobbyists are the legislative interim committees. Several lobbyists noted that the committees have taken on increased importance in formulating positions.

Swanson said one of his tasks is to line up witnesses from the university to appear at the various committee hearings. A larger problem for the university is preparation of a budget for 1976-1977 more than a year in advance.

The Appropriations Committee has indicated it will begin hearings before the start of the session in order to get its recommendations onto the floor sooner.

Huff and Noren note there is more pressure on the lobbyists between the 90-day session and 60-day second session. The relative shortness of the session forces lobbyists to work early and heightens the tension to get a bill through or stopped, Huff said.

Former State Sen. Leroy Bahensky, who represented St. Paul, now semi-retired as a lobbyist for the Loup River Basin Power District, agrees with his more active colleagues, that for the lobbyist working full time the interim is "as busy as ever."

Jeff Kushner and Ann Winger at work in the office of the Nebraska Commission on Drugs.

Drug Commission Traffic Cop For Directing Flow of Funds

To the uninitiated, the Nebraska Commission on Drugs (NCD) is a state agency that does things aimed at combating drug abuse.

To those, people who have a passing acquaintance with NCD's functions, it is the state's traffic cop for federal, state and local funds to fight drug addiction. NCD decides where the money will go and for what purpose.

To Jeff Kushner and Ann Winger, however, NCD not only specifies where dollars go to combat drug dependency, it also provides local counselors with training to heighten the impact of the cash outlay.

"Our primary function is the delivery, through grants, of treatment to chemically dependent people or those people who are abusing drugs," says Kushner, NCD's executive director.

"We are not a direct service agency," the 29-year-old director said. NCD is a comprehensive planning agency that tries to upgrade treatment and rehabilitation, stress prevention and education, and control drug abuse.

Kushner explained that NCD incorporates a two-year training package into its overall program, using $92,500 provided by the National Institute on Drug Abuse in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Ms. Winger, NCD training officer, explains the philosophy behind the training program for counselors in local drug control programs this way:

"We have a responsibility not only to provide them with the bucks to operate, but to see that the treatment delivered is doing the job."

Kushner said the two-year training program, now at its halfway point, is one of the most sophisticated in the country.

"Originally we did a needs assessment that has become a model for the federal government," he said. "Most agencies like ours put together a training package," but he noted that often the program is not flexible or molded to the counselors' needs.

"We built our program around what they wanted," he said. "They have a tendency to buy into that more and increase their skill levels."

An example was provided last week when Ms. Winger, 27, brought in 15 drug counselors and one school counselor for training in client management.

"Client management" translates into individualized and extensive files on the history of an addict or drug abuser to aid the counselor in providing his or her client with help.

The overall training program is designed to provide counselor certification by October 1976. Since November 1974, NCD has reached up to 220 counselors.

Along with client management came training in basic counseling skills, program administration, community outreach and development, drug education workshops and overdose aid.

Most of the people trained come from local drug treatment programs — some of them are former street people once involved in the drug culture — but other types of counselors have been involved.

Others trained include counselors in alcoholism, vocational rehabilitation, school counselors and people from the Nebraska Penal Complex, the York Woman's Reformatory, the State Patrol, community mental health centers, correctional work-release centers and the adult and juvenile probation offices.

Training will continue periodically, culminating for the summer with a criminal justice alternatives workshop in Kearney and for the year with December a national drug prevention and intervention

Lincoln General Parking Bargain, Like It or Not

How would you like to find a paved all-day or all-night parking spot for 25¢?

It must depend generally on where the spot is, according to a Lincoln General Hospital board report on the city facility's new pay-controlled parking.

"One lady apparently was mad enough at the whole idea that she took off her shoe and banged away at the equipment with the heel," Administrator Robert Brungard reported.

There have been similar episodes reflecting annoyed feelings, said Brungard, "and no end of verbal opinions on the whole topic."

Aware that any change is not going to win universal favor, the program in Omaha at which exemplary state programs will be detailed.

Kushner and Ms. Winger see the training as a key method to stretch NCD's 1975-76 state-federal budget, which totals about $450,000 and is mostly to be used for grants that will generate another $1.5 million in matching funds from federal, state and local governments.

Goal: Faster, Better Medical Service

3 City Hospitals Planning Next-Door Doctor Offices

By Bess Jenkins

All three of Lincoln's large hospitals apparently will be providing next-door office-building space for the Capital City's medical profession within the next few years.

City-owned Lincoln General Hospital already is doing this on a small scale through purchase of the former Lancaster County Convalescent Unit building directly north of and connected to the hospital.

St. Elizabeth Community Health Center is completing city requirements to proceed with the first 18-office phase of an eventual 30-office complex. It will be located between the south parking lot and the south lagoon, which faces So. 70th St. and the Veterans Hospital.

Bryan Memorial Hospital is contemplating a 30-office project within the next year or so. It was in planning more than a year ago but was put aside until location needs for the currently completed hospital expansion were filled.

The initial plans will give Lincoln a minimum of 63 doctor's offices, but St. Elizabeth Phase Two's 18 and Lincoln General's unrestricted potential make a final figure unrealistic at this time.

Eight of Lincoln General's 15 offices are occupied now, but this structure could handle another four floors. The two-story City-County Health and Welfare Dept. structure physically connected to the former Convalescent Unit also can handle three more floors.

Administrator Robert Brungard said this weekend that Lancaster County officials know of the hospital's continuing interest in buying the health-welfare unit, once larger quarters are located for these crowded programs.

The hospital board does not operate the office building but delegated this responsibility to the Lincoln General Hospital Assn. board. Both boards are made up of the same trustees, but the association board is maintained to receive gifts, bequests, property, etc.

Monthly rentals and in-lieu-of-tax payments are paid by the leasing association board to the City of Lincoln as the property owner.

Statehouse Perspective

By John Barrette

No Parties for Unicam

The passing of another fiscal year is imminent for Nebraska state government.

No parties will be held to celebrate the waning of the fiscal period as the clock ticks toward midnight Monday evening.

Although there will be no revelry Monday night, Statehouse regulars would do well to make some New Fiscal Year resolutions when they awaken Tuesday morning.

At the risk of being impertinent, a suggested list of resolutions and the people who could make them follows:

Ka-choo

Gov. J. J. Exon — I will stop standing in an open door regarding a 1976 bid for the U.S. Senate. The Democratic party has enough problems on that score without catching a cold from a draft.

Li. Gov. Jerry Whelan — I will stop hoping a draft from Jim Exon's open door blows him into the Senate race and me into the governor's chair.

Unicameral members — We will stop trying to cram an entire legislative session's work into a couple of weeks.

Lobbyists — We will stop trying to cram an entire legislative session's work into a couple of amendments.

State bureaucrats — We will stop trying to stretch an entire week's work into a fiscal year.

Statehouse secretaries — We will stop trying to stretch our coffee breaks into a fiscal year.

Public Service Commission members — We will stop and think.

Statehouse reporters — We will stop and think.

Nebraskans — We will become Statehouse regulars, at least in terms of informing ourselves about state government.

All Stars

About this time of year, people are thinking about All-Star baseball teams.

With sufficient time elapsed since the Unicameral quit its shenanigans, an all-star cast of ballplayers in the legislative arena from Nebraska is offered from this observer's perspective.

Outfielders: Gene Mahoney, Jerry Warner and Jules Burbach, three vets with clout when they come to the plate. Despite aging legs, they guard their respective territories well in the field.

First base: Cal Carsten, who is rangy and misses little thrown his way. A good eye earns him a reputation as a tough man to strike out.

Second base: Roland Luedtke, a classy fielder whose only weakness at the plate is a tendency occasionally to swing at an outside curve.

Shortstop: Loran Schmit, strong arm from the hole, wide range at his position and a team player who occasionally displays power when hitting.

Third base: Ernie Chambers, whose reactions make him a natural at the hot corner. At bat, he goes for the long ball and either connects or whiffs.

Catcher: Gary Anderson, a solid backstop who is reliable at the plate except for short slumps now and then.

Lefty and Righty

Pitchers: John Cavanaugh and Robert Clark. Cavanaugh has speed and sharp breaking stuff. His control is excellent except when his high hard one sails into the batter.

Clark is a junk ball artist extraordinaire. He drives hitters insane with knucklers, sliders and many suspect him of loading up the ball after he wipes his perspiring brow.

Utility outfielders: Steve Fowler and Wally Barnett, who have the speed to protect their flanks but are still learning to hit with consistency.

Utility infielders: Doug Bereuter and Jack Mills, who also share rookie of the year honors. Fielding is Bereuter's bag while Mills is tough at the plate.

Coaches: Bob Murphy and John DeCamp. Both flash signs with style and know some of the game's fine points.

Manager: Frank Lewis, who makes Leo the Lip seem reticent but has the desire to win the big ones.

Solomon Definitely Loser Here

How does your garden grow? Very well for the Rev. Nicholas Nowicki. He has several unusually tall regal lilies. Usually, regal lilies grow to a height of about two feet, but his have doubled that figure. The plants also have an unusual number of blooms, says Fr. Nowicki, and a vaseful fills the house with fragrance.

Unions May Picket VA Hospital

Omaha (UPI) — Carl Holt, international representative of the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE), said Saturday he would not be surprised if pickets showed up at the Veterans Administration
Hospital in Omaha next week.

He said unions at the hospital are unhappy with a current investigation, which was kicked off by a dozen letters to U.S. senators complaining of alleged misconduct, mismanagement and misuse of government equipment.

Holt said he and local union leaders want the investigation broadened but some union representatives who sought to appear before the three-man investigating board were denied the opportunity.

"We are preparing unfair labor practices charges dealing with violations of the executive order (for the investigation)," Holt said. "We have 700 professional and nonprofessional members at the Omaha Veterans Administration facility and, contrary to the order, the administration is going ahead with its investigation without conferring with the unions involved."

If no action is taken within 30 days, he said, the department of labor could move in and make its own investigation.

Commenting on the possibility of pickets showing up, Holt said,
"I wouldn't rule it out but I'm not saying pickets will be out for sure."

He noted federal employees may not strike "but they can picket individually and, of course, we'd protect anyone exercising that constitutional right."

Don't Give Up on An Aging Parent

by Lawrence Galton

When he was admitted to a New York hospital recently at the age of 66, a once-prominent judge was believed to be hopelessly senile. For two years, he had deteriorated rapidly, becoming confused and disoriented, experiencing large memory deficiencies and developing suspicions that people were falsely accusing him of crimes. Several doctors had only shrugged: "At his age . . . senility . . . from hardening of brain arteries . . . nothing much to be done." His family had come to believe it—almost.

Yet, in the hospital, thorough diagnostic studies showed that the problem wasn't brain artery hardening at all but rather hydrocephalus—"water on the brain." Forty-eight hours after an operation to correct the hydrocephalus, the ex-judge was alert, cheerful, oriented, functioning normally.

Treatable conditions

There should be many others like this fortunate patient. Although many families—and many physicians as well—do not realize it, new developments in medical research have revealed that "senility" is too often no real diagnosis at all but only a disposal category, and that treatable conditions often masquerade as "arteriosclerotic senility." They've shown that even when arteriosclerosis is present, much still can be done. Many physicians not content to be merely "clinical undertakers" for the elderly have been demonstrating that often even serious debilitating and crippling physical ills can be treated effectively if only the effort is made—using exactly the same methods that would be used to treat similar problems in younger people.

The discovery of hydrocephalus in older people is recent. Although easy to detect in infants whose still-soft skulls enlarge with excess cerebrospinal fluid, the condition isn't obvious at all in the rigid skull of an adult. Sophisticated diagnostic techniques now are revealing that it is surprisingly common in older people.

Tube in brain

So effective is its correction by much the same surgical procedure used for hydrocephalic infants—inserting a tube in the brain to carry the cerebrospinal fluid around the blockage—that Dr. A. J. Luessenhop, chief of neurological surgery at Georgetown University, says: "For the first time, we can look over those patients who have been abandoned to a life of dependency and pluck them back from oblivion."

Hydrocephalus isn't the only correctable cause of seeming senility. Poor nutrition for the brain—with or without artery hardening—is another. An older person may have a heart too weak to pump enough blood to the brain or may be suffering from an undiagnosed anemia. Sometimes, both conditions are present. When the pumping action of the heart is strengthened by a drug like digitalis and the anemia corrected (with iron, a vitamin, or other measures), dramatic improvement may follow.

Recently, Dr. Arthur C. Walsh, professor of psychiatry at the University of Pittsburgh, has treated patients with otherwise unyielding senile dementia with dicumarol, a drug to thin the blood. With such thinning, more blood may get through narrowed brain arteries to deprived brain areas.

Almost wherever physicians with a will to help the elderly look, they find ways to do so. At the University of North Carolina, investigators have been showing that thyroid gland disturbances, often readily correctable, can produce many senility-like symptoms.

At other centers, a discovery has been made that should have been obvious long ago: that mental depression, common in the young, is also very common in the elderly, and can contribute to seeming senility.

In Wheeling, W. Va., a 78-year-old woman had become increasingly withdrawn and apathetic. She spent most of her time sitting and staring, had to be told to eat and to go to bed. Her children were almost certain she was suffering from progressive artery hardening—until finally an alert physician recognized that she was, in fact, severely depressed. A series of electroshock treatments led to a dramatic change within a few weeks. Less radical treatment in such cases includes drugs and brief psychiatric sessions.

Given a vigorous diagnostic effort, some seemingly baffling physical problems of older people can be solved.

At the Virginia Mason Clinic in Seattle, physicians realized they were seeing a substantial number of older patients who had the same mysterious symptoms: crippling muscular pain, weakness, and low-grade fever. All shared just one detectable abnormality: routine blood tests revealed high blood sedimentation rates. That suggested inflammation somewhere.

It occurred to the physicians that they might be dealing with something that had already received attention in Europe—giant cell arteritis, an inflammation affecting arteries. When prednisone, a drug to combat inflammation, was tried, one patient within 48 hours reported feeling "perfectly well"; within three days, another was out of a wheelchair; on average, all were free of symptoms and back at regular activities within one or two months.

Falls are halted

In Chicago, a 73-year-old woman began to suffer from falls—while waiting for a bus, while standing in her kitchen, at other times. Doctors at Michael Reese and Rush Presbyterian St. Luke's Medical Centers reported the solution for her and for a whole series of patients like her. They found that all had Parkinsonism (shaking palsy) but none had been so diagnosed before because they had none of the classical signs such as stooped, shuffling gait, shaking of hands, pill-rolling motion of fingers. In every one, the falls stopped promptly on treatment with one or the other of two drugs, L-dopa and amantadine, regularly used for Parkinsonism.

Vigorous treatment for such problems of the elderly as crippling arthritis and heart disease has also produced gratifying results.

Recently, at medical centers in Texas, California and elsewhere, patients 70, 80 and older with crippling heart disease unresponsive to medication have been treated surgically. They've come through the operation and benefited virtually as much as the younger patients—despite a common notion, even among many medical men, that advanced age makes surgery too risky.

Successful operations

When almost any kind of surgery is indicated for an older person, the outlook often is excellent. At Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit, in hernia operations on 200 patients 70 years and older, including one who was 92 and one 93, successful repair was achieved in 98 per cent. In a Louisiana community, of 131 elderly persons undergoing surgery for gallbladder disease and in some cases requiring multiple procedures, 98 per cent experienced marked improvement or complete recovery.

But such cases are still too exceptional. What stands in the way?

In the course of several years of research for my new book for Crown Publishers, Don't Give Up on an Aging Parent, I talked to many physicians who go all-out to help the elderly. They recognize that too many physicians have had the wrong attitude toward dealing with the aged.

"We often act as though the passing of a 65th birthday automatically relegates a person to a mothball existence."

Among the reasons: great gaps in the education of physicians about treatment of the elderly; a feeling of many doctors that it is not rewarding to treat the elderly who have conditions that don't yield to quick cures even though they may be controllable.

Doctors involved

But there are bright spots in the picture. A Congressional committee survey a few years ago found no mention whatever of medical care for the elderly in the catalogs of 51 out of 99 medical schools and only 15 of more than 20,000 faculty members identified primarily with the field of aging. Today, medical curricula are being changed.

More and more physicians are entering the field of geriatrics. A National Advisory Council on Geriatric Medical Programs has been organized to stimulate special training. Many medical centers are establishing geriatric departments.

Hardly less important is the need for awareness by the elderly, their concerned families, and in fact all of us who some day will be elderly ourselves. Effective treatment for the aged is possible if people insist on getting it.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN

DOCTORS ARE CONFIDENT THAT NIXON WILL REGAIN HIS FULL HEALTH. IT IS DOUBTFUL, HOWEVER, HE WILL EVER REGAIN HIS GOOD STANDING AS A LAWYER.

NIXON AS A LAWYER—IS HE FINISHED?

Lawyer-members of the Nixon Administration and lawyers who helped arrange illegal campaign contributions to the Nixon Administration have probably fomented more harm and ill-will for the legal profession than the lawyers of any other era.

According to John G. Bonomi, chairman of the special committee on Watergate discipline of the National Organization of Bar Counsel, 27 involved lawyers as of this writing have either been disbarred, censured, suspended, or placed under disciplinary investigation.

In addition to such well-known names as Charles Colson, John Dean, Harry Dent, John Ehrlichman, Jake Jacobsen, Herbert Kalmbach, Spiro Agnew, Richard Kleindienst, Egil Krogh, Gordon Liddy, Robert Mardian, John Mitchell, and of course, Richard Nixon--sadly, too, there are Frank DeMarco, David R. Young, Claude Wild, Gordon Strachan, George Spater, Donald Segretti, Harry Sears, Stuart Russell, Kenneth Parkinson, Harold Nelson, Edward Morgan, John Melcher, Orin Atkins and James Sanseen.

The most publicized of all these legal lights is Richard Nixon, who practiced law in New York City from 1963 to 1968 and subsequently became a $250,000-per-year senior partner in the law firm of Nixon, Mudge, Rose, Guthrie, Alexander & Mitchell.

Last year the California state bar was about to censure or disbar Nixon when he forestalled that action by resigning from the association. He admitted in his letter of resignation that he was under disciplinary action at the time.

Comes soon the disbarment proceedings of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York against Richard M. Nixon, an unindicted co-conspirator in the Watergate felonies. Mr. Nixon is aware of the New York City Bar Association's ongoing inquiry into his past behavior. The inquiry will undoubtedly result in hearings if Nixon chooses to partake in them. If not, he can resign. But if he does resign, he must then admit in his letter or statement of resignation that he cannot defend the charges brought against him on their merit.

Should Nixon choose that course, his resignation will probably approximate the closest confession of guilt he is ever about to make--memoirs or no memoirs--concerning Watergate and the character of his Presidency.

EDUCATION AND HOUSEWORK

The higher a husband's educational level, the more willing he is to help with household chores. The lower his level, the more likely he is to hold that household work is "women's work."

So says John H. Scanlon, professor of sociology at Indiana University, in his book, "Sex Roles, Life Styles and Children: Changing Patterns in Marriage and Childbearing."

Scanlon, with a grant from the U.S. Public Health Service, interviewed 3000 households in Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan and Indiana. His book advances the theory that people grow up desiring particular rewards while avoiding particular costs. Traditionally men have enjoyed the rewards of having a family and a wife to look after the children.

"Now," Scanlon maintains, "women are saying we want more rewards of autonomy and freedom. They want the same things that men have had for a long time. I think," he asserts, "women's demand for autonomy is a fundamental source that is beginning to permeate society."

Scanlon believes that if both parents share the household duties and the care of the children, then the children will emulate their parents when they grow up. "The children," he maintains, "will grow up realizing that there are lots of undesirable tasks that have to be done around the house and the best way to get them done is for everyone to pitch in and help."

As for compartmentalizing "men's work," and "women's work," Scanlon says, "Men and women are more like than they are different from each other. Therefore we should stress their similarities and the fact that they are persons in their own right."

CHINA TAKES UP TENNIS

For years the People's Republic of China scorned tennis as a game of "bourgeois decadence." Two years ago the Chinese changed their outlook, quietly organized tennis tournaments in Peking and Shanghai.

Now, convinced that they have developed players who will not embarrass Chairman Mao, the People's Republic has applied for membership to the International Lawn Tennis Federation. Australia has been asked to support China's application and undoubtedly will. Come July the ILTF is expected to rule favorably on China's request.

If the Chinese are as skilled at tennis as they are at table tennis, a Chinese Jimmy Connors may soon dominate international play.

Stopping the Major Export

Washington — Rural America's chief export for years has been people.

Now, when this rural-to-urban migration trend has been reversed, there are growing fears that the federal government is embarking on a penny-pinching policy of stifling development of small towns and rural areas.

These fears were in evidence earlier this month during hearings conducted by the family farms and rural development subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee.

Witnesses focused on the administration's cavalier treatment of a little-known provision of the Rural Development Act of 1972, a provision many feel will be the battleground on which the direction of rural policies will be decided.

Weighted against billion-dollar urban renewal programs, Title V is but a drop in a Nebraska farm pond with its $3 million of research and development monies spread among 50 states and Puerto Rico.

Landmark Law.

But it is considered landmark legislation, with the potential of charting the future course for rural America.

The land grant universities, especially the agricultural and rural development departments, want the funding increased to at least $20 million annually, the allocation formula changed to give a minimum of $50,000 to each state, and the program made permanent to prevent bureaucratic scuttling.

Currently, Nebraska, at the top of the eight-state pile, gets between $40,000 and $50,000. At the bottom, Wyoming and nine other states get less than $20,000.

However, the administration wants to discontinue Title V research and extension funding, proposing that it be merged into other programs, the Washington way of killing off unwanted projects.

The significance was underlined by Dr. Ronald C. Powers of the Iowa State University, director of the North Central Regional Center for Rural Development which encompasses Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota, among other states.

There is an urgent need, he said, "to invest substantial resources in the rural areas of America in order to enhance, maintain and/or achieve the qualities which will make rural America a better place to live and work for the people who choose to live there — including the many rural elderly Americans who wish to remain in the small rural communities."

He suggested that Title V as a permanent program "could not only provide focus but opportunity for an improved research and extension program balance for rural America by increasing the resources directed toward the objectives of rural development without the need to reduce efforts toward food and fiber production."

Nebraska Votes in Congress

House

Emergency Housing Assistance. By 268-157, the House sustained President Ford's veto of emergency legislation to aid the housing industry and jobless homeowners unable to meet mortgage payments. The House fell 16 votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto.

Supporters argued the bill would create vitally needed jobs to combat the 22% unemployment rate in the construction industry and help pull the industry out of its worst slump in almost 30 years. Tax revenues resulting from new housing production would more than offset the bill's cost, they contended.

Opponents agreed with the President that the bill was excessive, too expensive and unfair to taxpayers who would subsidize large housing subsidies for middle-income families. They maintained that the bill would be counterproductive because families would delay housing purchases in anticipation of the subsidies, but it would take the government months to implement the program.

After the veto was sustained, Congress began work on a compromise bill that would meet most of the President's objections.

Voting to sustain the veto: McCollister (R), Smith (R), Thone (R).

Small Business Safety Exemption. On a 186-231 vote, the House rejected an amendment to prohibit the Occupational Safety and Health Administration from fining firms employing 25 or fewer persons for first violations of health and safety regulations. The amendment was offered to the fiscal 1976 Labor-HHW appropriations bill.

Supporters contended most health and safety regulations were so vague and confusing that small employers could not understand what they must do to comply and that they should be given an opportunity to correct violations before being penalized.

Opponents argued that the amendment would deny federal safety and health protection to workers hired by 90% of the employers and pointed out that many small firms were engaged in extremely hazardous operations.

Voting to exempt small businesses from safety regulations: McCollister (R), Smith (R), Thone (R).

Panama Canal. The House voted 246-164 to bar the State Dept. from using appropriated funds to negotiate any changes in the status of the Panama Canal and the Canal Zone that would "surrender" or "relinquish" U.S. rights.

Under the principles of agreement which form the basis of present negotiations for a new canal treaty, the United States would eventually hand over total sovereignty of the canal to Panama.

Supporters of the move said public opinion was against relinquishing control of the canal and that the House action was a way of "sending a message" to the White House and the State Dept. "that the time has come to stop giving away the Panama Canal."

Opponents argued that the move usurped the President's power to negotiate treaties and that the appropriation bill was not the proper place to debate major foreign policy matters.

Voting to bar funds for Panama Canal negotiations: McCollister (R), Smith (R), Thone (R).

'Children to Be Born in Space'

Los Angeles (UPI) — Space and rocket pioneer Werner Von Braun predicts children will be born in space before the end of this century.

Speaking at a seminar Thursday, the former German scientist who has been a leader in the American space program said he foresees graduate students' completing their studies on the moon.

"And since boys and girls will be both participating in these studies, we can expect the first child born in space before the end of the century," Von Braun said.

Hunger, Population Document Approved

The Great Plains Regional Assembly wound up two-and-a-half days of discussion on world population growth and hunger problems Saturday after approval of an 18-page summary of recommendations and conclusions.

Approval of the document came after nearly three hours of discussion of a tentative draft statement prepared from separate group discussion reports compiled during the conference.

The final report, incorporating revisions made during the Saturday morning general session, will be available in several days for distribution.

The Great Plains Assembly was held at the Nebraska Center under the sponsorship of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in cooperation with the American Assembly of Columbia University and the National Commission for Observance of World Population Year. More than 70 participants from eight states — Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Kansas, Colorado, Missouri, Wyoming and Nebraska — attended the conference, one of several being held on the same topic throughout the United States this year.

Some of the Assembly's recommendations:

—An increased effort should be made to achieve population stability and optimum population distribution between rural and urban areas in the United States.

—Continuation of long-term support for family planning.

—A reassessment of immigration policies to determine the nation's ability to assimilate fewer or more people, and discouragement of immigration from developing countries of highly trained people such as doctors and engineers whose loss would be detrimental to the country of their origin.

—Strengthening of population education programs, with the implications of population growth upon man's existence incorporated into the existing curricula of elementary and secondary education.

—The U.S. should provide sufficient resources to developing countries for both development and population control, with countries which have population control programs already in existence given first priority. The U.S., however, should not adopt a policy of withholding general development aid from countries with rapidly growing populations that are unwilling or unable to institute programs that effectively control population growth.

—The U.S. and other developing nations should give priority to agricultural development assistance over food aid. Direct food aid donations should be limited to emergency relief; while long term aid should be determined by the recipient nation's willingness to develop plans to increase food production and reduce population growth.

—U.S. domestic policies (price supports, indirect subsidies, tariffs, export controls) should be evaluated in terms of counterproductive effects on the agricultural development efforts of the less well developed nations.

—The U.S. should continue to provide technical assistance and financial aid for the building and operation of fertilizer plants in developing countries and for the use of waste materials with fertilizer value. The OPEC nations should be encouraged to use their petroleum products in the production of nitrogen fertilizers.

Emergency food grain reserves should be held to meet emergencies in the world, with perhaps an international agency vested with authority to distribute such reserves and emergency financial aid.

The assembly did not recommend reduction in meat consumption in high meat nations, declaring that such a reduction would have no long-term effects on world food problems.

Roger Vadim, 47, the French film director who has become one of the great Don Juans of all time, is penning his autobiography, "Memoirs of the Devil." In it he will reveal, so he promises, the truth about his love affairs with Brigitte Bardot, Annette Stroyberg, Catherine Deneuve, Jane Fonda, and his latest amour, Catherine Schneider, heiress to the French armaments fortune, by whom he has a new son, Vanya.

Vadim is particularly proud of his fatherhood. He boasts a 17-year-old daughter, Nathalie, by Stroyberg; a 12-year-old son, Christian, by Deneuve; a 6-year-old daughter, Vanessa, by Jane Fonda, and a one-year-old son, Vanya, by Schneider.

"Catherine Schneider," he explains, "is the first woman who is not an actress I have fallen in love with. I guess it's a sign of maturity." Vadim has not yet married her. In his scheme of love, marriage is not essential.

WHO OWNS THE LAND?

One of the most disturbing factors about agricultural land in the U.S. is that the top 20 landowners in rural counties generally own 25 to 50 percent of the land. These owners constitute a fraction of one per cent of the population.

Land in America is falling into fewer and fewer hands while the number of absentee landowners increases. For example, 60 per cent of all the agricultural land in Iowa and Illinois is owned by absentee landowners, which is one reason why family farmers are leaving the land.

Herewith are some of America's major landowners and the acreage they control on a national basis.

CUBAN TOURISM

Come to sunny socialist Cuba --not if you're a citizen of the U.S. of course--but if your country doesn't ban such trips, tourists are welcome in Havana.

Senora Ilia Bourzac of the Cuban Ministry of Tourism has been covering Britain, making her tourist pitch. "We want to show people," she announced, "what has been achieved since the revolution. We not only offer sun, swimming, and all tourist conveniences, but Cuba would like to show other people how we run our system."

"We will take you to inspect our farms, our schools, our plantations, as well as many tourist attractions."

According to Senora Bourzac, Cuban tourism should be fairly well organized by next summer..

OLYMPIC DRUGS AND SEX

Medical officials in charge of the 1976 Summer Olympics at Montreal say that drugs and sex will once again be their main concern.

EATING out-of-doors

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

The barbecue season is here, and the lure of the great outdoors is beckoning us out of the kitchen and to some shady place where a barbecue grill is waiting. We thought you might like to add a couple of "go-with" recipes to your repertoire—recipes to be used whatever your choice of meat. So we offer a hearty salad, cool but filling, that can be prepared and chilled ahead of time and a basting sauce that lends tang and zest to beef, chicken, pork, ham, lamb and other meats.

Garlic bread, heated in foil on the grill, relishes and tall, cool drinks are always welcome, and there is nothing better than wedges of ice-cold melon and a tray of assorted cheese for dessert.

BACON AND RICE SALAD

8 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled	1/4 cup snipped chives
3 cups cooked rice	1 cup thinly sliced celery
1 cup cooked green peas (fresh, canned or frozen)	1/4 cup diced pimientos
	1/2 teaspoon salt
	1/4 teaspoon pepper
	1/2 cup mayonnaise

Combine all ingredients; toss lightly. Serve on crisp salad greens. Garnish with green and ripe olives. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

TANGY BARBECUE SAUCE

1/2 cup finely diced celery	3 teaspoons mustard-with- horseradish
2 tablespoons vegetable oil	2 teaspoons vinegar
2 cups catchup	1/2 teaspoon dried rosemary leaves
1/2 cup dark corn syrup	1/2 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce	1/2 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
	1/2 teaspoon dried savory leaves

Cook celery in oil in saucepan over medium heat until tender. Stir in catchup, corn syrup, Worcestershire sauce, mustard-with-horseradish, vinegar, rosemary, thyme, oregano and savory. Reduce heat, simmer, uncovered, 10 minutes. Makes about 3 cups.

MONDAY, JUNE 30

Your birthday today: Rehearsal, paritice and routine brought to perfection represent the quality of this year. Ambitious projects are fine to think about but definitely out of step with current conditions. Avoid serious commitments until you have no further alternatives. You maintain relationships only by continuing sincere interest. Today's natives are settlers at heart who can bring the most desolate places into production.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: People are pleasanter but less efficient than usual. Don't rush anything, even routine handling. Relax and let others know what you're like away from the pressure of heavy work.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: If you try to push matters into critical stages, you'll miss some important, intermediate steps. Today isn't good for new beginnings. Clear out neglected, half-finished chores first.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: If it takes much energy, this isn't the time to do it. Make use of a relatively dull period to do things that require mental concentration. Find a different but quiet scene later.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Seek verification of references, find more details and avoid promises or loans. Writing drifts away from what you intended and winds up saying irrelevant things you shouldn't commit to paper.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Anything done for the first time generates unwanted consequences. Continue established enterprises at a moderate pace. Allow plenty of time for all to make up their minds.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Recognize the fact that promises you've banked on aren't realistic or likely to be made good. Letting well enough alone is maddening, but trying to do so is well worth it.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Look for better perspective, but let major decisions build slowly and come later. There's lots of troubleshooting if you're restless. See humor in existing discrepancies.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: No amount of coercion is going to get you further ahead any faster than regular procedures permit. Summer down. Cultivate relationships; give thought to your public image.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Pursue outstanding negotiations to the first good stopping place. There are more details to learn about the story before making a final choice.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Stick to what you know and said you'd do. If you're alert, you can spot and spoil a wrong move by a rival. Keep travel to a minimum; start early to avoid unpleasant complications.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Be sure you blow off steam in the right company. You'd be badly misunderstood by people who lack background information. Experiments are puzzling; don't jump to conclusions yet.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Continue along lines already well set and familiar, and don't elaborate. Keeping accurate notes is difficult but essential for future accounting.

Love Goddess To Tour Cities

Florence, Italy (UPI) — A statue of the Greek love goddess Venus will tour U.S. cities as an Italian contribution to bicentennial celebrations. Cultural Assets Minister Giovanni Spadolini said.

He said the decision to send the Venus de Medici to the United States was made during the Rome visit of President Ford June 3 and arrangements have now been completed. He did not say in what cities it would be displayed.

The Venus de Medici, so called because it was bought and taken to Florence by a member of the Medici family, is a marble statue dating from about 300 B.C. and is considered a masterpiece of classical Greek sculpture. It shows Venus as a young woman. Beside her is a dolphin, indicating she has just risen from the sea.

Students Tell Robert Brand To Go Home

Melbourne, Australia (UPI) — Students chanting "Yankee, go home!" gate-crashed a dinner for the U.S. consul-general Robert Brand at Melbourne University Thursday night. The intruders overturned tables of food, smashed glassware and crockery.

Brand, 54, was hustled out of the dining room by his hosts and escaped unhurt through a rear entrance.

About 40 students from Melbourne, Monash and La Trobe Universities were on the campus when Brand arrived to address a student dinner.

Chanting "Yankee, go home," they attacked students who were escorting Brand and threw rocks and sticks through windows.

Brand's wife said her husband and an aide dined later at a city restaurant.

Michelangelo, 10, Retiring

New York (AP) — At age 10, she is retiring. Bidding "ciao" to the Statue of Liberty, the sleek, white Italian luxury liner Michelangelo has begun her last trip home.

An Italian Line spokesman said the 45,911-ton ship will go into drydock at her home port of Genoa, Italy, and then be put up for sale. She and her sister ship, the Raffaello, already out of service, were easily distinguishable by their sampan or basket-style funnels.

With more than 1,300 passengers aboard, less than her 1,775 capacity, the Michelangelo headed Thursday night for her last ports of call — Algieras, Spain; Naples, Italy; Cannes, on the French Riviera; and home to Genoa.

On her barge, a saddened Capt Claudio Couslich gazed out not the Atlantic.

Omaha Desegregation Knutzen: 50-50 Chance Of New Schools Ruling

By Jack Kennedy
Omaha public schools have "at least a 50-50 chance of getting a new U.S. 8th Circuit Court of Appeals hearing on the court's desegregation ruling," says Omaha Supt. Owen Knutzen.

A three-judge panel of the court held earlier that the Omaha board had consciously permitted segregation by housing patterns.

The board maintains in the request for re-hearing by the full court panel that it acted in good faith to maintain neighborhood schools. The circuit court failed to consider an earlier district court ruling, attorneys said, that the Omaha board had not practiced deliberate segregation.

Following a University of Nebraska-Lincoln school law seminar, Knutzen said the court has ten days to replay to the Omaha request.

For 25 Years
The district's current voluntary transfer plan will work, Knutzen said and damage done by any federally mandated plans or suggestions could be worse than the segregation problem itself.

Knutzen who has been a school administrator for 25 years has denied recent rumors he is leaving Omaha. He said 15 years ago Nebraska had 3,000 school districts but since then has voluntarily reduced the number to 1,450. This is a sign voluntary action can work, he maintained.

Nebraska has for several years had more school districts than any other state. Re-segregation is a problem in any desegregation plan, he said, referring to recent studies which show busing plans have not worked for major cities and such things as "white flight" in Atlanta, Detroit and other cities to avoid busing or redistricting have only created more segregation.

The circuit court did not draw its own Omaha desegregation plan as other court have in Denver, Oklahoma City and elsewhere. It did direct Omahans to come up with their own plan for faculty and student desegregation with the first phase to be ready this year.

About 20% of Omaha's enrollment of 60,000 is black. The U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Dept. predicts there will be 67-189 by 1976.

Painful Means
Omahans do not oppose the idea of desegregation, Knutzen said, but doubt that what could be a painful means to that end is necessary.

Owen Knutzen

Earlier in remarks to the seminar sponsored by UNL Teachers College and College of Law, Knutzen said that as a school administrator he is accustomed to being told where to go.

He said after years in the profession he is increasingly discovering that school administrative officers have a diminishing amount to say about what happens.

The extent to which the courts and legislators are taking over what school boards and administrators once thought was their own policymaking role has been a major topic among administrators at the 4-day seminar.

The federal government and the Legislature, Knutzen said, not only tell you what to do but how to do it.

What he called a whole array of legal decisions has complicated the administrator's job. A quarter-century ago the Omaha superintendent said he felt he could have some individual impact on education. He is not as sure of that impact today.

'Grass Roots'
It is ironic, he said, that at the same time the courts and government are diminishing the ability of local officials to make their own decisions, government is promoting the concept of grass roots involvement by citizens in policymaking.

If he were starting all over again today, Knutzen said, perhaps he would go to law school first.

That is becoming possible now at UNL.

Education administration Prof. Dale Hayes who led the seminar is working with Law Prof. John Gradwohl and others on a joint administration law graduate degree recently approved by the NU Regents. There is considerable interest in the interdisciplinary degree program, Hayes said.

As the new degree sequence develops, Hayes said, UNL could become a center for school law authorities.

Hayes has worked actively with the National Organization for Legal Problems in Education, a group of educators and attorneys headed by Marion McGhee, executive director of the Kansas School Board Assn. Topeka.

Home Parade Turnout Successful

The success of this year's Parade of Homes in Lincoln may signal renewed strength in the housing market, according to Charles Brazie, executive vice president of the Lincoln Homebuilders Association.

The 24 homes by 19 builders should attract over the record 52,000 people, Brazie predicted. The Parade of Homes ends at 9 p.m. today.

Nine of the homes have already been sold and builders have taken more than the usual number of orders for new custom-built homes during the first days of the 8-day affair.

Brazie said that he had also noticed that many of the visitors to the homes were looking for modern ideas for remodeling their older homes.

Farming Can't Compare With Reproduction

When academicians, businessmen and others from seven states gathered in Lincoln for an intensive investigation of world hunger and population problems, there were no magic answers.

But Everett E. Peterson, agricultural economics professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, was able to put his finger on one of the perplexities.

The real problem, he told a well-attended luncheon group, "is farming isn't much fun and reproduction is."

Jobs for Arrestees

State Unit Overturns Region Crime Decision

The State Crime Commission in a precedent-breaking move Friday overturned a decision from a regional crime commission.

Involved in the move was a Douglas County project headed by an AFL-CIO official in which workers attempted to find jobs for persons after they were sentenced.

The theory behind the program is that if an arrested person has a job, the judge will have another alternative when sentencing time comes after a conviction.

The Region 1 commission turned down the project after a period of controversy in which its effectiveness was challenged. There were also charges workers in the program sometimes received $3,000 to $4,000 more than other workers in similar positions.

David Marrero, project director, and Frank B. Morrison, Douglas County public defender, defended the program in an appearance before the state commission.

According to Morrison, it would be a "terrible tragedy" to scrap the program, which has been in existence 18 months.

Mike Jackson, a state commission member from Omaha, said only 56 persons had been provided jobs under the program and of those 30 eventually served sentences anyway.

The project was continued but it will have to get along on a reduced budget. The $144,000 in federal funds which had been scheduled for the program will have to be trimmed during the next two months, project officials were told.

NU Minorities Policy Is GI Forum Concern

Concern over the University of Nebraska System's policy toward minority education was expressed Saturday at the annual meeting of the Nebraska GI Forum in Lincoln.

Stan Porras

"We don't think they're fulfilling their obligation to minority education in the state," said Nick Garcia, newly elected secretary of the organization.

NU Regent Ed Schwartzkopf and UNL Chancellor James Zumberge attended GI Forum workshops Saturday.

year: Stan Porras, Lincoln, chairman; Dan Ferreya, Scottsbluff, vice chairman; Frank Palma, Omaha, treasurer; Mini Ferreya, Scottsbluff, women's chairperson.

Power Outage in Five States

Huron, S.D. (AP) — A brief power outage Saturday affected portions of five states and Canada, and was caused by a major disturbance in a power pool area, a Northwestern Public Service (NWPS) spokesman said.

Power was out in South Dakota, North Dakota, and portions of Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota and Canada, the spokesman said.

He said the power pool area affected is served by 21 power companies, including NWPS, Northern States Power Co. (NSP), Montana-Dakota Utilities and Iowa Public Service.

The spokesman said the outage may have been caused by severe oscillations, equipment failure or a severe overload because of hot weather.

He speculated one service line became inoperative, forcing a load on other lines and thus producing a cascade effect.

HOW THE CLUB OPERATES

Yes, it's true! You may have any 11 of these selections for only $1.86. Just mail the application with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment. In exchange . . .

You agree to buy nine selections (at regular Club prices) in the next 3 years—and you may cancel membership at any time after buying nine selections.

Every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest . . . plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing — it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified.

You will always have at least 10 days in which to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days in which to decide, you may return it at our expense, for full credit.

Your own charge account will be opened . . . the selections you order will be mailed and billed at current regular Club prices: cartridges and cassettes, $6.98 or $7.98; reel tapes, $7.98; records, $5.98 or $6.98 — plus shipping and handling. (Multiple unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.)

You'll be eligible for our bonus plan upon completing your enrollment agreement — a plan which enables you to save at least 33% on all future purchases. Act now!

Borrowers Will Be Getting a Better Deal on Escrow

By Leonard Sloane
(c) 1975 N.Y. Times

New York — The establishment of mortgage-escrow accounts has long been a familiar procedure to homeowners throughout the country. Borrowers pay lenders an amount of money each month, in addition to that used for amortization and interest, to provide a fund to cover taxes, assessments and frequently insurance premiums on the mortgaged property.

Recently, however, purchasers of homes have been getting a better deal on escrow payments in some states and the District of Columbia. In certain cases, they are now receiving interest in their accounts, while in others they have the option of paying their taxes and insurance directly.

Lenders, principally banks and savings and loan associations, collect more than $9 billion a year in their residential mortgage-escrow accounts, according to a recent study by the General Accounting Office.

Although this entire amount is not available for investment — since funds are accumulated in escrow accounts in accordance with consumer payments and due dates for taxes and insurance — there is still a vast pool of money in the possession of lenders from which consumers derive no immediate benefit, and lenders receive millions of dollars in interest.

The Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act, which was passed by Congress in 1974 and went into effect June 20, states that escrow accounts shall be established with no more than one-twelfth of the amount projected for a year's taxes and insurance.

And the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, in a reversal of an earlier proposal, announced last month that federally chartered S&Ls had to pay interest on such accounts where state-chartered S&Ls must do so.

Some Successes
Most of the legislation and regulation concerning escrow accounts, though, is on the state level.

Lenders must give excess taxes and insurance back under new law

While laws have focused on interest requirements, many individuals oppose the whole concept of escrow accounts. Their argument is that they are capable of paying their own taxes and insurance — and are as interested (if not more interested) than the lender in making sure these payments are current.

In most instances, borrowers have to accept the practices established by lenders if they want to receive a mortgage. Yet increasingly there are cases of home buyers who are successfully challenging these practices.

For many years, legislation has been introduced in the House of Representatives to end what some congressmen call "abuses of the escrow system." But these measures have been unsuccessful, with no indication that any further changes will come out of Washington soon.

Belgium, Japan Join Express Mail Network
Belgium and Japan have joined the growing number of countries establishing international Express Mail links with the U.S., the Postal Service said.

Service was initiated April 1 between the 409 U.S. cities handling this mail and Belgium. On May 1, the first such service was to start between the U.S. and Japan.

Experimental express mail service is providing next and second business-day service to many parts of the world. European nations in the network are Great Britain and the Netherlands, Brazil, Australia and Hong Kong have also been participating with the U.S. in the network.

Under the program a customer sending a packet of business papers and correspondence weighing 5 lbs., for example, will pay from $35 to $45, depending on the destination country.

If You're Puzzled by New Closing Cost Disclosure Provisions, HUD Can't Help

If you signed mortgage commitment papers on a home after June 20 and are now puzzled by the uncertainties that exist in savings and loan circles about the new federal advance disclosure statutes on closing costs

You have lots of company. Basically the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act requires lenders to provide buyers, in most cases 12 days ahead of time, with a list of these estimated fees and charges.

U.S., Western Europe To Improve, Apel Feels
Singapore (AP) — The economic situation in Western Europe and the United States will begin to improve from the second half of this year, Hans Apel, West Germany's finance minister, said here.

He said recession was bottoming out and there will be reflation and even a minor economic boom next year.

The finance minister said at a press conference that "We in Germany have been successful in fighting inflation in spite of high oil prices. Our inflation rate next year will probably be 5%, and economic growth rate will be around 1%."

In most cases. It's this aspect that's causing confusion to reign. The statutes provide for a buyer-approved waiver of the period, to shorten it to three days.

"Brokers and lenders are in a quandry," notes Joyce Palmer, executive secretary of the Lincoln Board of Realtors. "I predict it will take up to a month to get hundreds of loan closings straightened out."

At Housing and Urban Development regional offices in Omaha, there's just as much fog. Richard Sheridan, an assistant counsel, said he's had no complaints from Omaha, but plenty from Lincoln.

"This waiver thing is really up in the air; I'm advising people to consult their lawyers. It may be a couple of weeks before we get clarifying guidelines out of Washington," he said. "The problem is, the waiver is irrevocable, and some lenders don't want to touch it for fear of a foulup in dates."

Japan's May Car Output Tops That of May, 1974

Tokyo (AP) — Japan's auto output totaled 557,679 units in May, down 3% from April but up 4.6% from a year earlier, the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Assn. said.

Interest in Home Solar Units High

Of Sol is shining some new light on Lincoln's heating and cooling situation.

Increasing fuel costs and questionable availability make the use of solar energy look more attractive all across the country. Lincoln is no exception.

A check of heating and cooling firms in Lincoln shows interest in systems using solar energy is running high. But the general consensus is that the concept will not be practical for at least five years.

Bob Sikyta, owner of Bryant Air Conditioning and Heating, is negotiating for a franchise with Solar Inc. of Mead. Allen Fries, vice president of the Mead company, said Solar Inc. probably is the only company in the country working on a marketable solar energy collection, storage and distribution system.

Sikyta said that when the unit is in production, perhaps in the next 90 to 120 days, the franchise will allow him to have the components to assemble and sell to customers.

Forest Boyum, owner of Forest's Furnace & Air Conditioning, also predicted that systems using the sun's energy would be prevalent in construction projects within the year.

"I may be overly optimistic, but I think this concept will catch on so fast, your eyes will water," he said. "After all, with the recent increases in utility rates, the potential for using solar energy is fantastic."

A Westinghouse study funded by the National Science Foundation (NSF) predicted that solar heating and cooling of buildings will be economically competitive in most parts of the U.S.

Auxiliary at First

By the end of the century, the NSF says the sun could provide more than a third of the energy used to heat and cool buildings, plus 20 to 30% of all electrical needs.

Sikyta predicted that Lincolinites would be able to buy a package system by 1980. Now units must be custom-built to the structure. He said that at first, solar systems would be used as an auxiliary to existing heating and cooling units, to assist during peak load periods.

Heating and cooling contractors seem to share an increasing enthusiasm about the use of solar energy.

After all, it won't pollute or otherwise damage the environment. It creates no dangerous waste products. It won't run out for a few billion years. It can't be embargoed by Arabs or anyone else. It's virtually inflation proof, once the basic set-up costs are met.

Pocketbook

June 29, 1975, Lincoln, Neb.

Yet, there are some drawbacks. Basically, there are too many designs, with no government standards.

Sikyta noted that "Everybody with any mechanical ability at all is coming up with pet designs. The industry is at the experimental stage with no solid approach ... no total package."

Sikyta says he thinks it will take government regulation before there can be consistency in the industry. Research is being done by the NSF, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Housing and Urban Development Dept. and the new Energy Research and Development Administration.

Standards, Cost
Boyum said that at this point, "We're at the mercy of the engineer, installers and builders if a unit is installed," since the government hasn't made any standards.

Another problem is cost. Though savings on heating and cooling bills are estimated to be as high as 50 to 75%, many people might balk at the initial expense, says Larry Barry, owner of Midwest Heating and Air Conditioning, 4139 O St.

"People start figuring up how many years it will take to save the initial cost over a standard system and usually end up thinking that it will take too many years for the system to pay off," he said.

Sikyta estimated it would cost about $5,000 to install just the heating portion of the solar system.

Until solar heating and cooling, becomes commonplace, Sikyta suggests that builders leave out north windows in construction, using better insulation and higher grades of window glass and leaving out sliding glass doors to conserve energy.

Does Firm Pay Transfer Costs?

If You Know You'll Be Moving Often, This Could Be a Critical Job-Choice Factor

By John Gleason

Relocation assistance is becoming an increasingly important fringe benefit offered by firms for young executives.

Dr. Cary Thorpe, associate professor of management for the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, says a recent survey by Prentice-Hall indicates that 94% of the firms questioned provide relocation assistance for at least some of their employees. "Two-thirds of the companies provided assistance to all employees," Thorpe says.

He says Prentice-Hall is one of three major national services that provides research data on personnel policies.

Thorpe notes that 80% of the companies surveyed had a formal written policy concerning the transfer of employees and the expenses that would be met by the firm.

Although most firms provide some type of assistance, the amount and type of assistance varies from company to company and a prospective employer's transfer policy is certainly one benefit that a young executive should be familiar with before accepting a job.

The Employee Transfer Corporation (ETC), which is retained by other corporations to purchase the homes of transferred employees, says a home purchase plan may be the most significant part of a transfer policy, but it isn't all there is to relocation assistance.

ETC estimates it can cost from $8,000 to $12,000 to relocate an employee and says the following questions should be asked about who foots those bills:

How much time is allowed to look for a new house?
Does the company pay for the time spent house hunting? Who pays for moving expenses? Who pays for packing and unpacking? Is there a mileage on shipping allowance for your car? Does the company pay for travel, food and lodging when your family is moved? And does the company pay any expenses for temporary lodging?

Ann Wolf, publicity director of the Kresge Co. which operates the K-Mart store in Lincoln, says her firm pays for moving the furniture of a transferred executive by a recommended moving company.

All Expenses

In addition Ms. Wolf says temporary living expenses are allowed while the family looks for a new home. The company does nothing concerning the selling of the employee's former home.

Barry Combs, of the Union Pacific's Omaha office, says the railroad pays for all the moving expenses of executives. This includes a moving van, lodging, time off to look for a new home and a free trip for the executive and his wife to look for the new home.

Combs says each case is judged individually, and in some instances the old home would be purchased by the railroad. He says this would especially be true in a small town where houses sell slowly.

The transfer policies for blue collar workers are generally the same as the executive policy, he says, but there are variations. Combs says there are 22 separate unions and each has its own transfer policy written into contracts.

Dick Douville, administrative manager for IBM's Lincoln Data Processing Division, says his company pays for an employee's move if the company initiated it.

Douville says IBM pays for the mover's bill and allows up to 36 days for the employee to find a new home. "If they own their own home, we'll appraise it through a local bank and guarantee a price," he says.

He says the employee has 60 days to make up his mind if he'll accept that price or sell it on his own. Douville says the company will then loan the employee the difference between his equity in the old house and the appraised value to use as a down payment on a new home. He says this loan is interest free.

When the old home is sold, the employee then reimburses the company for the loan. Douville says if the employee has to make double payments for awhile IBM will reimburse him everything but the principal on the payments for the old house.

"We don't actually buy the house, but we do take most of the sting out of it," he says.

International Offshore Oil Hunt Has Started

Tokyo (AP) — Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co. of New Orleans and two Japanese firms have inaugurated a joint international offshore oil hunting enterprise in Panama City, the two Japanese firms said.

They said the new firm, Japan Odeco A.M., is owned 50% by Ocean Drilling and 25% each by Nippon Yusen Kaisha NYK Line and Japan Industrial Land Development Co.

The new firm already has one ship type oil rig, transferred to it by ocean drilling, at work off the Brazilian coast, the firms said.

tion notes the federal government may consider these paid expenses as income and the potential employee should also ask if the company will pay him an extra amount to cover the tax liability.

ETC says the most progressive companies will have some type of assistance on the home purchase and that some buy the homes themselves or engage house-buying services to buy the home and place it on the market.

My FAVORITE jokes

by Mike PREMINGER

EDITOR'S NOTE: When asked why he went into show business, Mike Preminger said: "I got into show business watching movies. Years ago I saw the movie Rhapsody in Blue, about George Gershwin. It started at 8:30 and between 8:30 and 9 Gershwin wrote Rhapsody in Blue, Concerto in F, and Porgy and Bess. I thought, that's terrific; if it's that easy, I'm going into show business."

Preminger's comedy, which he writes himself, is sharp, satiric, and in touch with the current foibles—which is a contradiction, since he calls himself "The Turtle of Comedians." He says, "I talk slow, I walk slow, I don't like to make decisions. I was even born on my mother's way home from the hospital. When I was a kid I had a younger brother—he's older than me now!"

Preminger, who will be seen July 26 on NBC-TV's Weekend show, has appeared on TV's Dean Martin's Comedy World, The Tonight Show and at top clubs, including, Mister Kelly's, Chicago; Bijou, Philadelphia, and the Playboy circuit.

Here are some of his observations:

I've been reading a lot of books on self-improvement lately, books that tell you how you can be your own best friend. The first time I went to buy one the guy in the store looked at me funny when I said: "I want a book that tells me how I can be my best friend." "It's not for you," he said.

Actually, I think it would be great to be your own best friend. If you get theater tickets you know who you're going to take.

My father always felt that everyone should dress well. I would be going out and he'd say, "Put on a tie." "But I'm only going to throw out the garbage." "Well," he'd say,

"you never know who you're going to meet!"

Animals have a good social life. They don't have to phone for dates. They don't play sports, except for horse-racing, because they don't have fingers to choose up sides, and they can't flip a coin because they have no change purse. Take dogs—you never heard one dog bark at another and say: "What sign are you?"

I was not a bad ball player when I was a kid, but I wasn't great. They used to choose up sides in baseball and make me official right fielder—and then they'd play no hitting to right.

I went to a high school which was all boys—6000 guys, age 13 to 34, most of them superseniors—a really big sports school. As a matter of fact, you had to be 6 foot 3 to be on the chess team.

I played football for awhile because it was much safer in the field than in the stands.

I don't like nostalgia. Everytime you turn on the TV they're playing old records. Now they have the greatest songs from World War II. They also have great moments in history. You can hear that famous script about the Hindenburg: "It's about to go." Then the announcer says, "My God, it burst into flames," you hear the hysteria in the background and then they cut and another announcer's voice says: "That was one of the great moments in history!"

Someone, a politician, I believe, actually said: "I'm really nostalgic about the future."

I will not pay money to see people perform '50's records, but if Julius Caesar came back alive—now that's nostalgia!

This all leads back to a theory I have which is—there's always a yesterday. I may not be nostalgic but I am slow. I have an ancestor who left Spain with Columbus. He'll be here next week.

Korea, 1951: American troops advance over a snow-covered hill during war against Communists that cost U.S. 54,246 dead and

Will the U.S. Have to Fight Another War in Korea?

by Robert Walters

Would you send your son to fight in South Korea?

As recent polls make clear, most Americans want no part of such a war, though this country is tied to a treaty commitment to defend South Korea.

Ironically, the nation which has been striving hardest to save the United States from again having its troops fight on the Asian mainland is the People's Republic of China.

While China is working to prevent an outbreak of hostilities in the coming months, leading members of the United States Senate are trying to generate support for a long-term solution that would involve eventual withdrawal of American troops from Korean soil and a revision of the mutual defense treaty.

Behind that strategy lies the belief that this country should never again face the cruel dilemma that confronted it in Vietnam.

It was a quarter century ago—on June 25, 1950—that North Korean military forces attacked South Korea, touching off a war that resulted in the deaths of 54,246 Americans and the wounding of 103,284.

That fighting ended with an armistice agreement signed on June 27, 1953. But like a fire thought to have been extinguished long ago which unexpectedly flickers to life again and threatens to turn into a major conflagration, 22 years of uneasy peace in Korea have now flared into increased political tension and military threats.

A Special Announcement For Collectors and Investors From The Hamilton Mint

"NORMAN ROCKWELL'S 12 BEST-LOVED POST COVERS"

A NEW LIMITED EDITION OF PROOF FINISH SOLID SILVER INGOTS
ONLY 10,000 SETS—WHEN THESE ARE GONE, THERE'LL BE NO MORE!

A Strictly Limited
First Edition Proof Set of 12 Ingots in .999 Fine Silver only $13.75 per Ingot.

For over 40 years, Norman Rockwell chronicled America and Americans in a series of memorable covers for The Saturday Evening Post. Since 1916, Rockwell's cover art has lovingly and authentically depicted a colorful pageant of life in America from an age of innocence until the present.

As a permanent tribute to this unique individual and to America, The Hamilton Mint, by exclusive permission from The Saturday Evening Post is extremely proud to present a significant new medallion series—The Norman Rockwell Best-Loved "Post" Cover Collection.

EXQUISITELY CRAFTED WORKS OF FINE ART
With this announcement, you now have the opportunity to obtain this superb collection of 12 solid silver ingots, each one illustrating one of Rockwell's best-loved "Post" covers. Each will be a striking example of the minter's art and faithfully capture the flavor of the Rockwell original. Each gleaming ingot will contain one ounce (480 grains) of .999 fine silver, the finest and purest available.

The ingots will be issued on a convenient one-a-month basis over a 12 month period. At that time, subscribers will have amassed a total of 5,760 grains of silver, more than the average person accumulates in a lifetime.

A STRICTLY LIMITED FIRST EDITION
This "Post" Cover Collection will be a first edition and quite rare. Only one proof set will be issued to each subscriber, and to further enhance the exclusivity of the offering, this edition is limited to just 10,000 sets. After those subscriptions have been filled, the minting dies will be destroyed to safeguard the integrity of the edition.

YOUR PERSONAL SERIAL NUMBER

Each ingot will bear your own personal serial number. Serial numbers will be assigned in the order applications are received, the lower and potentially most desirable numbers going to the earliest subscribers. Each ingot will also bear The Hamilton Mint Hallmark.

You will also be issued a Certificate of Authenticity, attesting to the limited edition status and precious metal content of your ingots.

INVESTMENT POTENTIAL

This collection is certain to be treasured by knowledgeable collectors for its rarity, great beauty and inherent value.

The opportunity to acquire this series in precious metal also comes at a time when prominent advisors are predicting a continued rise in the price of precious metals in the years ahead.

SIGNIFICANT ORIGINAL PRICE GUARANTEE

Under the terms of this offer, The Hamilton Mint is officially committed to deliver to you at the original issue price of $13.75 each, the complete set of 12 ingots over a 12 month period, regardless of how high the price of silver and gold climbs. The Hamilton Mint does reserve the right to limit the edition below the published maximum limits, but once your application is validated and accepted, your subscription is guaranteed.

Please remember that there is a strict limit of 10,000 proof sets, so prompt action is essential if you wish to be included

SPECIAL DISPLAY ALBUM FREE

All subscribers will receive, at no cost, a deluxe album to preserve and display ingots.

Deluxe Edition: 24 Kt Gold on Pure Silver

You may also order these ingots in exquisite 24 Kt Gold on .999 fine silver. The 5,000 sets thus offered will also be individually hallmarked and serially numbered. Each ingot will cost $18.75.

KOREA CONTINUED

Following the fall of South Vietnam and Cambodia, Korea emerged as the focus of attention for all three of the world's superpowers — the United States, the Soviet Union and China.

In recent months, there have been these developments in rapid succession:

Only two days after the Communists captured the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh, the President of North Korea, Kim Il Sung, and most of his military staff showed up in Peking, spending nine days meeting with Chinese leaders apparently discussing war plans.

America's leaders immediately issued a series of strongly worded public warnings. President Ford pointedly emphasized the "fundamental importance . . . [of] our mutual security relationship with the Republic of Korea."

Secretary of State Kissinger said, "We believe that the defense of Korea . . . is important for the security of the whole Northeast Pacific." And Secretary of Defense Schlesinger predicted that if South Korea was invaded, the United States probably "would take more vigorous action than we were inclined to take during much of the Vietnamese war."

Asked about the possibility of "very heavy bombing beyond the extent of the bombing we engaged in in Vietnam," Schlesinger said, "That is an option to be considered."

INDOCTRINATION: Left, North Korean children are trained in warlike ways shooting with toy guns at targets including U.S. soldier, U-2 spy plane and the

I love tobacco. I don't smoke.

If I'm a guy who loves tobacco, how come I never take a puff?

Well, because I use "smokeless tobacco."

All it takes is a pinch of "smokeless" in between my cheek and gum. Feels real relaxin' in there. And I get full, rich tobacco pleasure.

Another thing is, "smokeless tobacco" can't tie up my hands. So I can use it no matter what I'm doing.

If you'd like to go "smokeless," here's what you do. Just look for three great brands.

There's Skoal, my favorite, which has a wintergreen taste.

Copenhagen, a straight tobacco.

And Happy Days Mint. All three dated for freshness.

They'll each give you the tobacco pleasure you're looking for.

The seizure of an American cargo ship, the Mayaguez, by the Cambodian Communists in mid-May gave the United States an unexpected opportunity to reinforce those words with action. The commitment of substantial military power to retrieve the vessel and its 39-man crew was an obvious signal from Washington to the North Koreans that war on their part would not go unchallenged.

At about the same time, the third-highest-ranking official in the Peking government, Senior Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, let it be known in Paris that China was discouraging North Korea's plans for aggression—designed to take advantage of the disillusionment in the U.S. over the Vietnam debacle. Recently, too, North Korea has been running full-page ads in American newspapers stating its case for the reunification of Korea.

Why China helps U.S.

China's unusual helpfulness to the United States is attributable to the fact that it has virtually no fear that we will either initiate military action against them or be able to compete successfully for the allegiance of Socialist or "Third World" nations.

But the Chinese are concerned about the Russians on precisely those grounds. They believe the most effective way of distracting the Soviet Union is to keep it preoccupied with real or imagined threats from the United States.

For example, the Chinese feel far more threatened by Soviet troops on the Mongolian border than by American troops in Korea. As a result, it is in the Chinese interest to keep us politically influential in Asia.

Lincoln Consumer Credit Assn. Is Honored

A project to help students in Lincoln high schools become knowledgeable consumers of credit has earned the Lincoln Consumer Credit Assn. a national honor.

The J. C. Gilliland Award was presented to the Lincoln association at the International Consumer Credit Assn. national convention held in Portland, Ore.

James D. Robbins, local association president, accepted the award, which is presented annually to local associations in recognition of outstanding work.

Robbins, an executive with First National Bank, also has been named Consumer Credit Executive of the Year by the local organization.

He participated extensively in the pilot credit workshop program, which was instigated this year in the four public senior high schools and at Pius X High School.

From 20 to 8 Members of the association met with teachers to determine the information about credit that high school students needed most. A preliminary list of 20 topics was narrowed down to eight that the association felt particularly equipped to handle.

The areas covered include retail credit, credit bureaus and their operation, bankruptcy, services of Better Business Bureau, installment loans, bank charge cards, real estate mortgages and the economics of credit.

The program was twofold — speaker resource persons and student workbook system.

Speakers representing local department stores, banks and savings and loan associations, the Lincoln Better Business Bureau and attorneys make up the speakers bureau. Films also are available.

But the key to the program, Robbins said, is the set of student workbooks and teacher guides called the Family Financial Education Program, which was developed in 1970 by Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago.

Valid Answers

Together the speakers and workbooks help provide students with a basis for making good judgments about credit, Robbins said. Teen-agers today demand valid answers and ones that aren't vague.

Robbins hopes the credit workshop is made part of school programs. "We know there are a lot of credit problems," he said. "Young people may have even greater problems than their parents."

They have little chance to grow up with the right values and judgment if their parents don't know how to handle credit. If a son or daughter can't learn at home, we feel a responsibility to provide information in another setting.

The association solicited funds from merchants to support the program. The program has met with "tremendous approval," Robbins said, and funds are sufficient to assure continuation of it next year.

In addition, he said, local businessmen have indicated an interest in funding three $500 scholarships which would be available to high school graduates over the next three years. One of the requirements for the awards would be completion of a consumer credit course.

Teen Gets Life For Murder

Los Angeles (AP) — A teenager who forced a man to dig his own grave last Halloween before shooting him to death has been sentenced to life in prison.

Timothy Pitcocks, 18, was sentenced in suburban Torrance by Superior Court Judge Bernard Lawler. Pitcocks, of Torrance, had been found guilty in a nonjury trial which ended June 3 of murder, kidnapping, burglary and robbery.

Rosewall Upended By Roche

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Ken Rosewall's dream of winning the one crown he never held ended Saturday on Wimbledon's Center Court where it began 23 years ago.

The 40-year-old second seed was upset, 6-3, 6-8, 8-6, 6-1, by fellow Australian Tony Roche, who advanced to the quarterfinals of the $268,000 grass tournament in a match which ended after two hours, 38 minutes with the crowd giving Rosewall a standing ovation as he left the court.

Roche, the 30-year-old, craggy-faced 16th seed from Wagga Wagga, was making his singles comeback at Wimbledon after having two years of elbow trouble cured by a Filipino faith healer. Seven years ago Roche was ranked second in the world and lost the 1968 final here to Rod Laver.

Arthur Ashe, the sixth seed, also reached the quarterfinals with a 6-2, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2 win against Briton Graham Stilwell that set up the possibility of the first All-American final in 28 years. Jimmy Connors, the top seed, and Roscoe Tanner, the 11th, are the two other remaining Americans in the other half of the draw to Ashe.

Ashe will face third seed Bjorn Borg of Sweden in the next round, while Connors will play against eighth seed Raul Ramirez of Mexico. Ramirez eliminated Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex., 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

Tanner will meet fourth seed Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, who ended the giant-killing act of Sandy Mayer of Wayne, N.J., with a 2-6, 7-5, 9-8, 6-3 victory.

It was 23 years ago that Rosewall first came to the All England Club as a 17-year-old amateur and two years later that he lost the first of what was to be four final appearances on center court, going down to Jaroslav Drobny, 13-11, 4-6, 6-2, 9-7.

Roche easily took the opening set 6-3 but the next turned into a battle of service breaks. There were eight in all but Rosewall got the one that mattered in the 13th game with two superb passing shots, a topspin lob and a doublefault from his opponent.

Choice Track Seats Remain

Plenty of reserved seats remain for next weekend's American-Soviet junior track dual, according to the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce.

Chamber officials indicated approximately 3,000 reserved seats have been sold.

Tickets are available at the University of Nebraska ticket office, the National Bank of Commerce at 13th and N, First National Bank at 13th and M and Gateway Bank in the Gateway shopping center.

Ticket prices are $6, $5 and $3. CBS television has indicated it will broadcast the meet on a delayed basis.

Trevino Match Still Planned

Lee Trevino, who is recovering from burns when he was struck by lightning during the second round of the Western Open on Friday, is still planning on his exhibition match with Nebraska Governor J.J. Exon.

The original date was set for Tuesday at the Omaha Highland Country Club, but will be rescheduled for a later date. Proceeds from the Day of Golf, which will include a clinic and exhibition round, will go to the St. John Vianney Catholic Church in Millard.

Tickets for the event are still available at most golf pro shops, private and public courses and at all Brandeis ticket centers in Lincoln and Iowa.

U.S. Walkers Lobbying For Wider Acceptance

By Randy York

American track fans haven't taken walking into their hearts yet, but Jim Bentley believes it's only a matter of time.

Bentley will be the 10,000-kilometer walk head judge Friday in the American-Soviet Union Junior Track Meet at Nebraska's Ed Weir Stadium.

"The West Germans took a survey at the 1972 Olympics in Munich and the United States listed walking at the bottom or not even on their list of favorite track events," relates Bentley.

But the Van Nuys, Calif., resident believes unfamiliarity is the root of such low popularity. "The Eastern-bloc countries," he points out, "listed walking among their three most popular events in track in the survey."

Walking is among the events Nebraska track fans may be watching for the first time next weekend in the US-USSR dual.

Others include the hammer throw, pentathlon, decathlon and steeplechase as the two countries' best young men and women athletes compete in Lincoln.

What makes the walk an exciting track event? Superb conditioning, unique competitiveness and unusual strategy, according to Bentley.

"The Russians hold something like 92 per cent of the world records in walking," he points out. "They're unbelievable strategists. They'll talk while they're walking, but for a reason. They know exactly what the other is doing."

Seventeen-year-old Steve Casarella of White Plains, N.Y., who will represent the United States in next weekend's competition, has equal praise for Russian strategy.

"They're definitely the world's best walkers," Casarella says. "The Soviet strategy in the past has been to work together and separate the Americans. They did it last year and literally destroyed us."

The Americans are learning from their mistakes though, insists Casarella, who started competitive walking as a high school sophomore. Casarella and America's other junior walker, 17-year-old Jim Marchie of Manhasset, N.Y., tried the same work-together strategy in qualifying competition two weeks ago at Knoxville, Tenn.

"We tied. We both were clocked in 53:50.7. They just gave the win to me," says Casarella. "We worked it together the whole race — just like the Soviets. We plan to do the same thing in Lincoln."

Casarella believes "anyone can run. In walking, you have to restrict yourself. It's a psychological event. Everybody asks me if I get the urge to run by a guy. Yes, I have, but you know you can't risk disqualification."

According to Bentley, a walker must straighten each leg on each stride. The knee must lock when it comes directly underneath the athlete's body and both feet must be on the ground at all times.

When both feet are not on the ground, the violation is "lifting" or "floating," according to Bentley. Bent legs or unlocked knees are "creeping" violations.

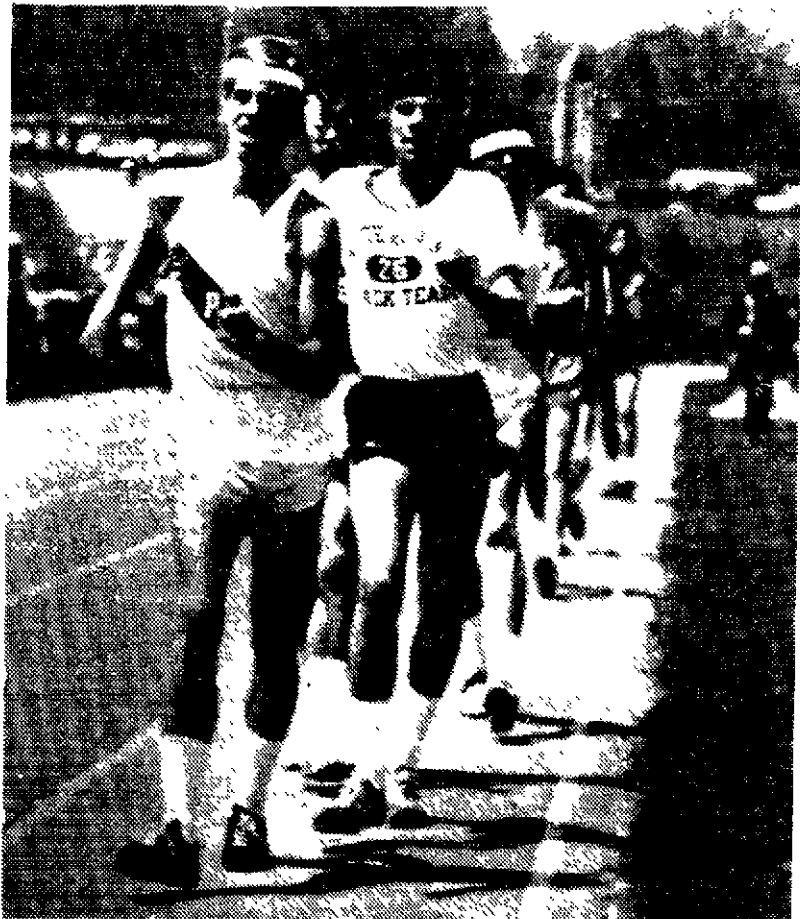

Walkers are allowed one warning. A second infraction constitutes disqualification.

Casarella, who has accepted an appointment to attend West Point (N.Y.) this summer, has been doing speed walking to prepare for the Russians.

"You walk 10 quarters as fast as you can," he relates. "My brother (a sophomore at Bowling Green) has been running in front of me these past two weeks to get me going faster and faster."

"Distance walking by yourself can get very boring. You can almost fall

Bahensky Downs Olson for Men's Match Title

By Virgil Parker

Bellevue — Dan Bahensky, current Lincoln city champ, established a commanding lead early, then coasted to a 7 & 5 victory over Omahan Tom Olson to win the Nebraska Men's Amateur Match Play Golf Championship here Saturday.

The 36-hole title match played over the demanding Capehart Golf Club layout — a part of Offutt Air Base — was actually settled during the first nine holes in the morning round when Bahensky grabbed a four-up advantage.

Olson, exceptionally sharp with his short game and putting during the first two days of play while the original field of 32 was whittled to the final pair, lost his touch against Bahensky.

A chip and one putt was all Olson needed if he missed a green in regulation while sideling half the Oklahoma State golf team in his early matches. Pre-tourney favorite and defending champion Tom Sieckmann, Larry Sock and Mark Winstrom were three of his first four victims. They are all mates at OSU.

"I could get it up and down from a garbage can the first two days," Olson admitted. "But my hot putter finally left me."

Bahensky continued to play the same steady golf which carried him to the finals.

Though not touching a golf club until May 10th this spring because of the demands of his law school studies at Nebraska, Bahensky extended his commanding lead to 7-up through the first 17 holes.

Olson then birdied No. 18 to cut the deficit to six at the lunch break.

"I played those first 17 as well as I've ever played any stretch of holes in my life," Bahensky observed later. "I was driving long and straight and my chipping and putting was as good as I can hope for. I didn't miss anything that I should have made, and made a couple that I shouldn't have."

Olson made a bid to get back in the contest at the outset of the afternoon round. After they both parred No. 1, Olson birdied the second to cut the margin to five.

Then came No. 3, which turned out to be the most decisive hole of the match.

Olson hit the green on the three-par hole while Bahensky was wide right, above the cup.

Dan's chip shot skidded down the incline and off the green on the far side. The best he could hope for would be a bogey four.

Olson just needed a two-putt effort from

Dan Bahensky

12 feet for his second straight win and the margin would be down to four.

But his putt also slid past the cup and five feet past. They halved the hole with

Van Berg Scores Again; Gray Bar Wins

By Mark Gordon

Omaha — Whenever you discuss Jack Van Berg, the words favorites and prestige are synonymous. Who ever uses the terms underdog and surprise?

But like anything else in life, you can't discount a master who wins everything at Ak-Sar-Ben, including 16 straight years as leading trainer.

"This has been a cinderella horse for me this year," he beamed Saturday after saddling his Gray Bar to an upset victory here in the $106,375 Omaha Gold Cup Stakes at Ak-Sar-Ben. "I purchased him near the end of the Fair Grounds meet in New Orleans this year for quite a bargain."

"He kept bolting at the start so I gelded him and that seemed to help him," Van Berg said. "Let's face it, I didn't have much ammunition at the start of the year. From the first of January, I haven't had a very good year. But I've had some understanding owners that put me on my feet."

Imagine that — Jack Van Berg in an underdog's role.

With Gray Bar a 14-1 choice in a field that included the Preakness winner Master Derby (who finished third behind My Juliet), it seemed that Van Berg would still be an also-ran in his quest for his first $100,000 race.

Wait. Jockey Ken Jones had the gray gelding out second of the 11 3-year-olds bidding for the richest Gold Cup Stakes ever.

As expected, George Weasel's My Juliet set the early pace of the mile and 1/16th chase with fractions of :22 3-5; 46; 1:10 2-5 and 1: 36 2-5.

Near the end, however, she tired a little and Gray Bar, under an excellent ride by Ken Jones, breezed past to win by two lengths.

My Juliet held on to stop Master Derby by a neck for third. Still, the race was not official as Allan Hill. My Juliet's rider, lodged a claim of foul against Gray Bar.

"He (Gray Bar) bumped me at the eighth-pole. She came back running again, but it threw her off stride," Hill said. "I guess I was leading at the eighth-pole."

The stewards ruled otherwise and Jack Van Berg had won his first $100,000 race in a career that has seen him win the national trainer's title.

After Gray Bar's regular rider, Mary Bacon, left here to ride at Hollywood Park, Van Berg was faced with a choice of riders. He narrowed his final verdict down to Ken Jones, R.A. Smith and Jerry Engle.

"I tried to visualize which one would be right. I guess I made the right choice," he said. As usual with Van Berg, he was absolutely correct.

"He (Van Berg) told me to lay second or on the pace," Jones said. "It was a slow pace. I tried to slow it down and that's what happened. Once we hit the stretch I had plenty horse left."

Jones, who admitted "it's been quite a while since I've even had a ride in the $100,000 race," said he has won $50,000 races previously.

Van Berg was happy to win the $100,000, but he admitted it carried special significance capturing a biggie at Ak-Sar-Ben.

"Yes, I'm glad I won it here," he said. "This is like home. I told him (Jones) not to worry about My Juliet. He's got enough speed and don't worry about the rest."

"He (Master Derby) was the class horse, but I didn't give him any instructions about Master Derby," Van Berg continued. "Anytime, you take an underdog it gives you a good feeling."

Van Berg said he gave Gray Bar a one-eighth mile blowout early Saturday morning. He added that his horse will probably run next in the $50,000-added President's Cup over a mile and one-eighth here on July 12.

For Master Derby, the 3-5 favorite of a record Omaha crowd of 30,803, it was yet another failure for an import. The saying here is that imports don't win major races — not even a class horse such as Master Derby.

"We pulled even with the leaders at the eighth-pole," noted Master Derby's rider Darrel McHargue, who flew here from Monmouth Park in New Jersey. "But that's as far as we got. We had to lay off the pace farther than we wanted."

"We had planned to lay fourth of fifth and four or five lengths behind," he explained. "Instead, we're seventh or eighth and about 10 behind. We go four wide at the top of the stretch."

McHargue said Master Derby did not handle the track. That had been his speciality — handling any kind of track in any location.

"He was kind of running out. He wasn't handling it like he usually does," said McHargue, who has ridden Master Derby to five wins in eight tries. "It seemed like in the first turn he wasn't exerting himself."

Master Derby has won $461,895 in his career — the most any horse at Ak-Sar-Ben has ever won. He captured the $150,000 Preakness Stakes and the $100,000 Louisiana Derby at the Fair Grounds.

But Saturday he was a little short in his quest for the first of Ak's two $100,000 chases.

Nevertheless, he received the most mutual action any horse here has ever received. The crowd wagered $115,741 of the record one-race handle of $278,347, which bettered the previous mark of $245,791 on last year's Cornhusker Handicap.

In fact, the total handle of $2,020,871 was the largest ever for a nine-race program and the second largest ever. It was the richest Ak race ever.

For Gray Bar, he moved right up the claiming ranks. Van Berg ran him for $6,500, $9,000, $15,000, allowance and handicap stakes (a third, later second through disqualification) in the 4-H Handicap here on June 14.

That's a pretty steep jump. Anything, however, is possible with a Van Berg horse.

The win was Gray Bar's fourth in nine 1975 efforts (with one second and one third). It was worth $58,506.25 and boosted Gray Bar's 1975 earnings to $64,960.

Gray Bar, coupled with Flawless Finish as a Van Berg entry, returned $30 60, $9.00 and $3 80. My Juliet who earned $20,211.25 for second, returned $6.00 and $3 20 and Master Derby, who earned $14,892.50, showed for $2.60.

Western Open Halted Again

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — The second round of the Western Open was postponed for a second time Saturday with Butler National Golf Club "unplayable" after heavy rain, while golfers Lee Trevino, Bobby Nichols and Jerry Heard, lucky to be alive after being struck by lightning Friday, remained hospitalized.

Trevino, Nichols and Heard were moved from the intensive care unit at Hinsdale Hospital to private rooms. Dr. Paul Fredrickson, saying it was "quite phenomenal" the three survived, added they were "in good conditions." He expected all to be released from the hospital Sunday.

Meanwhile, they were denied visitors and phone calls.

Postponement of play Saturday ran the rain problems on the pro golf tour to three straight weeks.

was beginning to wonder if it was going to happen all over again — only worse."

Olson went over to Bahensky at the 13th tee and whispered something. They both chuckled.

"He told me he'd like to 'press,'" Bahensky related later. When golfers fall behind in a friendly bet on the golf course, they will "press" — or double the bet — to catch up.

"Tom wanted to get credit for two holes every time he won one to catch up quicker," Bahensky laughed.

There was to be no more, however. Bahensky smashed a long drive and hit a four-iron just over the green of the 553-yard five-par hole. Olson had tree troubles and the match was over.

Olson, a practicing attorney, observed that "Dan is playing so well he must have been neglecting his law school studies," he joked. "I think I'll report him to the bar association."

The victory was Bahensky's first match play crown, although he won the state medal title in '72 and was runnerup last summer.

captured USS Pueblo. Right, a school gala includes chorus and orchestra praising President Kim Il Sung whose flower-bedecked picture hangs on wall

In the long run, however, the United States obviously cannot rely upon China to resolve its problems in Korea, which is why members of the Senate are proposing the withdrawal of U.S. troops.

In a recent television interview, Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana suggested that arrangements could be worked out over a period of time so that we would not be bound through the use of approximately two divisions stationed in Korea to the future of that country.

Less than a week later, Sen. Alan Cranston (D-Cal.) said of our troops in South Korea: "We can't pull them all out precipitously, but we cannot be involved there indefinitely, or sure, we will be involved in a ground war in Asia and again with a corrupt military dictatorship."

That reference to the lack of democracy in South Korea brings up another touchy issue for the U.S. During the past 18 months, South Korean President Chung Hee Park has issued nine "emergency decrees" which have suspended constitutional guarantees of freedom.

In each case, the decree was issued ostensibly to protect South Korea from invasion. But their principal effect has been to alienate students, intellectuals, the news media and other key elements of South Korean society.

Sees 'authoritarianism'

Concern about political repression in South Korea last year led one high-ranking U.S. foreign service officer to take an unusual step. Arthur W. Hummel of the State Department's Bureau of East Asian and Pacific Affairs told a Congressional hearing: "I would have to agree that the trend in Korea is toward authoritarian government."

The Koreans in both halves of the divided country are, in the words of one United States official, perhaps the fiercest, toughest, most independent people on the face of the earth. To defend itself, South Korea maintains an army of almost 600,000 men, supported by a sizable array of tanks, missiles and jet fighters, most of which have been supplied by this country.

The North Koreans are believed to have about 400,000 troops, backed up by Soviet Frog missiles and 600 combat planes, including more than 100 Russian MIG 21 jet interceptors.

Since 1972, the North Koreans have constructed a network of tunnels beneath the 155-mile-long demilitarized zone which divides the two countries.

Two of the tunnels have been discovered by the South Koreans. They are six feet high and 16 feet wide. They would allow troops to move undetected into South Korea at a rate of about 30,000 an hour.

The U.S. Army has an authorized level of 42,000 combat and support troops deployed across the frontier just south of the DMZ. Those ground troops are backed up by tactical nuclear weapons, surface-to-air and surface-to-surface missile units and three squadrons of Air Force fighter bombers.

But most Americans obviously don't want their sons and brothers fighting again in Pusan and Inchon, the Iron Triangle and the Punchbowl. For them, the lesson of Vietnam is that United States involvement in another Korean war would prove another national tragedy.

Sieckmann Update

Bellevue — Tom Sieckmann has an orange golf bag. Before he transferred from Nebraska to Oklahoma State he had a red one.

"I was threatened in a friendly way the minute I got to Stillwater," Tom admits. Red was a double no-no. Not only is that Nebraska's color, it belongs to his new cross-state rival, Oklahoma.

Sieckmann insists that the move has been very beneficial to his game, even though he was knocked out of the Nebraska State Medal Play Championships here during the semifinal round Friday afternoon.

"Just playing the game on a year-around basis is part of the answer," Sieckmann says. "You've gotta play all the time if you hope to excel."

"Secondly, Coach (Lebron) Harris is an excellent teacher. He has spent a lot of time with me this past year. He completely changed my swing. It's a lot more solid on top and much more compact. Generally, I'm hitting the ball better than a year ago, although you wouldn't have thought so to watch me when I lost Friday. You can't shoot 75 or so and hope to win against good players."

Crazy Weather

Sieckmann, who won both the match and medal play state championships last summer, says he managed to play three or four days a week — even in the winter.

"The weather down there is funny," he admits. "Some days it will be 30 degrees and the wind blowing a hundred miles an hour, yet three or four days during the same week will be good enough to play golf."

Though Sieckmann was ineligible to play on the Cowboy team because of transferring, he did play in six national tournaments.

His best finish came in the prestigious Sunnehanna in Johnstown, Pa. The tourney includes all the state champs, winners of such major events as the Southern, Western and Trans-Miss, plus all the Walker Cup players and the top 15 finishers from the national amateur.

Sieckmann had the lowest single round in the entire tournament (a 67) and wound up tied for sixth in the final standings.

Won't Defend Title

Sieckmann won't be on hand in Alliance in late July to defend his Nebraska state medal play crown. And, unfortunately, he won't be the only top contender missing from the Alliance tourney.

The Trans-Miss, one of the nation's 'biggies', will be held in Kansas City this year. The conflict often occurs, but seldom is the Trans-Miss so close by. The urge to see how they can do against the nation's best is too great a challenge to resist.

Tom, fellow Oklahoma State golfer Larry Sock of Norfolk and Mark Winstrom of Omaha and Craig Moyer, a University of Nebraska golfer from Wood River are "for sure" entries in the Trans.

In addition, Lincoln city champ Dan Bahensky, who won the state match play title yesterday, can't go to Alliance because of a summer session course at the law school. Omahan Ken Deckert, who has been a close contender the last couple of years, can't get off work to attend.

That whole group was among the leaders last summer at Fremont. Sieckmann won it, Bahensky was second, Tom Olson, the other finalist yesterday in the match play affair, was third a year ago in the medal tourney and will thus be the highest finishing returnee.

Don't think the Alliance test won't be an interesting chase. Olson will get all the challenge he wants, and maybe more, from the likes of Lincoln's Mike Ley, Cozad's Jim Brownfield, Gary Gruenemer and Jim Bartak of Omaha and a host of others. The medal play tourney still carries the greatest honor, but the match play affair is coming up in prestige. Most states have both. It's good to see them reaching an equal plateau.

Kirkpatrick Sprint Ace

Knoxville, Ia. — Larry Kirkpatrick of Wood River, Ill., was the happy recipient of four restarts, the result of four separate accidents in the feature event at the Knoxville sprint car races Saturday night.

Kirkpatrick appeared to be out of contention as he was laying back in fourth place after the first six laps of the night's finale, when an accident knocked out the first three cars in the race, and moved Kirkpatrick up to first for the restart, a position he kept for the rest of the night.

With hot muggy weather making the track treacherous, and added bonus prizes for this the Mid-Season Championships, perhaps causing the drivers to take extra chances, the fans were treated to a lot of thrills in the evening's races which drew the largest field of the year, 55 cars.

Hospitalized from the evenings accidents, but none believed to be injured seriously, were Ray Lee Goodwin of Polo, Mo., Jim Edgington of Fairmont, Minn., and Bob Fisher.

Elmer Shamberg makes a return Saturday en route to a 6-2, 6-1 win over Pat O'Dougherty in the semifinals of the 55 and older division of the Kiwanis Tennis Tournament at Woods Park. Shamberg will meet Barry Jackman at noon Sunday for the tourney championship. There has been a Shamberg in the Kiwanis tourney since 1915.

Sports Briefs

Golf

Jay Haas of Wake Forest carded a 70 Saturday for a 282-stroke total to win the NCAA golf championship and lead his team to a 33-stroke advantage over runnerup Oklahoma State in the team standings at Columbus, Ohio.

Alabama's Jerry Pate (283), Wake Forest's Curtis Strange (284), Oklahoma State's Lindy Miller (290), Wake Forest's Bob Byman (290) and Oklahoma State's Tom Jones (290) ranked behind Haas. Southern Cal and Alabama tied for third in the team race.

Kathy Whitworth shot a hole-in-one Saturday at Toronto in the $60,000 LPGA Peter Jackson Classic and assumed a 2-shot lead at 140. Jan Ferraris, Judy Meister and Sandra Haynie ranked next, each at 141.

Bowling

Gary Dickinson recorded two straight 279 games Saturday to take a 16-pin lead in the opening set of the $50,000 Western Airlines tourney at San Jose, Calif.

Baseball

Sports writer Bob Ryan of The Boston Globe, who wrote a sharply critical column about the Red Sox last week while the team was on the road, was chased out of the clubhouse after Boston's 8-6 loss to the New York Yankees Saturday.

In the aftermath of another sportswriter-clubhouse altercation, Detroit Tigers' manager Ralph Houk was released from police custody on his own recognisance Saturday, pending a Sept. 24 trial in Baltimore on charges of assaulting a sports writer in the Tiger lockerroom Friday night.

Former major league pitcher Dave McNally remained in fair condition at Sinai Hospital in Baltimore Friday, awaiting the results of tests to determine the cause of a 10-day siege of hiccups.

Football

Quarterback Joe Gilliam has signed a two-year contract with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The NFL Players Union protested Saturday against the decision of the pro football owners to cut back team rosters this season from 47 to 43. They also condemned the owners vote that any player placed on the injured reserve list would be ineligible for further active duty during the season.

Injury Fails To Keep Vaulter From Meet

Walkers Seeking Changes

By Dave Sittler

Gary Hunter still finds it a little hard to believe he's earned a spot on the USA track team which meets Russia Friday and Saturday in Lincoln.

The way things went his freshman year at Southern Illinois University, Hunter is surprised he's still able to pole vault.

"It all started when I cracked my wrist during the indoor season," Hunter recalled during a phone conversation from his home in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Determined not to let the injury deter him, Hunter taped the wrist and cleared 16-0 on his first try.

"The doctor wasn't at all pleased when he heard about that," Hunter said, "so he made me quit."

Sufficiently recovered from the wrist ailment, Hunter started working himself back into shape at the Carbondale, campus when he contracted mononucleosis.

"It's been that kind of year," Hunter said. "I was out for six weeks because of mono. And that's considered a quick recovery."

Hunter battled his way back from the second setback in time to win the Missouri Valley Conference outdoor vault crown after finishing third in the NCAA indoor meet in Detroit.

Then came the peak of Hunter's vaulting career, when he cleared 16-6 at the AAU Junior boys final in Knoxville, Tenn., to earn his trip to Lincoln.

"You wouldn't believe how excited I am about coming to Lincoln and facing the Russians," the enthusiastic Hunter said. "I was hoping to make the team last year, but the qualifying meet was in Florida and I couldn't afford to go."

The 19-year-old Hunter says missing a chance to compete in the USA-USSR meet two years ago is his greatest sports disappointment.

"I could only clear 15-6 during the qualifying meet," Hunter recalls. "After the meet I went back and tried it again and cleared 16-6. But it was too late."

Now that he's finally made the USA team, Hunter is worried about his chances against the Russians fearing another injury. "I sprained my ankle right after the Knoxville meet and haven't been able to vault since," he said.

Hunter's latest injury happened in his own backyard

where he has set up a vaulting area

"It's a pretty decrepit place with a bunch of foam for the pit and some tires around," Hunter explained. "I came down on one of the tires and really sprained the ankle severely."

A two-week layoff has Hunter concerned about the USA-USSR meet, but he adds, "I've been able to run a little to keep my speed in good shape."

Running was all Hunter had planned on doing when he first became interested in track in junior high school. Distance running was his first love.

"I'd always watch the pole vaulters when I was running," he said. "It always looked like they were having a lot of fun so I decided to give it a try."

Clearing 8-6 in the seventh grade, Hunter rapidly improved and by the end of the eighth grade he owned a 12-6 mark.

Competing for Northrop Senior High School in Fort Wayne, Hunter was the Indiana state champion his senior year and had a high school best of 16-9 1/4 which he cleared in an open meet.

Offered track scholarships by Auburn and Tennessee, Hunter decided on Southern Illinois because of assistant track coach Jan Johnson.

A former pole vaulter for the University of Kansas, Johnson finished third in the 1972 Olympics, a factor that influenced Hunter's decision.

"I figured he'd (Johnson) be able to help me with my technique as much as anyone," Hunter said, "and I haven't been disappointed. I'm very happy at Southern Illinois."

The only disappointment so far has been the injuries, which have stopped Hunter from reaching his goal of clearing 17-6 this year.

"The injuries really set my improvement program back," he said. "But I almost made 17 feet at Knoxville and that's what I'll be shooting for in Lincoln."

Hunter, who plans to leave for Lincoln Monday, entered a small open meet Saturday in Goshen, Ind., where he wanted to get warmed up for the USA/USSR meet and try a little vaulting on the ankle.

"I want to be at my best in Lincoln. I've been waiting a long time for this meet."

asleep doing it," according to Casarella. "I've been working most on speed because the Russians are race walkers. They'll lay back, bore you, then burst right by you, leaving you in the dust."

Murchie's already been such a victim of the Russians. He qualified first for last year's junior competition and finished a full lap behind Russia's two walkers (who tied for first). America's other walker finished two laps behind.

Larry Young, who has won the bronze medal in the 50-kilometer walk in the past two Olympics at Mexico City and Munich, has helped hypo American interest in walking.

But competitor Casarella and judge Bentley agree more must be done.

The NAIA has sponsored walking competition in its national meet for the past three years. Bentley's son, Jim, a freshman at Eastern New Mexico and former American walker in the Russian junior meet, finished second in the NAIA walk competition last spring.

"The best thing that could happen for walking in this country would be for the NCAA to adopt it," Bentley believes.

"Then every college would want a walker and that, in turn, would trigger interest in the high schools and eventually junior high schools," reasons Bentley.

Ron Laird, 3-time Olympic walker, might assist Bentley in judging the American-Soviet junior dual. Laird has won more than 100 AAU championships, more than any other athlete in any sport.

Jackson Sets Women's Mark

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — Madeline Manning Jackson, the 1968 Olympic 800-meter champion from Cleveland, capped a successful comeback here Saturday in the National AAU senior women's outdoor track and field championships.

Now a 27-year old mother engaged in social work for the Salvation Army in her home town, Mrs. Jackson won the 800-meter run in a U.S. and meet record time of 2:00.5. She broke her own marks—the U.S. standard of 2:09.9 set in 1968 and a meet mark of 2:03.6 set in 1967.

Kathy Weston, the AAU indoor 880-yard champion from Reno, Nev., was the runnerup in 2:02.9 and Cheryl Tussaint of the Adams Track Club of Brooklyn was third in 2:03.1.

Cleveland track coach Al Serenczy, a refugee from Hungary in 1956 who will coach the U.S. women's Olympic track team in the 1976 games, predicted after the race that his prize pupil would be ready to make amends at Montreal for not qualifying for the Olympic 800 final in the 1972 games at Munich.

CAMBRIDGE ANTI-RAPE PATROL
READY TO PROTECT GIRL STUDENTS

Bedroll Brigade

Male undergraduates at Cambridge University in England, where there have been seven rapes in the last seven months, have organized anti-rape patrols to comfort frightened girls.

The volunteer effort works as follows: Prospective recruits are solicited via posters circulated around Cambridge University. The posters read, "Please help. What may be a slight inconvenience to you may be a life saver for some girl."

After the recruits are checked out, they're sent in pairs, carrying their sleeping bags, to protect the honor of the Cambridge maidens.

So far the female undergraduates at Cambridge University are overjoyed by their chivalrous knights. Reports one girl: "It's very reassuring to have two hefty men sleeping in your lounge."

The female students are not the only ones who are frightened. David Malin, aged 20, spent the night on a couch in an apartment shared by two 20-year-old females. He unashamedly admits, "I was frightened and tense all night because this is no joke—the girls in this city are scared stiff."

Come September, American universities located in high crime areas might consider instituting a similar "sleep-in" program.

Mead's Warning To Youth

"...I think what's going to have to be done in the next three or four years is for everyone, but especially for the students who are just entering the world, to reevaluate the whole position in this country that we're facing in regard to what we do for money and what money will buy and what money won't buy. ...

"What we're going to have to do is to change the patterns of consumption in this country and in the rest of the world. The same thing is true of energy. Money, this year, can buy you, at present, all of the gas you want, and you can drive as wastefully as ever. This will not be true in the future, and we're not going to have enough energy, and we're going to have to think in terms of energy units instead of in terms of money. ...

"... You're not graduating at a period when your only problem will be to decide which jobs you're going to take and with very little thought and very little discrimination. You're also not graduating at a period when everybody is so beastly rich that the only thing that you can do is go and live in a commune. ... But you are graduating in a period when we're going to have to learn a whole series of new things. We're going to have to learn that the answers we thought would save the world—at the end of World War II we thought we just had to spread our technology all over the world; everybody would have plenty to eat and lovely skyscrapers and schools just like ours and the whole world would be saved—and we've discovered it doesn't work like that and that if we tried to spread our technology over the whole world we'd simply devastate the world. We'd cut down every tree, we'd use up every single resource and we'd leave a desert.

"And so we have to learn something new, and it's going to be rough. But you are the ones that have to ask the questions, you are the ones that have come in with fresh eyes, most of you haven't tried to live with total responsibility in this world and so you're going to have a chance to look at the situation fresh while the older people in it are doing our best to readjust our sights, to reassess the hopes that we had, to realize that we have to change the way in which we are building life up, change it very radically and very responsibly and that it's possible."

IMPORTANT:

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN TELL YOUR GEMFIRE DIAMONDS ARE NOT CHEAP COSTUME JEWELRY.

- Count the facets. Gemfire stones all have 58 facets — just like expensive diamonds prepared by diamond cutters.
- Examine your stone in a dimly lighted room. It should sparkle like in daylight. Gemfire stones sparkle even in the moonlight.
- Study your ring under a powerful magnifying glass to look for flaws. Gemfire stones have clarity — are flawlessly perfect. No specks! No blemishes! No cracks!

EMPRESS

A beautiful 2 ct. beauty that is "just right" for every occasion. 6004 Yel. Mtg. (GF) $12.40 6005 Wh. Mtg. (SS) $12.40

DISTINCTIVE GEMFIRE RINGS FOR MEN!

WORDS AND PICTURES

Words and pictures don't begin to show the beauty, brilliance, and fire of these magnificent Gemfire rings. That's why we want you to wear them and judge them on their own merits — not on what we tell you. Can it be your friends and family can tell them from an expensive "natural" diamond worth 100 times as much. In all probability you can tell them if you want to. Not many people can tell these brilliant Gemfire simulants from the expensive real ones. Yet now you can own these beautiful rings at amazingly low prices.

LOW PRICE DOESN'T

Mean Low Quality. Gemfire — simulated diamonds are not cheap fakes. In fact, Gemfires are carefully cut and polished by skilled craftsmen in the same manner as natural diamonds. They have 58 facets — just like natural diamonds. They are hand cut in heavy 18Kt-HGE, heavy gold electroplate, or solid sterling silver by master craftsmen. They look like a $100 diamond — but cost less than $10.00.

EVEN MILLIONAIRES

Wear Simulated Diamonds. Today many wealthy people, TV and movie stars feel unsafe making public appearances wearing expensive jewelry. Often times they keep their diamonds in a safe deposit box and wear these master-crafted Gemfire simulated diamonds and impress your friends!

AN EXCITING GIFT FOR SOMEONE SPECIAL

These Gemfire rings make a much appreciated gift for a special someone in your life. They will last a lifetime. Give for birthdays, anniversaries or just as a wonderful surprise. And even if you choose to tell, your loved one will be amazed and proud that you were clever enough to find such an expensive-looking ring at these remarkably low prices. The difference between it and a natural diamond could make a down payment on a new car, or home, or even a wonderful vacation for just you two!

With Our Guarantee You Take No Risks.

If at the end of 30 days you are not completely satisfied, return by INSURED MAIL for purchase price refund. At any time, or for any reason, and in any condition, you may return your Gemfire simulated diamond by INSURED MAIL for FREE replacement.

How to Find Your Ring Size

1. Cut a strip of paper 3 inches long and 1/4 inch wide.

2. Wrap the strip around the finger that is to wear the ring. Then place a dot on the strip where it meets the end.

3. Place the dot on the strip of paper at "A" on the ring guide. The number at the end of the strip is your ring size.

Heavyweight Champ Just Taking Encores

Bugner Ali's First Curtain Call?

By Dave Anderson
(c) New York Times

Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia — Muhammad Ali will defend the World Heavyweight Title against Joe Bugner here Tuesday morning in what the champion has announced will be his last fight. But most boxing people believe that it will be only the first curtain call on his celebrated career.

"He's like a man taking encores," says Don King, the American promoter. "I think he'll keep taking one more bow."

King hopes to persuade the 33-year-old Ali to accept what the promoter calls a "concrete deal" for a multi-million dollar title defense against Joe Bugner, possibly at Madison Square Garden. But the champion's future naturally depends on his ability to successfully defend the title.

Ali is an 11 to 4 favorite in London bookmaking shops to retain the championship.

I predict I shall win every round. Ali has said, and I predict he will not go the limit.

Ali also has predicted that the 25-year-old challenger will fall in the seventh round. Bugner has no prediction other than boasting that the champion will not be able to defeat him psychologically.

He knows he can't psyche me. Bugner says. "I'm not a violent man neither am I a gentleman. Ali weighed 225 pounds and Bugner 230 Saturday at the weigh-in ceremony that featured costumed Malay warriors and natives carrying imitation multi-colored palms. The warriors drummed each gladiator into the ring at Merdeka Stadium where the bout will be held.

Ali's trainer Angelo Dundee expected that Ali's weight will increase to about 227 by Tuesday morning. Bugner's manager, Andy Smith, predicted that Bugner's weight would drop to about 227 by then. At 225 Ali was the heaviest of his career for a title bout.

Ali's heaviest for any fight was 227 against Buster Mathis in Houston, Tex., four years ago.

The high weights are a precaution against each gladiator losing too many pounds in the thick most tropical heat. If the sun is out, it will be that much hotter. In addition to the normal heat and humidity here, a battery of television lights have been placed near the ring to illuminate the fighters for the closed-circuit TV audience.

If Bugner were to register an upset, he would be LeMars, Iowa — Valentinos of Lincoln used a squeeze play in the bottom of the seventh to remain in contention in the LeMars' Invitational Softball Tournament Saturday.

After losing their first game of the day to C & R Transfer from Sioux Falls, S.D., 4-1, Val's was faced with elimination in the double loss tournament, as the Iron Horse Lounge, also of Sioux Falls, battled back from a 5-1 opening inning deficit to knot the score going into the final frame.

However, a well executed squeeze bunt by Bruce Walter, scored Al Schmidt from third, giving Valentinos the victory.

The Misty Lounge, of Lincoln, also stayed in contention in the tourney as they utilized a pair of wins over the host team, the LeMars Merchants to stay alive.

Vavra Midwest Leader

Stu Vavra of Milligan jumped to the top of the super stock car standings at Midwest Speedway by virtue of his second place finish in the A feature and a heat win last weekend.

Stock car racing will resume Sunday at 8 p.m. with Dick Jensen and Kent Tucker seeking to overtake Vavra's point standings leadership.

Some drivers also will be preening their cars for the second leg of the Twin City Challenge match July 9 at Midwest.

Bo's Kosiski, of Omaha's Sunset Speedway, captured the first feature race in the series in Omaha last Wednesday, when he pulled away from the field after a broken axle sent Tucker to the sidelines.

Al Humphrey of Giltner finished second in the 35-lap event and won his heat race.

Last Sunday, Ardean Buller won his first feature race of the year, following a four-car collision that eliminated Jack Golder, Kent Tucker, Al Truax and Billy Meyers.

Hap Terrill finally took over the lead in the hobby stock standings, winning the main event last week.

Ballard Swim Titlists

Ballard Pool swept honors in the first meet sponsored by the Lincoln Parks and Recreation Department Saturday at Woods Pool.

With 12 teams competing, Ballard showed strength in the 11 and 12-year-old bracket and in the 15-17 division, sweeping all 12 relays in the two age groups.

Saturday's meet will be followed by an All-City Diving Meet Saturday, four triangulars through July and the first week of August, and the all-city championship meet on Aug. 9.

Former University High coach Dale Snook.

Despised Excuses

As a physical education instructor and secondary-ed teacher at the University of Nebraska the past 28 years, Dale Snook had a self-imposed motto — no excuses.

He practiced the same philosophy for 19 years as a basketball coach at Temple High, which later was called Teacher's High and finally, University High from 1955 until its 1967 closing.

At the school's last assembly, Snook's basketball players presented him with a plaque, inscribed: "To Coach, who gave us reasons to win, not excuses."

Snook, who this past week retired from university teaching, admits he despised excuses. He easily recalls when he adopted his no-excuse policy for teaching and coaching.

"It was my second year of coaching at University High," he relates. "We only scored one-half point in the district track meet. We were all ashamed."

The next year, Snook's track team scored only 7½ points in the district meet and 29 the following year. The fourth year, University High won the district meet and came within a point of the state championship the fifth year.

In the sixth year, University High completed the leap from rags to riches, winning the Class B state track championship. "I told my athletes to go out, give it their very best and they'd get a pat on the back. But there was to be absolutely no excuses," says Snook.

No Excuses for Trouble

"Our kids were getting kicked out of the Coliseum by the cops at 3 o'clock in the afternoon," he recalls of University High's early days. "We didn't need that kind of trouble and we weren't going to accept excuses for it."

University High matured educationally and athletically. "At first, we were playing Roca, Garland and Malcolm in basketball," Snook recalls. "Within five years, we were playing Minden, Blair and Hebron and beating Omaha West-side three out of four."

Snook's basketball teams finished in the top 10 ratings 15 times in 19 years and won two state championships (Class B in 1954 and Class C in 1963).

But Snook insists his biggest coaching thrills have come after competition. "Just working with young people and seeing them go on to be lawyers, doctors, dentists, teachers, firemen, whatever, provide the biggest thrills," he claims.

"I'd like to think I helped develop their confidence and feelings of security and taught them respect for people and property," says Snook. "At least I know I didn't hurt them."

Confidence is a big word in Snook's vocabulary. "Everyone seems to live within their limits," he observes. "When I'd send kids onto the basketball floor, I told them not to make the mistakes other teams were making."

"I think you can go out and feel like you're better," he adds. "You can feel superior without being arrogant. You have to believe in everything you do."

Snook was a pattern coach and among the first to have his teams play a combination defense. "Teams had to get ready for me, not a 1-1-3," he says.

Once, in the early 1960's, University High held the ball on cross-town rival Pius X for 10½ minutes — from four minutes left in the third quarter to 1½ minutes remaining in the final quarter.

Developed Stall Pattern

Snook had developed the semi-stall pattern in 1957. He's often wondered to himself if teams could hold the ball that long without a mistake even if the opposing team wasn't on the court.

"I never have thought there was much difference in classes in basketball," offers Snook, pointing to a prime example.

In 1955, Hebron and University High dropped to Class C. Snook's Tutors defeated Hebron twice that year, including a 16-point conquest of the Bears in the state finals.

The losses were Hebron's only two setbacks that season. The Bears had beaten eventual Class B champion Geneva (and Bob Gratopp) three times during the same season.

"Politics," according to Snook, finally closed University High. But, he insists, "I've never seen a high school so ideal. The students had more respect for the student teachers at University High than most kids do for the regular teachers at other schools."

Snook believes kids haven't changed. Adults have. "They let kids do what they want nowadays," he observes.

He also believes if more modern-day coaches placed the premium on the welfare of the kids rather than just winning, everyone would profit.

As utopian as it sounds, Dale Snook put his athletes above winning. More than likely, that's why they won a ton more than they ever lost.

Local Women Eye Tournament

Defending champion Jean Hyland, along with Nancy Teague, and Dorothy Schwartzkopf will lead off the Lincoln Women's City Golf Tournament at Hillcrest Country Club Monday morning.

The second round will be played on the Lincoln Country Club course, and the finale at Pioneer Golf Course.

More than 60 competitors will try to defeat five-time defending champion Mrs. Hyland.

Crabbin' Comes Easy

Crab fishing came easy for northerners in Louisiana. At left, Milwaukee's Judy Helgeland pulls up chicken neck with crab attached while (center) husband Glenn Helgeland demonstrates smooth netting motion with Lincolnite Georgie Vint. End result, at right, is blue crab captive, fine eating and fun fishing.

New Experience Turns Northerners into Crabby Fishermen

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Writer
Lake Charles, La. — "Grab your camera, your cooler, a ball of string, a dip net and a sack of chicken necks!" my brother Bill Vint of Milwaukee, blurted excitedly.
"You crazy, drunk, sick or what?" I asked.
"Come on. We're going crabbin'."

Catching blue crabs in Nebraska takes a long string or a long wait to reach the ocean so I wasn't totally into understanding the conversation. But I joined in the parade to our cars for the 30-mile trek to crab country.
For gourmets, the blue crab rates high on the list of sea and freshwater fish foods. It is a delicacy many people can't afford to enjoy.
When in Louisiana, do as the natives do. Crabbing in this southern state is the next best thing to heaven. It takes little preparation, no training, a little turning, a gentle pull and fast hands. Louisianans love it.
Watching three northern couples getting used to the techniques proved some entertainment to natives crabbing nearby.

Glenn Helgeland, editor of Archery World Magazine out of Milwaukee, his wife Judy, brother Bill, editor of Sno-Track Magazine out of Milwaukee, his wife Peg, my wife George and I went at this new experience like a litter of puppies to their first can of dog food.
The ground rules were simple. Cut off a length of string, tie one end to a rock or stick for security along the banks of the canal next to the highway.

"The bikini caught Bill's eye," Peg said of the teenage girls pulling up their crab strings with chicken necks and crabs attached. When they stopped for some photos of the action, the family invited them to join the fun. They found the story too good to pass up the next afternoon.
The crabs were thick in the canal. They latched onto the chicken necks in the water and allowed themselves to be slowly pulled to the shore where the net was waiting.

Then it was into an ice-packed cooler for preservation.
All too often, we northern rookies pulled too fast or netted too slow, missing about as many as we caught. Then there were the times an upward sweep of the net only half-caught crabs which were flung skyward or narrowly missed somebody's head or rapidly moving heels.
Glenn found the crab pincers had some power when he tried to manhandle several back into the coolers when the lid was off to add more food to the future feast.

In 2½ hours, the six of us had netted three large coolers full of the feisty blues, having missed a truckload.
Then it was off to Maj. Gen. E.W. Wise's home with Minnesota John Bloomer for our first-ever crab boil. Potatoes, onions, special seasoning, celery and about anything else that moved went into a massive pot. We let it all warm to a boil for 20 minutes, then added the first cooler of crabs (some 60 of them) to the water for another 20 minutes.

The general gave us our first lesson in how to shell a crab for the tender white meat inside. It was a tedious process but proved worth the trouble. We couldn't eat them fast enough.
"Well, what do you all think of our Cajun Country crabs?" Gen. Wise asked. "Not too bad, huh."
Nobody answered. We were too busy eating.

Money Issue Again

There is a big black cloud following Nebraska Game and Parks Commission assistant director Dale Bree these days. It's called lack of funding and it most certainly doesn't have a silver lining.
Bree is faced with the remorseful duty of making ends meet on the state park budget. He has something akin to a 6-inch rope, hoping it will stretch to fit in a 10-foot circle. It ain't possible.

Last year's fiscal budget hearings and allocations were not kind to Bree and the state park system. He received almost $140,000 in capital improvement money.

According to Friday's commission meeting, that money will be directed toward some four projects. One is $60,000 in general park improvement.

This includes the purchase of new restrooms, docks, buoys, picnic tables, shelters, trees for planting. The $60,000 wouldn't cover the cost of the tissue for the rest-rooms as costs now stand. The likelihood of massive improvements from the funds ain't likely at all.

More Areas of Concern

Another $55,000 is headed toward Fort Robinson State Park to renovate a "disgustingly inadequate" water system, according to Bree.

The old system has been around since 1900 and needs pump houses and tank overhauls or recreational water users at the fort are going to be drinking from a canteen filled in Crawford, about 5 miles away.

A $15,000 project will renovate the Champion Mill State Historical Park dam and outlet. Bree said this structure needs new riprap (rock on the dam facing), or it will wash downstream.

A $30,000 allotment to follow-up the Schramm Park State Recreation Area aquarium complex was tabled until the commissioners could find out what happened to $500,000 of the promised $850,000 for construction of the complex from the state Legislature.

The way things are going, it is not recommended that the commissioners hold their breath on that half-million. The Legislature would need a good poke in the ribs to cough up that much.

Touring Troubles Seen

What is really sad is the tour by senators on the Constitutional Revision and Recreation Committee. These senators have witnessed first-hand the state recreation needs along the eastern, southern and western borders of the state this year.

According to committee chairman George Syas of Omaha, the tour helps the committee familiarize itself with the park system and its needs. Then the committee tries to relate these needs to the other senators when legislation comes up.

It was suggested the Budget Committee be added to the tour. Those are the folks cutting the park system's throat. Bree's group is bleeding pretty badly right about now.

Syas said, in addition to enlightening the budget group, someone ought to enlighten Gov. J. J. Exon who continually backstabs attempts to put more money through increased taxes into projects worthy of the support — parks included.

Money solves a lot of ills. The state parks system is desperately sick and needs medicine soon and in as large a dose as is humanly possible. As things now stand, would someone loan Bree an umbrella for his black cloud?

Canoe Trails

The South Dakota Division of Parks and Recreation of the Game, Fish and Parks Department, is moving forward with plans to develop and extensive

Among financial burdens to be brought before the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission's budget moderators in the near future will be North Platte's home of Buffalo Bill. Some $20,000-plus will be needed to renovate the facility but the commission is finding fewer and fewer funds available to perform its everyday state park functions. (See column on state park financing.)

From now on, you've got a choice.

It's us. Or rust.

Most new cars start to rust through in a couple of years.

But your car doesn't have to.

Because now there's Ziebart rustproofing. We've just opened a brand new location close to you.

Give us a call. We'll tell you more.

MAN HAS OFTEN SHOWN FEAR OF THE NIGHT, and today's sophisticated man probably even more so than his cave-dwelling brothers. The sound of coyotes yipping on a still, dark night sends the hackles rising on many an inexperienced outdoorsman.

The truth of the matter is, nighttime is one of the best times to experience the outdoors. When dusk falls, wild creatures take over their world. Most wild animals are nocturnal, and an area that seems devoid of life during the daytime may bustle with activity at night. Raccoons, opossums, deer, skunks, bats, and even the elusive flying squirrel all forage and wander around during nighttime.

The night is also the time for many birds, most notably the great hunters, owls. Although you probably won't see them, they're going about their business hunting with deadly accuracy for mice and rodents. Other birds are more vocal, and a dark woods ringing with the call of whippoorwill is an interesting and pleasant place to be.

All those noises that "go bump in the night" aren't necessarily bad, if you just learn to enjoy them.

CAUTION: This doesn't mean you should go wandering about in the darkness in an area you're not familiar with; you stand a good chance of falling off a cliff, or over a barbed wire fence and seriously injuring yourself.

House of Week Cape Cod Home Simple, Attractive

By Andy Lang, AP
Here's a charming Cape Cod, a one and one-half story house that is as practical as it is attractive.

It has simple materials and windows, yet is done with taste and precision and some well-studied details on the economy side.

The side walls employ no expensive materials, but have a solid appeal by virtue of the narrow exposure wood shingles, contrasted by a small amount of board and batten for relief.

The exterior of Design R-122 is composed of two wings, a main one and a half story "original" wing with a smaller one-story family room, mud room, garage wing. Windows are multi-paned, wood, doublehung, although pre-finished aluminum windows could be substituted if desired. Inside, architect Jerold L. Axelrod has provided a simplicity of planning that achieves functional rooms without wasting any space. A modest-sized, raised entrance platform has been designed just inside the front door.

The adjoining living room has a wide arch opening into the rear dining area, thus creating a bright and expansive front-to-rear vista.

The dining area, in turn, has been designed wide open to the kitchen, and both rooms are open to the adjacent family room, thus creating a spacious feeling.

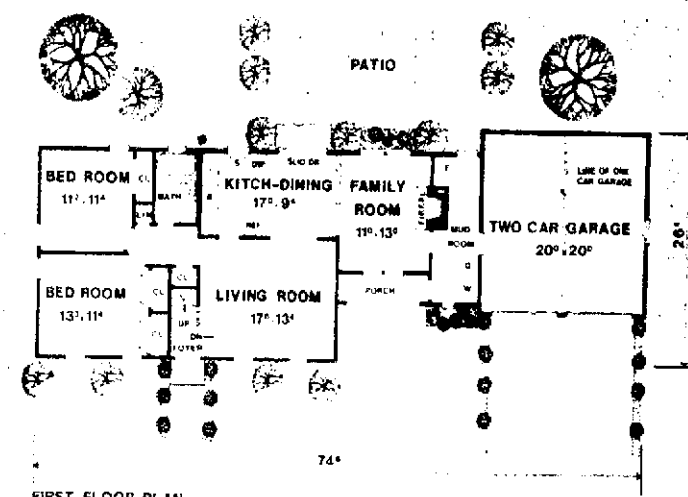

The kitchen is a well conceived L-shape with a rear yard window over the sink; sliding glass doors connect the dining area to the rear yard.

The family room features an attractive front-rear vista, as well, with its large front and rear windows; a wood-burning brick fireplace is included here.

Adjacent to the family room is a mud room-laundry-utility room. This service space has direct access to the garage and family room, as well as front and rear entrances for the maximum convenience of use.

The front door is ideal for servicemen and deliveries, and the rear door is an ideal rear yard entry.

There are two bedrooms on the main floor. Closet space is abundant; note the double closet in the master bedroom. Both bedrooms enter from an extra wide hall, along which is the first-floor bathroom, centrally located.

The attic floor need not be finished initially. The basic plans provide for an unfinished shell initially with a door at the top of the stairs. When needed, this growth space provides for two good-sized bedrooms, an abundance of closets and a second full bath.

Furthering the goals of practicality and economy are the facts that these two bedrooms do not require any front dormer, only a small rear dormer. The bath sits above the first-floor bath, thus permitting all the plumbing in the home to be connected from one stack only.

Plans call for either a one or two-car garage and either a slab home or a three-quarter basement, all of which are included in the working drawings available from the architect.

In the basement option, the basement door is located under the main stair and the bedroom closets are rearranged to provide guest closet at the entrance foyer.

Garden Gossip Plant-Helping Rain Also Aids Disease

By Emery W. Nelson
County Extension Agent

The rainy, humid weather has been good for the garden and lawn. Vegetables are growing with considerable vigor and the grass has remained green without irrigation. The weather also has been suitable for many plant diseases.

Tomatoes are particularly susceptible to diseases. Many gardeners are calling and bringing infected plants to me for diagnosis. I'm starting to see leaf spot, blight and wilt on these sick plants.

Leaf spot is one of the common tomato diseases. If affects the foliage at the base of the plant first and progresses toward the top. A close examination of the yellowing leaves will show a spotted condition.

Early blight of tomato also is present in a few gardens. This fungus disease is identified by the dry, brown circular spot found on the leaves. These spots have concentric rings.

The leaf spot and blight diseases can be controlled by regular use of fungicides. Maneb or Zineb are effective in preventing these diseases when they are applied thoroughly and regularly. Dust or sprays need to be applied every 7 days during rainy weather and perhaps every 14 days during periods of hot, dry conditions.

The wilt diseases are the most discouraging. There is little that can be done after a tomato plant is infected except to destroy the plant. Rotation of the planting location use of disease-free transplants and selection of disease-resistant varieties will help to prevent the various wilt diseases.

INTERIOR SELLING TIPS
Remember - when you are showing the inside of your home to a prospective buyer, first impressions are lasting and have an important effect on a potential sale.
A clean, well-kept home shows a home that has had good care and has been properly maintained. Repaint the interior if it needs it, but use neutral colors, if possible. An attractive, comfortable living room is a major attraction, but a sparkling kitchen will appeal to the lady of the house. It's the heart of any home, so keep it spotless. No dirty dishes. Women are also sensitive about bathrooms; keep them clean and orderly.
Bedrooms are important - arrange their furnishings neatly. Shiny, clean windows not only are a great asset, but let sunlight in and brighten the entire atmosphere. Clean out the clutter in the closets, basement, and garage. And, if you have pets, clear them out too when showing.

Don't Kill Good Bug That Kills Bad Bug

... and then the bugs came.

This is the time of year when insects create all kinds of problems. Following are several suggestions that may help you to avoid trouble and also save you money.

First, don't become alarmed every time you find an insect on a plant. Between 80% and 90% of all insects are "friendly."

In fact, in some cases, they are Mother Nature's natural control for the bag bugs that do the real damage.

This is one of the ironies of indiscriminate use of chemicals. In many instances, the sprayer or duster is actually doing more damage than good.

Moreover, don't get the spray can out at the first sign of minor damage. It takes time for the good bugs to find the bad bugs and an itchy finger on the spray lever could mean that you're actually interfering with natural controls.

Once a real insect problem has been diagnosed, be sure that you react appropriately. Check on the toxicity of the product you're about to buy. Is it safe for an amateur to handle? Does it pose any threat to children or pets?

Always remember that even though you may not have a child yourself, that is no reason this factor shouldn't be considered. With school out, kids range far and wide.

Don't hire a cannon when only a fly swatter is needed. Buy the least toxic and most reasonable product that will get the job done.

availability of new products. New insecticides are coming onto the market all the time, and in recent years a conscientious effort has been made to avoid some of the excesses of the past.

Be sure to spray at the right time. An application of a chemical right before a rainstorm is usually a waste of time and money, since the chemical often will be diluted or completely washed away.

Check all fittings, washers and gaskets on your spraying equipment each year. Chemicals themselves can cause these to deteriorate very quickly.

directions on the bottle or can. Since the manufacturer of the product wants you to use it as quickly as possible so that you'll buy more, you can be sure that the recommended application is heavy enough.

For killing insects, don't use sprayers that have been used to kill weeds. Residue of the weed killer may remain, and since many weed killers also kill desirable plants, the end result may be that you'll wipe out the very plant you're trying to save.

Pay attention to the wind when applying any chemical. Any chemicals that will kill bugs surely won't do your health any good.

'Nude Females Bother Fish'

June 29, 1975, Lincoln, Neb., Sunday Journal and Star 9C

Haverhill, England (UPI) — Jim Miller, vice chairman of the local fishing club, has appealed to the East Anglian Water Board to ban nude females swimmers from a nearby lake because, he said, it prevents fish from breeding.

"We are furious about this," Miller said. "It spoils our angling. We must put a stop to it before it comes permanent."

Vocational Educators Ask Quality Classes, Teachers

Competency teacher preparation and extended vocational education programs are two major concerns of the Nebraska Advisory Council for Vocational Education. It will discuss these goals for Nebraska schools in an August session.

Vocational educators and others across the nation have supported plans for issuing teacher certificates only after the candidates have demonstrated competence in the subjects they teach.

The council, which advises the State Board of Education, suggested the schools develop more vocational programs to prevent dropouts, use longer school days for pre-employment classes and make sure such training matches jobs available.

Some students are prepared for nonexistent jobs, said Council Director C. A. Cromer.

The board last month agreed to use federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act funds partially to pay stipends for students, reversing an earlier decision. The vocational council said funds should be used only for actual training.

State board members said they made the decision reluctantly because of high unemployment rates and the need to support the older students.

Nebraskans Will View Freedom Train Engine

The steam locomotive which will pull the Bicentennial Freedom Train across the United States on its upcoming tour will be in Nebraska Sunday and Monday.

According to Burlington Northern officials in Denver, the red, white and blue locomotive will be in McCook about 1-1:30 p.m. Sunday for a water stop then will be in Hastings about 6:30-7 p.m. Sunday for an overnight stay.

The locomotive will leave early Monday morning for a 3½ hour stop in Lincoln. The train is expected to arrive around 9:30 a.m. and will leave at 1 p.m.

From Lincoln it will go on to Omaha for another overnight stop.

Officials say the engine is being transported from its home base in Portland, Ore. to Chicago, Ill. where it will pick up some of the museum cars which will be traveling on the Bicentennial tour.

The locomotive is owned by the city of Portland, Ore.

The steam engine will have a crew car and several Burlington Northern cars attached to give it braking power, say officials.

$90 Million For Security

Ottawa (AP) — The federal cost for police security at the Olympic games in Montreal in 1976 will be at least $90 million, the House of Commons learned.

The bill is 45 times greater than the $2 million in federal funds allotted for grants to Canadians training for the Olympics.

TREAT YOUR FAMILY TO THE FINEST HEAT MONEY CAN BUY

HOT WATER HEAT WITHOUT PLUMBING

Now your family can enjoy the wonderful luxury of hot water heat in any room in your home! For there's no heat in the world that's finer than the soft, gentle, clean, healthful, floor-to-ceiling warmth provided by the INTERTHERM LO-PROFILE PORTABLE HOT WATER ELECTRIC BASEBOARD HEATER. Almost one million INTERTHERMS are in use throughout the United States, Canada and Japan.

You can plug in the INTERTHERM. Or, connect it permanently. A thermostat maintains the temperature exactly as you desire. A water and anti-freeze solution—sealed in each heater permanently—is protected against freezing to 50° F. below zero. It's never necessary to add water or anti-freeze.

STEVE CANYON

ON THE SAME FLIGHT TO CIUDAD CENTRAL—STEVE FINDS POTEET CANYON!

STEVE, THE AIR ATTACHE WHO WAS KILLED BY TERRORISTS IN CIUDAD CENTRAL CAME FROM HIGH CITY...

SO THE NEWSPAPER SENT ME TO DO A DIG JOB!

WHICH IS WHY YOU ARE HERE—OR IS IT 'NO COMMENT'?

THAT CAN WAIT FOR THE MOMENT, POTEET!

I AM DELIGHTED TO SEE MY FORMER WARD DOING SO WELL!

AND OFF THE STEVE CANYON PAYROLL—AFTER SO LONG!

FARSIGHTED INVESTMENT! —I'M AT THE ARBOL HOTEL...WHERE ARE YOU STOPPING?

SAME PLACE! SHARE A RIDE?

I'M ON AN EXPENSE ACCOUNT, TOO.

—SO IT'S DUTCH TREAT—OKAY?

LIBERATED TAXI FARE!

RESERVATIONS FOR CANYON—AND CANYON!

AH! ISI! SPELLED THE ENGLISH WAY... INSTEAD OF CANON!

THEY ARE IN ORDER, SENOR—EXCEPT THAT TWO SINGLE ROOMS WERE SET ASIDE!

WE CANNOT UNDERSTAND HOW A MISTAKE COULD BE MADE REGARDING SUCH A CHARMING COUPLE...

SO WE HAVE, OF COURSE, GIVEN YOU A DOUBLE ROOM!

Little Orphan Annie

—AM—IS HE MAN OR MONSTER? WELL, LET'S FOLLOW "DADDY" AS HE AND ANNIE RETURN ANN'S CALL—

AH—I AM REMINDED OF A VERY DEAR FRIEND I KNEW SOME FIFTEEN THOUSAND YEARS AGO

YOU, OLIVER, KNOW SOMETHING OF THE PAST—BUT TO LITTLE ANNIE ALL THIS IS NEW

GEE—LOOK! IT'S LIKE A MINE—HEY! SEE? LOOK THERE! INDIANS!

AH—NOW WE'RE GETTING DOWN TO MORE SUBSTANTIAL LEVELS—10,000 YEARS AGO... 15,000...

AND HERE WE HAVE MY OLD HOME TOWN OF 20,000 YEARS AGO—I LIVED HERE TEMPORARILY COUPLE OF HUNDRED YEARS OR SO—

SOMETHING LIKE AN ORDINARY MORTAL SPENDING A WEEK-END, EH?

LEAPIN' LIZARDS! WAS THIS YOUR HOUSE?

OH, THAT'S ONE OF THE BATHS—THERE WAS ONE FOR EACH BEDROOM, OF COURSE—

WHY, THIS PLACE WAS MORE UP-TO-DATE THAN MOST HOUSES TODAY—

EACH GENERATION IS CERTAIN IT HAS REACHED THE PEAK OF CIVILIZATION—NO USE TO TRY TO TELL FOLKS THAT, TO PEOPLE OF LONG-FORGOTTEN AGES OUR PRESENT DAY LIFE WOULD SEEM CRUDE AND ABORIGINAL—

BUT WHY DIDN'T IT LAST? I MEAN, FOLKS WAY BACK HAD EVERYTHING—HOW DID THEY LOSE IT ALL?

EBB AND FLOW IN EVERYTHING—GIANT CYCLES—THE SWINGING PENDULUM OF TIME—BUT I FANCY YOU'VE HAD ENOUGH—TO THINK ABOUT FOR ONE DAY—

I'LL SAY SO! AND... ER--MR. AM—I'LL NEVER, NEVER AGAIN QUESTION ANYTHING YOU SAY IS SO--NO MATTER HOW CRAZY IT SOUNDS--

WHILE HIGH IN THE SKY, FAR OUT OVER THE MOUTH OF THE RIVER, A HARMLESS-LOOKING PLANE WINGS DOWN THE COAST--

SEE! IT IS THE FISHING BOAT USED BY THE DOG, WARBUCKS, TO ESCAPE US--

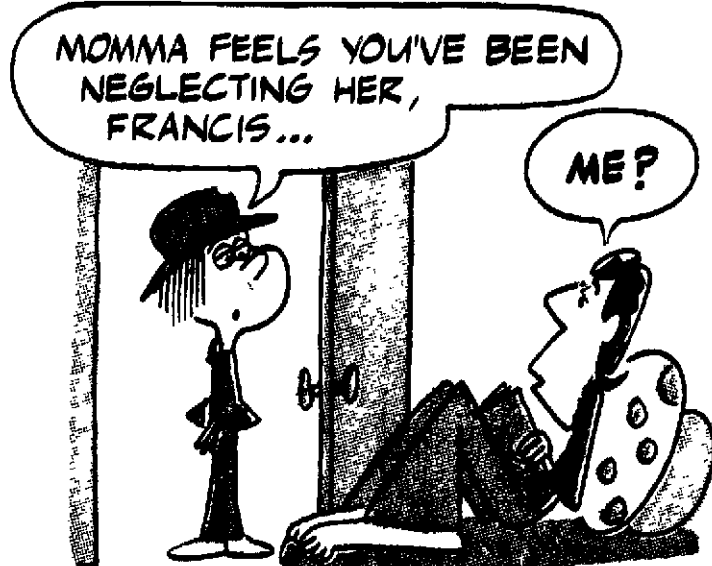

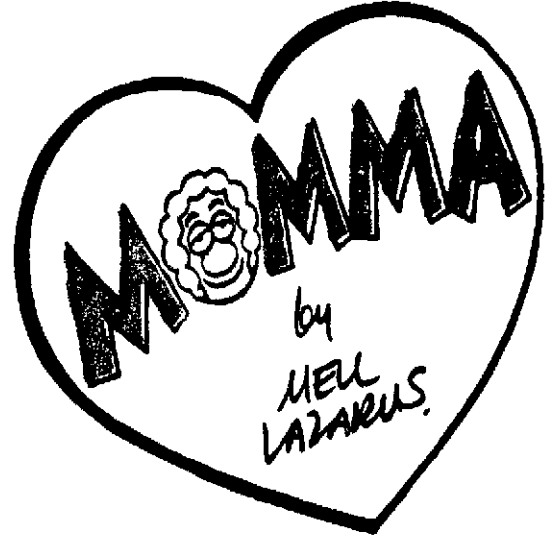

YES--AND NEARBY HIS HOUSE WELL CAMOUFLAGED--

AT LAST WE KNOW HIS LAIR--BUT WE MUST MOVE WITH CAUTION--

The Many Faces of Leta

Racing, Flying, Mountain Climbing; Stay Tuned to Wild Uninhibition

By Holly Spence

When KOLN-TV personality Leta Powell Drake goes raft racing, she is armed with wigs, cigarettes and long eyelashes. But that's all part of the act, she said. Any illusion of the flaky female ends there. Her athletic credentials, along with the professional ones, speak for themselves.

"I am a serious competitor when the time comes," she said.

Evidence her first place titles in the North Platte River Race, the Great Missouri River Raft Regatta and the Great Plains Roping and Saddle Club Rodeo calf scramble, her completion of the Outward Bound Mountain Climbing survival program and participation in two Transcontinental U.S. Powder Puff Derby Air Races.

Early Victories

But the taste of victory was early. In the 10th grade in her native Duluth, Minn., she walked off with first place honors in the "I Speak for Democracy" speech contest sponsored by the VFW.

She picked up the same award for the next two years — "nobody had ever done it." Receiving the traditional trophy and radio was getting old, so the co-sponsoring television station offered her a job.

"I went out and charged a lot of clothes to my mother," she laughed of what she thought would turn into instant stardom. "I turned out being the night receptionist."

But that was how she edged her way into television. Evening work often called for "a female hand to hold the hot dog" for the commercial — "everything was live in those days."

"Then I modeled for a furrier and they finally decided I could talk," she recalled. "Although all of my academic training is in theater, I've made my entire earnings in television."

A Real Yo-yo

Even though she charmed Duluth and New Orleans by holding down the Duncan Yo-Yo championships in both cities, Leta decided to follow her University of Minnesota theater instructor William Morgan to Nebraska for a master's degree in theater.

She received a graduate assistantship as costume designer. She never sewed a stitch in her life.

"I can do it if I have to do it," she said.

Now Leta is a dissertation away from her doctorate and wants to complete it. "I'm going to have to learn to say no!"

But she didn't say no to Duncan Aviation when they offered her employer, KOLN-KGIN-TV a trade-out for flying lessons. She is a licensed private pilot and is now readying herself for her third Powder Puff Derby race, which starts July 4.

The training section on weather was frightening. "Most girls go through life without touching a computer or slide rule."

But she is convinced that women can handle the fear of flying easier than men because a female can more readily admit fear.

Leta and her flying partner, Sally Green of Monroe, La., placed eighth in 1973's race. While she enjoys the wild blue yonder, Leta also likes having her feet on the ground. She always wanted to backpack and the most severe of initiations to the sport when she participated in the Outward Bound Rockie Mountain Survival program.

Mountain High

"I like to know what I'm getting into," she said. "But the whole idea (of the Outward Bound program) is not to know."

Leta thought that the living quarters would be primitive but adequate, only to find out she would receive nothing more than a piece of plastic.

When she started singing mountain songs — "I was really obnoxious" — they sent her to the back of the pack. Leta felt the experience was "confidence-building for many," but personally found it "interesting to know how much the body can take."

Now she indicated an interest in a ship survival course.

"And I'd like to shoot the rapids in the Rockies," she said.

Many of her current athletic interests center around 11-year-old son Aaron who holds a fifth rating nationally in swimming and has 200 ribbons and trophies.

"He wants to go to the Olympics," she boasted, "and I want to give him the opportunity to excel."

But when she goes around the state to attend swim meets, Leta has to disguise herself so as to not be pestered to death by her Cartoon Corral fans who approach "Kalamity Kate" with facial tissues, pieces of lunch bags and popcorn boxes for autographs.

Besides her afternoon show for the youngsters, she hosts The Morning Show on KOLN-KGIN and a Sunday show called Gateway to Homebuying.

This allows her time to get involved in community activities, a bit of live theater here and there (Leta received the "best actress" award at the University of Nebraska for five years, has done professional summer stock in Winston-Salem, N.C., has been on stage at the Lincoln Community Playhouse and returned last fall to the Howell Theater stage to star in "The Waltz of the Toreadors") and do television commercials.

Leta (left) and Sally Green of Monroe, La., took eighth in 1973's Powder Puff Derby. They will compete again this year.

Midwife Aids Life Between Two Worlds

By Steven M. Eames

Laredo, Tex. (AP) — Bigbellied and trembling Mexican women grasp at the chipped metal bars of an old hospital bed in midwife Flora G. Calderon's clinic.

Aided by the midwife's stubby fingers and slow, sure movements, they give birth to United States citizens.

Family, neighbors and an occasional expectant father gather in the adjoining room at a leather-trimmed wood bar to wait and perhaps sip a beer.

A few blocks to the south of the adobe-caked clinic flows the Rio Grande, border between Mexico and Texas. Babies born of Mexican parents on United States soil have dual citizenship until they are adults.

Such babies erase some of the barriers which their parents would otherwise face in immigrating to the United States.

Mrs. Calderon said she has delivered thousands of babies in her 20 years as a midwife. Mrs. Calderon is probably Laredo's best established midwife. But Calderon business is not listed in the yellow pages. She distributes call calendars emblazoned with a child on scales and passes out ball point pens similarly decorated.

She said that Mexican women pay her $150 fee which includes pre-natal checkups.

Mrs. Calderon's clinic furnishings are a paradox, a blend of modern and old. Her delivery room is a converted kitchen, which she proudly noted has hot and cold running water.

The delivery table is the battered hospital bed covered with a sheet of red vinyl. Another piece of delivery equipment is fashioned from plywood, crudely sawed.

Yet the cabinets in the well-lit room contain gleaming hypodermic needles, medicines and pills prescribed by local doctors for Mrs. Calderon's discretion during deliveries.

In the kitchen is a large side-by-side refrigerator-freezer and a long-used natural gas stove. In the office, births are recorded using a modern, expensive electric typewriter perched on an old gouged and scraped wood desk.

Mrs. Calderon's son, Jose Calderon said that at the first sign of trouble, his mother sends a woman to the hospital.

Polygamy Means Unpossessive Wives

By David Briscoe

Salt Lake City (AP) — The majority isolate themselves in small rural communities. Others live in metropolitan areas, their way of life known to their neighbors. And a few in recent months have dared to state in public that they practice polygamy.

They do so partly in the belief that Americans are becoming more tolerant of their lifestyle, although polygamy is illegal in most states.

State and federal officials estimate that there are 25,000 to 35,000 Americans practicing polygamy. Most are in Utah, Arizona, Idaho, Nevada and Montana, or across the borders in Mexico and Canada.

Prosecution of polygamists is rare now, but evidence of their existence is easy to gather. They list up to 25 children on tax returns. Brothers and sisters a few months apart in age sit together in class rooms. A few live conspicuously in cities, among them a tall white-haired Salt Lake City man with at least six wives and 40 children. He has several homes in the Salt Lake Area.

The polygamist patriarch consented to an interview on the condition that his name not be used. He says a few years ago he could have been much less willing to speak out.

Additionally, several polygamists and their wives were interviewed recently on KUTV TV here. One appeared on radio and television talk shows to answer phoned-in questions.

But they did not permit photographs or use of their real names. Some had been jailed in the past for polygamy.

One who is more open is Alexander Joseph, 39, a jack-of-all-trades who founded a religious sect and lives in southern Utah with 13 wives and eight children. Joseph, an ex-Marine, and a few followers who also practice polygamy are fighting efforts by the Bureau of Land Management to prevent them from homesteading on federal land.

The First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution guarantees

He any many other polygamists were Mormons, but were excommunicated from the Mormon church for practicing polygamy. The Mormons outlawed the practice in 1890.

The polygamists who have spoken out have given various reasons for doing so. The patriarch here said he wanted to argue against the Mormon classification of polygamists as adulterers and sex deviates. He said he also wanted to correct the bad name polygamy might have gotten as a result of two murders in Mexico last December linked with the polygamous Church of the Firstborn in the Fullness of Time.

"I have been in jail and had my child and wives taken away and suffered beyond words," he said.

On a recent afternoon, his 69th birthday, he took a newsman to a small, flat-roofed duplex to meet one of his wives and a 15-year-old daughter. She was doing homework on the kitchen table.

Then, out the front door, around the side, and discreetly in the back door of the adjoining unit, they met another wife, who hugged her husband and apologized for the canning jars lined up on the kitchen floor.

The man then took his guest a few miles away where two more wives live in luxurious apartments in a four-family dwelling.

He showed a photograph of six wives.

Judy Joseph, 21, who left her large Montana family to become one of Alexander Joseph's wives, said: "You have to give up possessiveness, selfishness, jealousy and learn to love more when you become a polygamist wife. My parents don't understand how I've become so happy."

A woman who shares her husband with three other wives said on KUTV that children benefit in a polygamist marriage. "... They have mothers who really care about them and if the mother is out of the home, there is somebody there to take care of them ... We love all our children," she said.

Polygamy is outlawed in most states, but polygamists seldom are prosecuted. The last convicted polygamist to serve time at the Utah State Prison, for example, left in 1969 after serving 1½ years of a sentence of up to five years.

There's been no grand jury campaign against polygamists anywhere in the country since December 1969 when a Davis County grand jury here in Utah indicted 16 men on polygamy charges.

The jury foreman, Henri J. Fredericksen of Bountiful, recalls that none was ever jailed, except for perjury, and none of the jury's recommendations for a crackdown on polygamists was followed.

Utah Atty. Gen. Vernon Romney said he will relay any information about polygamy to county attorneys. But he acknowledged prosecutors in smaller communities often have polygamist friends and that prosecution has been unpopular.

A federal law against polygamy was enacted at the turn of the century. It prohibits the practice in U.S. territories and on most Indian reservations established under treaties with the U.S. government. But it doesn't apply to the states.

J. Bracken Lee, governor of Utah when 100 Arizona lawmen and volunteers raided the border town of Short Creek in 1953 and arrested scores of men and women, said he refused to support the raid.

"If we're going to wink about a guy fooling around with several women, we shouldn't persecute these people who are taking good care of their families," said Lee, a non-Mormon.

The Mormon church, whose early leaders brought "celestial" or "plural" marriage to Utah, is actively opposed to modern-day polygamists.

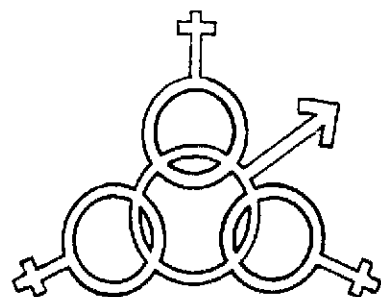

The 3.4-million member church excommunicates members who espouse polygamy.

Mormon President Spencer W. Kimball says, "The Lord brought an end to this program many decades ago through a prophet who proclaimed the revelation to the world."

The church still believes, however, that a man can have more than one wife after death.

Many relics of early polygamy remain in Utah, including Brigham Young's Beehive House, where the Mormon leader lives with one of at least 19 wives, and a building built in 1888 as a home for wives who rejected polygamy.

Some lawyers and sociologists believe it is time to change the law. But many polygamists say that challenging the law might bring unwanted publicity, and perhaps attract sexual deviates.

WorMen A Celebration of Life

By Linda Ulrich *
Death is part of life.
For many, it plays a minor part simply because it can be avoided.

John K. Graham cannot do that.

With a long history of crippling heart disease, he has, according to physicians, four to six years at most to live.

Although there was a time in his life when he dreaded the thought of dying, he no longer does. "Life is a long series of adjustments we all have to make."

His personal adjustment included going from working days that were "often 48 hours long" as an art director in an advertising agency in Oklahoma City to his life now. He is confined to a wheelchair and allowed to be up only four hours a day.

But, he says, "I continue to celebrate life." He celebrates without fear, he says, because having been pronounced clinically dead in hospitals twice has given him a knowledge of death that is without fear. The second heart attack, ironically, after his second heart attack, which he had as he and his family were leaving the city to make funeral arrangements for his wife's father, who had died of a heart attack

When he was undergoing surgery after the heart attack, his heart stopped, Graham explained. "It was a euphoric state, a very grand feeling, a feeling of peace like I had never known before."

In his four hours of wakefulness, he paints, writes and reads. He gets the most enjoyment, he says, from his time with his family and from writing to inmates in penal systems in various parts of the country.

He regrets the high cost — emotionally and financially — that his illness has placed on his wife, JoAnn, and his four children. He regrets that when he dies, he will have to leave them. "No father holds his wife close enough, his children close enough."

He regrets that his non-service connected VA pension, Social Security and his wife's income is not enough to pay the staggering medical bills.

And he regrets that he will leave "scores of things undone."

But, he says, "I am still bound by a faith that gives me hope."

A "shouting Methodist," he says that while not physically free, his faith gives him mental freedom in the hope in something which is bigger and better than himself.

Madonna's 'Festival for Fun' Scheduled Next Weekend

The "Festival for Fun," sponsored by the Madonna Professional Care Center, 2200 So. 52nd, is planned for next Saturday and Sunday.

This is Madonna's thank you to Lincoln for its response to the Madonna building fund drive.

Entertainment will include the Bluegrass Crusade playing from 8 to 11 p.m. Saturday and the SAC Band performing at 4 p.m. Sunday.

The Grey Barn Sale will be continued this year, beginning with an auction preview at noon

Saturday and selling starting at 2:30 p.m. The barn will be open Sunday, also.

Mrs. Sam Marchese is festival chairman. Other committee chairmen include Father Stanley Redmerski, Mary Hillegass, Bill and Karen Dahlstrom, LaVon Crosby, Sally Meginnis, Sister Phyllis Hunhoff, Doris Cunningham, William Sonderegger, Julie Ogea, John Baker and Prof. Floyd Harper.

Other events planned are a carnival, handicrafts, cold watermelon tank, stage coach rides, food booths and games.

The Madonna Foundation will be recipient of all proceeds.

Hall of Fame

Margretta Shaw Stewart Dietrich of Hastings was the first state president of the Nebraska League of Women Voters, successor to the Nebraska Woman Suffrage Assn.

Born in Philadelphia, educated in private schools and graduated A. B. from Bryn Mawr College, she was 28 years old when she became the second wife of former Nebraska Governor and U.S. Senator Charles Henry Dietrich in 1909.

Margretta Dietrich was a staunch advocate of woman suffrage and was president of the Nebraska Woman Suffrage Assn. when it became the League of Women Voters on June 15, 1920. She was then elected the League's first state president, serving from 1920-21, and again, 1926-27, and also was a director of the National League of Women Voters from 1921-26. Under her leadership, the League directed its state legislative programs toward the welfare of women and children.

A leader in Hastings community affairs,

Margretta Dietrich contributed greatly to the development of Adams County. She was one of five women responsible for the management of Sunnyside Home for the Old and Dependent at Hastings which formally opened April 1, 1914, and she served as president of Sunnyside's board of directors for 13 years from 1914-27.

Sunnyside, a Woman's Club project, was underwritten and furnished entirely by donations raised by the women, and applications were received not only from the county, but the state, and neighboring states — Kansas, Colorado and Wyoming.

She also was a director of the Adams County Red Cross, 1918-27, and a member of the Academy of Political Science, the Foreign Policy Assn., and the League of Nations Non-Partisan Assn.

Margretta Shaw Stewart Dietrich, dedicated suffragette, feminist and civic leader, died in 1961 at the age of 79.

Pornography Is Not Her Cup of Tea

Ann Landers

Dear Ann: Last night my husband and I went to a dinner party in the home of people we know casually through Jim's work. After dinner the hostess brought out their "hobby" — a collection of low-down pornography. It showed group sex of every type and I was mortified. I left the room but Jim stayed and couldn't get enough of it.

On the way home I told him I never wanted to see those people again. He said I was "square" and added, "When in Rome you do as the Romans do." Am I wrong?

Alice
Dear Alice: It depends on what the Romans are doing. If it doesn't happen to be your cup of tea, you don't do it. I'm with you, dearie.

Dear Ann Landers: May I give a word of advice to the men who, though they have wonderful wives they love and trust, still horse around with, hold hands with, hug and sweet-talk other gals — innocently.

My wife caught me dancing (with no music) in the office (after hours) with a secretary whose hands are on every man within reach. This woman meant nothing to me, but it was terribly upsetting to my wife. Now she wonders what else I've been up to.

That little bit of foolishness hurt my dear wife and destroyed the mutual trust and dignity that our marriage had enjoyed for 25 years.

Fellows, it isn't worth it. The girl wasn't worth the dirt under my wife's little foot.

Stupid in Florida
Dear Friend: You may be Stupid in Florida, but I'm not ignorant in Illinois.

Men don't write like that. Women do. You are the wife. I'm printing your letter in spite of the duplicity because there's a message there. But please, honey, don't try to put your words in your husband's mouth.

Dear Mr. Corn:
One of our club members claims that it is now permissible for partners to ask of each other, "Is that an asking bid?" This doesn't seem right. Am I out of date?

Old Timer
Kirkwood, Mo

Answer: You are not out of date. Only 15 words are legal in bridge bidding and partners are not at liberty to use any other words. The 15 words are one through seven, no-trump, spades, hearts, diamonds, clubs, pass, double and redouble.

Dear Mr. Corn:
We missed a cold vulnerable grand slam after this bidding. Could either of us have known what to do? We doubled and set them eight but that was only 1,500 points.

Answer: The effective interference by the opponents made it impossible to bid the grand slam without guesswork. East may have cue bid six clubs, but over South's seven clubs, the same problem would have remained regarding possession of all four aces. Preemptive bids can be very effective and yours is a good example. Next time you might be able to throw in a good one against them!

Dear Mr. Corn:
In a five-card major system should one open one diamond or one club with

Thomasville, Ga

Answer: One diamond. The rules are. Without a five card or longer suit, open in the longer minor. With equal minors open one diamond with four of each; open one club with three of each. Never open on a two card suit.

Dear Mr. Corn:
If partner opens two no-trumps, is a jump to game a closeout?

Fire Sale

Answer: Yes. A jump to game over any opening no-trump should end the bidding because opener has already described his hand within narrow limits.

Missouri Synod Hopes Unity Will Prevail

By Anita Fussell
The hope is that unity will prevail in the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

The fear is that the church will split.

These are among the emotions being taken by Nebraska's 35 voting delegates to their badly divided church's general convention, beginning Friday at Anaheim, Calif.

Depending upon the point of view held, the basic issue is either doctrinal or political. Or both.

Moderates claim that charges of doctrinal heresy against them is a smoke screen hiding a drive to remove them from church leadership.

Unsynodical

Conservatives counter that moderates "won't lay it on the table;" that in fact their penchant to ask questions rather than to give answers is both devious and unsynodical.

As a result, Lincoln Circuit voting delegates George Carstens and the Rev. Marvin E. Gruett are walking a fine line between self-deluding optimism and self-defeating pessimism.

Gruett said Anaheim will be "one of the most difficult conventions to face."

But the pastor of Calvary Lutheran Church also added that this convention's delegates will be "some of the best informed because of all the material coming from floor committees."

Both conservatives and moderates in the 2.8 million-member denomination agree that committee recommendations adopted at St. Louis early in June were generally mild in wording compared to some of the condemnations and recriminations cast in 1,400 individual proposals studied by the committees.

"To Create Unity"
Gruett said the work of those committees raised his hopes. "I don't think about it" (church division), he said. "I'm working hard to create unity rather than division."

Carstens, a member of Christ Lutheran Church, said he hopes the Missouri Synod will stay intact as a Bible-believing synod.

"Synod means walking together in complete agreement in all things," he declared. "It would be great if we return united to the mission of the church — to getting the word of Christ out into the world."

His fear is that Evangelical Lutherans in Mission, a moderate confessional movement within the synod, "might gain enough control to instill its ways into the convention."

Judy Duerr of Trinity Lutheran Church, who is a moderate says she feels uncomfortable about the convention.

"Truly Loving"
She said if the delegates divide in the same proportion as before (60% conservative, 40% moderate), conservatives will have the power to crack down hard on moderates.

"But I know too many truly loving, conservative people," she said, "so I do have hope" this won't happen.

In one way, said Mrs. Duerr, "everyone's Christianity has taken a big step" as people have learned to put their trust in the hands of the Lord.

"Whichever way it goes," believes Carstens, "we know that God's will is being done."

Labor Scene

Minneapolis (UPI) — The director of the American Lutheran Church's Office of Research and Analysis has said that church support of the United Farm Workers' consumer boycott of Gallo Wine would be "ill advised if not morally wrong."

The official, Dr. Carl F. Reuss, said the UFW's struggle to organize farm workers was "complicated by the entrance of the Teamsters Union" into the farm labor scene.

New Dean

Springfield, Mo. (UPI) — Elmer Kirsch, 46, Santa Cruz, Calif., will become academic dean of Central Bible College July 1.

His appointment was announced by the Assemblies of God headquarters here. Kirsch presently is dean of education and professor at Bethany Bible College, Santa Cruz. Before going to Bethany he taught in public schools in Wisconsin and Ohio.

Missions Set Up in Woods Of Parks Throughout Nation

(c) Newhouse News Service
Atlanta — Missionaries are pious folk who go to foreign lands to convert the natives. Right? Well, sometimes.

But that woman in Bermuda shorts, a kerchief tied around her head, stirring the beans at the campfire next to yours, also may be a missionary.

Or the guy tooling down the interstate in his Winnebago, he may be a missionary too, an active member of Campers on Mission, a program of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Church.

Campers on Mission is a relatively new operation, but it already has spread throughout this country and even into a few others through military families who are members.

The idea is simple. Millions of families pack up weekend after weekend all summer long and head for the hills, the state parks and the campgrounds that dot the country.

Many of them are not church members. Even many who go to

Greek Shrine

New York (UPI) — Greek Orthodox Christians will mark the nation's bicentennial by establishing the first national memorial shrine of the Greek; Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America in St. Augustine, Fla., commemorating the arrival of the first Greek settlers in the new World in 1768.

Missionary Work

Washington (UPI) — The Seventh-day Adventists Church has announced it will seek federal help from the agency for international development in working out a plan to bring irrigation systems to the drought-stricken farmers of Chad in the Sahel region of Africa.

church when they're home won't bother to get cleaned up to go into town to services when they're camping.

So, thought Baptist leaders about four years ago, why not take religion where the people are? And who better to take it than other campers?

"There is no way to hire enough missionaries to cover the ground that needs to be covered," said the Rev. Joel Land, assistant director of the Special Mission Ministries Dept. of the Home Mission Board in Atlanta. "But campers are on the scene and have a special opportunity to share their faith."

The organization, not limited to Southern Baptists, has grown rapidly. Land says 11,000 families are committed to the program.

There are regional, state and national rallies each year, aimed at both spiritual renewal and training. A national rally is planned for Woodland Park, Colo., July 18-20.

The campers are taught how to use puppets and how to play get-acquainted types of campfire games.

"There are many people who will not get dressed up to go to anyone's church but they will wander into someone's activity," Land said.

"Campers generally are open and receptive and have time to hear and share," he added. "People have a lot of family problems that come to the surface in a campground and the missionaries are around to do some counseling."

Helpfulness and neighborliness also are emphasized in the program, be it supplying salt for a family that forgot theirs or sharing water with someone whose car has boiled over on the highway.

To help with the program, the Baptists have developed a special "On the Road" scripture with the help of the American Bible Society.

Members display the Campers on Mission decal on their campers and car bumpers so fellow campers will know where to turn in times of need.

Also under the program, local churches in areas around campgrounds often hold special services in the parks, and church youth groups, traveling around the country, will stop in the camps to lead services.

Rabbi's Plea Documentary Film

Southbury, Conn. (UPI) — Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, has called on the American Jewish community to stop making President Ford and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger "scapegoats" for Jewish frustrations about the future of Israel.

Washington (UPI) — The temperance department of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, worried about an alcoholism rate growing by 250,000 people a year, has announced plans for a documentary film showing "how parents who use tobacco, alcohol or other narcotics endanger the well-being of their unborn children."

by Bob and Ross Metcalf

A poet wrote, "Let each man think himself an act of God, His mind a thought, his life a breath of God, And let each try, by great thoughts and good deeds, To show the most of Heaven he hath in him." Many laugh at the possibility of a Heaven on earth. And, of course, at times such a Utopian viewpoint does seem impossible ludicrous. The famous lines by Browning go, "A man's reach must exceed his grasp/Else what's a heaven for?" The only thing we can do is keep on trying.

Baptist Camp Nebraska UCC Grand Opening Is Attacking Set at Linwood World Hunger

Grand opening ceremonies will be held Saturday for Camp Moses Merrill, a new Baptist camp near Linwood.

Officials say it will provide year-round camping for individuals, civic organizations and church groups of all denominations.

The new camp covers 568 acres of rolling, wooded hills and open fields overlooking the Platte Valley. Camp facilities include a well-stocked store and laundry, an outdoor amphitheater and swimming pool and a program building that is still under construction.

Trailer and tent areas provide both open and shaded sites, each with its own picnic table, electrical outlet and water. Many sites include sewer facilities.

Featured speaker at Saturday's grand opening will be Dr. Roger L. Frederickson, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Sioux Falls, S.D., and past president of the American Baptist Convention.

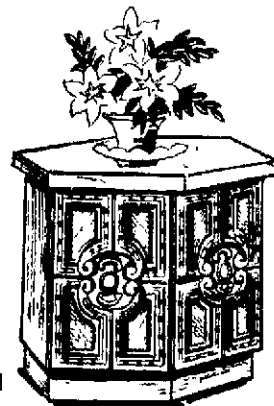

Twenty-two United Church of Christ (UCC) members from all parts of Nebraska gathered recently to launch an attack on world hunger.

Earlier, the annual meeting of the UCC Nebraska Conference authorized a priority program, Shalom on Earth, to bring into reality what the Old Testament calls shalom: wholeness, justice, mercy and peace.

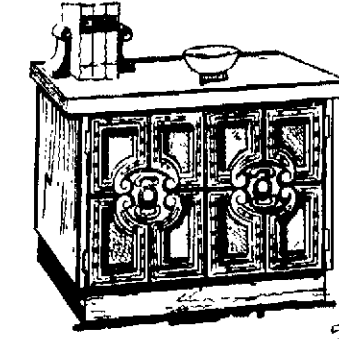

Beginning initial planning to involve the 119 churches of the Nebraska Conference in the attack on world hunger, the group divided into three task forces: consciousness raising, life-style modification and citizen action.

Chairmen of the task forces are Mrs. Bobbie Beye of Creighton, the Rev. Louis C. Turner of Hyannis and the Rev. Wayne Schreurs of Goehner. Omahans Gary Marx and Jerry Vanice head the entire effort.

Mahlon Kohl plies the ancient trade of butchering, weighing, wrapping and selling meat, all under the scrutinizing eye of a customer at Crete Meats.

Crete Meats Makes You Forget Supermarkets

Crete — In this age of mammoth supermarkets, there are still a few places where a customer can get anything he wants — as long as it's meat.

Crete Meats is one of those places, and manager Mahlon Kohl says the reason he can compete with stores that offer one-stop shopping is customer service.

"You can just about name the people who will come in on a certain day," he said.

Customers can watch closely as Kohl or one of his six workers custom-cut meat. Kohl says his customers prefer that to rummaging through a case of plastic-wrapped, preweighted meat.

The worn wood floors look as if many customers have belied up to the meat counter, but Kohl isn't sure how old the market is.

"We've got one old-timer who comes in about every day and shoots the breeze with me, and he can remember four or five owners," said Kohl.

Butchering is more of an art than a trade, according to Kohl. "I worked here about five years before I took over, and it took me about a year to learn enough about the business to butcher a beef."

No two carcasses are alike,

Kohl says, and each one must be attacked differently.

"About the worst thing that happens is when a customer orders a quarter or half of beef and wants a certain number of T-bones or steaks," Kohl said. "It's hard to explain that you can only get so many, depending on the carcass, no matter what size it is."

Crete Meats does some wholesale selling in town but relies mainly on over-the-counter trade and large sales to customers who have meat lockers in the store.

The lockers are kept at 15 to 20 degrees below zero, and Kohl spends most of his day going in and out of them.

"I suppose I wear a little lighter coat than most people do in the winter," he said, "but you can never get really used to being in that much cold."

Search Goes On for Pine Ridge Slayers

From News Wires
Ogala, S.D. — FBI agents Saturday spread their search for the ambush killers of two of their men to lands surrounding the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. A spokesman said the FBI had "no indication" that the Indians sought were on the reservation or off it.

About 25 additional agents were expected on the scene Sunday. About 175 agents will be pressing the search with the new arrivals.

The FBI revealed Saturday it has tentatively identified some suspects in the shooting deaths of two agents on the reservation and recovered a number of weapons from the house where the Indians fought a gun battle with other agents Thursday.

"We do have a pretty good indication of the identities of some of those people and are proceeding on that basis," said FBI spokesman Tom Coll.

Sixteen Indian men are being sought in the shooting deaths of Special Agents Ronald A. Williams and Jack R. Coler, both 28.

Coll said both slain agents will be buried Tuesday, Williams in Glendale, Calif., and Coler in Long Beach, Calif. He said FBI director Clarence M. Kelley will attend both funerals.

Coll said an unspecified number of automatic weapons and explosive devices, and a large amount of ammunition, were recovered from the house where the suspects fought an hours-long gun battle with federal agents following the gunning down of the two FBI agents.

Information Limited

Coll declined to say what types of automatic weapons were recovered and would offer no information about the nature of the explosive devices at a Saturday press conference in Pine Ridge.

One Indian, identified by the FBI as Joe Roberts, 20, of Ogala, also died in the exchange of gunfire. The FBI said he was wearing the coat of one of the dead agents when his body was found.

Coll said the main thrust of the search continues to be in the area where the gun battle occurred, but he said the investigation also is being actively pursued in areas off the reservation through coordination with local and state law enforcement agencies.

Although the FBI declined to speculate at a briefing as to the whereabouts of the men, reliable sources close to Indians living on the reservation said they are without doubt "long gone" from the area after making an escape from the shootout scene. These sources said they would have utilized residents friendly to them in making their getaway.

These sources pointed out that the killing was a planned operation, and that undoubtedly escape routes or means of escape had been organized before it occurred. One FBI agent Saturday expressed belief that the fugitives might not be in the state, and a Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) official expressed the same opinion.

At a briefing, agents said that there were two main exchanges of gunfire Thursday when Coler and Williams were shot repeatedly and stripped of weapons and identification.

Help Summoned

The first occurred when the two agents drove up to the house to serve the warrant, charging Jimmy Theodore Eagle, 20, with kidnapping and assault with a dangerous weapon. Help was summoned by radio by a third agent who was following them in another car.

After that, it was disclosed, a BIA agent tried to talk the Indians into a truce, but was unsuccessful. When other officers arrived, shooting began again and Roberts was believed to have been slain at that time. The FBI said he had a rifle, a pistol, and several boxes of ammunition beside him when he was found.

Fatigue-clad agents are using a light observation airplane and a helicopter in their search of the 2.7 million-acre reservation in southwestern South Dakota. They are armed with automatic weapons. Coll said two armored personnel carriers also were brought to the reservation to aid in the search.

by Kenneth Pruess with his entry "Natural History of Stamps." Pruess also won a national bronze award for his collection.

The only other Nebraska winner in the competition was Catherine Knight, who was awarded a bronze for "A World of Music."

The American Topical Assn. convention exhibit will be on display from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today at the Radisson Cornhusker Hotel.

A spokesman for the Wounded Knee Legal Defense Offense Committee and American Indian Movement (AIM) leader Russell Means have charged that the FBI provoked the shootings by killing an Indian.

A BIA official, who asked not to be identified, told the Associated Press that at least two negotiating sessions were held before the Indian occupants of the house near Ogala escaped.

The official said an unnamed woman lawyer spent nearly an hour trying to persuade the 16 men to allow eight women and children in the building, believed to be families of the men, to be removed from the area so they wouldn't be injured in the gun battle.

3 Dead

He said the two FBI agents and one Indian were already dead before the negotiations began.

The attorney was "frustrated and crying" after her attempt failed, said the official.

He said Pine Ridge Acting Supt. Kendall Cumming then entered the house unarmed in an attempt to negotiate with the Indians. His attempt also proved fruitless, said the official.

Several hours of gunfire followed the unsuccessful negotiations, said the official, before the occupants slipped away undetected, probably through a heavily-wooded area behind the house.

The BIA official said he felt the public should know about the negotiation attempts because "some people are picturing us as cold blooded killers." He also said federal agents were fired upon during the negotiations, but refused to return the fire.

The Pine Ridge Reservation has been the scene of much violence since the 71-day AIM occupation of Wounded Knee in 1973.

Prison Evaluation Center Hangs on Exon Decision

By Marj Marlette

It's down to the crunch. Bids on the new Corrections Dept. Diagnostic and Evaluation (D and E) Center — to be located in a renovated Regional Center building near the Yankee Hill neighborhood — are slated for July or early August.

The present Reception-Diagnostic Center (RDC) at the penitentiary is full and soon may be overflowing.

And the Penal Complex urgently needs those 30 psychiatric beds, plus the post-operative care unit, planned for the new D and E.

Faced with objections from Yankee Hill area residents to placing the prison facility on the regional mental health campus, Gov. J. J. Exon has a less-than-easy decision to make on whether to go ahead with project.

He's expected to decide early this week.

In addition to the pressing correctional need for the center, there's an urgent dollar sign to the decision.

The Legislature appropriated $2.4 million for the renovation job. To build a new institution instead would take an estimated $4.5 to $5 million and costs are going up.

Time is also a factor. It would probably take 18 months to two years longer, even if the Legislature promptly agreed to switch from the renovation they legislated to a new building.

Don Leuenberger of the Dept. of Administrative Services (DAS) budget office has been gathering information for the governor to help in the decision.

Reports from the Corrections Dept., Regional Center — where some doctors oppose the project — the capital facilities architect, and DAS are included, Leuenberger said.

Calling it "not a simple matter," he said that "one of the major problems is that the facilities right now (at the penitentiary) have no ability to differentiate between people who are dangerous and those who could be rehabilitated."

"The idea is to place people in appropriate programs. It is very difficult for the Dept. of Corrections to continue much longer without this ability."

The need for the specialized psychiatric and medical care unit is also a problem, he said.

On the other side, Leuenberger said, was the effect of the correctional facility on the adolescent unit at the Regional Center. The mental unit has been full for a couple of years.

The security building of the hospital is also full, and people are waiting in county jails to get in.

He said, however, that the Double Y Building, where D and E will be is probably too big to use in these hospital areas.

Neighborhood opposition to placing the correctional facility on the mental health campus developed in May.

Objectors, pointing to it as a potential security risk for the area and as having an adverse effect on property values, met with Gov. Exon, who said he could understand their concerns and would review the matter.

This week, State Sen. Jerome Warner, Waverly, said he favored an alternative site and Lincoln Sen. Steve Fowler said there was merit in re-evaluating the proposal. Both have constituents in the area.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Roland Luedtke, however, who has spearheaded penal reform legislation, said he would oppose any delay in opening the critically needed facility.

The proposed evaluation center will house 175 to 185 men and will be separated from surrounding areas by a security fence. D and E Director Gary Grammer said that the Double Y building will allow individual rooms and small groups, making it possible to segregate multiple from first

Man's Death Being Probed

Police are investigating the death of a 55-year-old white male whose body was found about 10:35 p.m. Saturday in an apartment building at 913 O St.

Lincoln Police Detective Ed Ragatz said preliminary investigation indicated the death resulted from natural causes.

The present RDC, meanwhile, is at capacity of 75, up from 40 a year ago.

All men sent to the Penal Complex must go to the penitentiary center, where the only separation available is by placing first offenders in one dormitory, multiple offenders in another. They must eat at the same dining room and use the same yard as penitentiary inmates, though at a different time.

D and E "definitely needs to be in a separate facility," Grammer said. "It has problems being at the penitentiary."

Auction
2 PM Sat. July 19
12 M.W. of LINCOLN
7 MI NE of CRETE on paved highway 439
"Hercules"
Hilltop House
Uncle Sam spent 2 million dollars providing this housing facility for a Nike-Hercules missile base. A 100 acre, 3,000 foot of 6 chain link fence surrounds one portion of this facility. Super abundance of deep well water, huge reservoir and sewage lagoon to accommodate 30 people. Two large one story masonry dormitories, administration building, shop with wood and metal working equipment, mess hall, dining room seating 60, 2 food mobile homes, paved streets, sidewalks, tennis court, soft ball diamond, street lights, outdoor kitchen equipment, furniture, church pews, piano, Jubilee Ford tractor, mower, disc, plow, blade, front loader, recreation and office equipment, riding lawn mower, push mower, many hand tools, washers and dryer and much, much more.
ALL OF THE ABOVE SELLING IN ONE PACKAGE TO THE HIGHEST BIDDER IN EXCESS OF $50,000.00. You can own this 17 acre town and use it in many different ways. A similar site is now Raymond Center High School. One such facility in Iowa is a school for the retarded. would be very profitable if used for rental housing. The total cost will probably be less than the cost of the auction. 15% down, July 19, balance September 5.

Stars & Stripes Are the Result As Needles Dart

Martha K. Wieden crochets another American flag.

Wymore — After a few score years and a few score afghans and scarves, the old crochet hook could start to dull.

The whole big should could even become pointless — but not so to Mrs. Martha K. Wieden. For this gal, it's up with the flag, boys!

That is the rousing cry this Fourth of July from the usually soft-spoken resident of Wymore's Good Samaritan Center. Even from her wheelchair, she does her country almost continual honor with her ever-darting hook.

Moving to the home only a couple of months ago, the former Odell resident was challenged to try her talented fingers on an American flag. When "everything came out proper" with 13 stripes and 50 stars, another seven flags came promptly marching forth.

"Since I began that first one, I haven't had time to work on anything but flags," chuckled the ever-smiling 71-year-old.

One flag went on the wall near the home's central nursing station. Others were gifts to the widow's three sons and one daughter, a daughter-in-law and friends.

Each of the 3-by-5-foot creations requires about two weeks, several skeins of yarn and a world of patience. The latter is a trait acquired since Mrs. Wieden, a diabetic, lost a leg by amputation some seven years ago.

Also contributing to her quiet acceptance of life's dealings were the 21 years since the loss of her well driller husband, William. Doses of inspiration come from frequent visits by her three children in the area, Loren of Odell, William of Wymore and Mrs. Mike Harlan of Odell. A third son, Melvin of Boulder, Colo., gets to drop by less frequently.

How many more flags?

"Well, let's count," said the woman as she hooked another hunk of star. "As of now there are two grandsons and 10 granddaughters in the family, but by the time I finish a flag for each of them . . . well, who knows?"

Recording Firms Promote Tours

By Robert Lindsey
(c) New York Times

Hollywood — After A&M Records recently signed the British rock group Supertramp to a recording contract, it arranged a 15-city American concert tour for the group and paid its bills for travel, hotels, meals, advertising, and other expenses.

CBS Records recently established a special organization to book its recording acts on college campuses in 13 northeastern states.

Whenever a less-than-frontline pop group appears at one of the country's leading rock music nightclubs these days, the odds are that, in one way or another, a record company has paid money to the club.

A change is occurring in the merchandising of popular music in this country, a result largely of an intensified scramble to sell records when the gilt-edged pop recording industry has lost some of its financial glitter.

Instead of merely recording music and distributing records, major record companies are moving into the live pop music business and, indirectly, gaining a measure of control over it through use of its financial resources.

Record companies are increasingly supplementing box-office receipts of concert tours by paying performers' expenses on the road, paying promoters and rock music nightclubs an inducement to give their artists exposure, and spending money in other ways that, not long ago, had nothing to do with the record industry.

Industry leaders maintain that they are more or less forced to use such techniques to promote their acts because most radio stations around the nation are playing fewer big hit records more often.

"Instead of the 'Top 40,' in the last three or four years, it's become more like the 'Top 14,'" complained an official of RCA Records.

"We've become like a full-service bank," said Jerry Moss, the president of A&M Records, who said he did not necessarily like the trend of record companies expanding the functions they perform because it means greater expenses when fewer records are being sold.

But, he said, such expenses have become a fact of life in the record business to provide

Yes Band At Pershing

One of the hottest rock bands to come out of London, Yes will perform at 8 p.m. Wednesday at Pershing Auditorium.

Starting as a pub band, this Atlantic recording group has become one of the few rock bands to weather the many musical changes. Yes released its first album in 1969 and met with great success in last year's Tales from Topographic Oceans. The single entitled How Long, recorded as part of the group's first album session, became a chart smash in England and No. 1 in the U.S.

This U.S. tour will be highlighted by material from the latest Yes album, Relayer.

Those who respect Ben Gazzara as an actor will find Capone, now showing at the Douglas 1, a disappointment indeed.

After his penetrating characterization of Erie Smith in the Chicago stageplay Hughie, I developed an enthusiastic theatrical love for his dramatic abilities (Of course, it may have helped that Eugene O'Neill wrote the script).

Capone writer Howard Browne takes all the gangland clichés and lumps them together: "... on the soul of my mother ..." "... I love him like the brother I never had" "... I used to dream about all this — champagne, a beautiful blonde and silk sheets. Now I got it all. Amazing!"

Or this: "To me, grand opera is the berries."

It's hard to believe Al Capone was one of those gangsters with a

Chicago gang lord Capone is cut out in the film to be fearless, heroic, and ever so moral when it came to women (strange about his terminal syphilitic condition).

The dialogue in Capone ranges from just screaming, through a police interrogation that sounds like it was conducted in an empty wind tunnel, to Gazzara uttering inane remarks with what might have been a mouth full of mush. Gazzara is a master of the facial and vocal affectation, but this particular also gives the impression you are hearing someone gargle.

The violence is rampant. Obviously crime of the period had this blood and guts flavor and that's the story. The dialogue is rough.

Capone emerges as big as life and that seems to be an unfortunate result, considering the number of killings masterminded by this brute. The gang wars are a chapter in American society that need not be romanticized or even depicting over and over.

It seems that in the case of Capone, director Steve Carver has strived for a picturesque type of violence and all it turns out to be is blataht violence.

Why Gazzara, Harry Guardino and John Cassevetes lend their names to such trash is beyond comprehension. R.

Any day is a perfect day to visit the happiest worlds on earth. Climb aboard wild, supercharged rides; catch all-new rousing reviews in our Moulin Rouge and Tivoli Music Hall; meet seven-foot furry Sam Panda, Dan'l Coon and Gertrude the lovable gorilla. See Captain Ben Everywhere's comical magic show.

More than 60 thrilling things to do for just one low Passport admission. Get in on all the exciting attractions for the equivalent of 62½¢ an hour. Worlds of Fun is the greatest entertainment value in the Midwest. And in July we have a lot of super-happy extras for you. All of them at no extra cost. All of them super values!

Here's your calendar of fun.

Superstars and Stripes Weekend July 4-6 (Friday-Sunday)

Superstar concerts and sky-blasting fireworks at no extra cost every night. And a super picnic for just $1.99 all three days: 3 pieces of crispy fried chicken, baked beans, roll and honey, ice cream and beverage all served in our spacious picnic area.

Bo Donaldson and The Heywoods... July 4

They'll play their big hits, including "Who Do You Think You Are?" and "Billy, Don't Be A Hero." Two big shows.

Free Large Cheese Pizza... July 7-11 (Monday-Friday)

With this coupon and two regular price Passport admissions. You'll love the way we serve our 14 inch cheese pizza—thick, savory and at no extra cost when you purchase two regular Passport admissions at Worlds of Fun.

Rick Nelson... July 5

He starred on the Ozzie and Harriet Show, then went on to record "Hello Mary Lou," "Travelin' Man," "Poor Little Fool," "BeeBop Baby," "It's Late," "Garden Party"... Don't miss this giant of rock 'n' roll in two live concerts.

Jose Feliciano... July 12 (Saturday)

Mix classical, jazz and pop guitar, add a totally unique vocal style and you have one of the most brilliant musical artists of our time. See and hear the exciting Jose Feliciano in two performances at no extra charge.

B.J. Thomas... July 6

His performances end with standing ovations... and begin with his big hits such as "Raindrops Keep Fallin' On My Head," "Hooked on a Feelin'" and "Somebody Done Somebody Wrong Song." Two crowd pleasing performances.

Doc Severinsen... July 19-20 (Saturday-Sunday)

He's the top band trumpeter in America. Be in our Forum amphitheater when the musical maestro of the Johnny Carson show strikes up the band. Two terrific shows at no extra cost.

Bobby Vinton... July 27 (Sunday)

"Blue On Blue," "Roses Are Red," "Blue Velvet," "Mr. Lonely," "There, I've Said It Again," "Sealed With A Kiss," "Please Love Me Forever," "My Melody Of Love." More #1 singles from '62-'73 than any other male artist. You'll get to see the charming Bobby Vinton in two shows at no extra charge in our Forum amphitheater.

Something happy is always happening.

Worlds of Fun is open every day all summer. 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and til midnight on Saturdays. Sky-blasting fireworks every Saturday night. Adults $7.50. Children under 12 $6.50 Children under 3 free.

Free Fried Chicken Dinner... July 28-August 1 (Monday-Friday)

Year's Programming The Bicentennial Has Only Just Begun

By Lee Margulies

Los Angeles (AP) — In case you missed anything during the first 200 years of the United States' existence, stay tuned to your television set. It's all coming back.

The founding fathers, the presidents, the 50 states, women, minorities, children, science, the Civil War, sports, humor, inventions, life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness — you name the subject and the three networks have a bicentennial angle on it.

And not just for prime-time specials, either. There will be plenty of bicentennial shows for children, for daytime viewers and for late night insomniacs.

NBC alone is producing more than 165 hours of bicentennial-related programs, and the five stations it owns are developing an additional 70 hours.

ABC also has announced massive bicentennial production plans, and CBS is expected to follow suit soon.

There have been a lot of bicentennial-related programs already. The informative and entertaining "Bicentennial Minutes" have been running nightly on CBS since last July 4 and will continue through July 4, 1976.

CBS has broadcast a series of specials on Benjamin Franklin, and NBC has done the same with Abraham Lincoln.

But they have been only appetizers. By comparison, what follows will be a feast. Or a gorging.

"We don't want to bore people with overkill; we do want to avoid that," says Elmer Lower, the executive who is coordinating ABC's numerous bicentennial projects.

"And I think we will," he adds, "because the projects are being spaced out over 18 months. I suspect that when you'll feel it the most is July 4, 1976."

"I think on that day people may think they can't turn anywhere on their dial without getting Bicentennial."

Certainly you won't be able to turn to NBC for relief on that day. It plans unprecedented, 24-hour coverage of special events commemorating America's 200th birthday.

Entertainment segments and portions of sports contests will be interspersed with live coverage from around the country, running from midnight to midnight.

The heavy bicentennial programming begins Fri., July 4, when NBC's "Tomorrow" show opens the day with a six-hour binge.

The program running from the time "The Tonight Show" ends until "Today" begins, will feature host Tom Snyder interviewing a succession of guests about how the bicentennial relates to their field of expertise. These will be interspersed with "man-in-the-street" interviews around the country. Then "Today" 53 shows devoted to the bicentennial.

Every Friday until Independence Day next year, the show will address itself to an in-depth look at one of the states, plus the cities of Washington and Philadelphia.

The first installment will deal with the nation's capital. After that, the 50 states will be saluted, generally in reverse order of their admission to the Union, beginning with Hawaii and concluding with each of the 13 original colonies.

Among the specials planned are:

—Overviews of American achievements in science and sports on ABC.

—A two-hour look by NBC at the impact that inventions by Americans have had on the country and the world.

—Three 90-minute documentaries from NBC News examining the concepts of "Life," "Liberty" and "The Pursuit of Happiness" as embodied in the Declaration of Independence.

The latter trio of programs will be reworked for presentation to children.

Also for the kids, NBC is producing 13 half-hour programs for its "GO-USA" series on Saturday morning. They are about young people who played important roles in American history. And ABC will devote most of its Sunday morning "Make a Wish" series to

Another Independence Day

KUON and the Nebraska ETV Network will repeat its "Monster Concert," the music of ten grand pianos and 20 pianists at 11 a.m. and 9 p.m. Friday as part of its July 4 programming.

A different kind of Independence Day is celebrated when Fiesta del Valle is broadcast at 1:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Friday. More than 250 Mexican-American families in Scottsbluff commemorate Sept. 16 as the day on which Mexico declared independence from Spain. This celebration was filmed by the ETV Network public affairs unit in 1973. Interpretative dances and colorful costumes demonstrate the pride these citizens have in their culture and heritage.

From the Statue of Liberty to Marilyn Monroe, monuments come in all shapes and forms, according to writer-host Stephen Koch on Monuments, which airs at 10:30 p.m. Friday.

The ETV Network ends the holiday at 11:30 p.m. with Thomas A. Edison: The Old Man, a biographical documentary that illustrates the colleagues bestowed this affectionate title on the inventor.

On the dramatic side, ABC is making television films about Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt, and about Pocahontas. NBC will offer three more installments of "Sandburg's Lincoln" and also has scheduled dramatizations of George Washing at Valley Forge, the Lincoln-Douglas debates and the historic meeting at Potsdam of President Harry Truman, Winston Churchill and Josef Stalin.

Why are the networks hitting the bicentennial theme so hard?

"We see it as an opportunity to re-examine the American dream," says James E. Duffy, president of ABC Television.

"I think it's something we need right now — something uniting us together after recent problems in Washington and with the economy," says Robert T. Howard, NBC Television president.

But will today's problems and the country's shortcomings of years past be glossed over in a flurry of glorifying the United States?

"A lot of it will be flag waving," says Howard, "but a lot of it will not be.

"And I think we should do it.

After all, what do you do at a birthday party? You get up and you have a good time. I hope a lot of our programs will do that. But others will deal with the problems confronting America."
